

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

THE present volume of St. Chrysostom on the Acts of the Apostles has been delayed for some time by the difficulty of fixing the Text. Some farther account of the grounds on which this has been done will be given in the Preface, which is reserved for the next volume. It may suffice for the present to say, that these Homilies appear to have been less carefully reported than usual, and published without a revision by the Author. The printed text was formed for the most part (Erasmus's Latin Version entirely) from a manuscript, said to be of the tenth century, in which these Homilies are given in a very different form, evidently the work of a later hand, and intended to make them read more smoothly. The earlier text, shewn to be such by internal evidence, and alone followed in the Catena and all other ancient extracts and compilations, is preserved in other MSS. and appears to have been in general disregarded by former editors, from its difficulty. The Translation was originally made from Savile's Text, by the Rev. J. WALKER, M.A. of Brasenose College, and the Rev. J. SHEPPARD, M.A. of Oriel College, Oxford. The Editors are much indebted to the Rev. H. BROWNE, M.A. of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, who has restored the Text and corrected the Translation accordingly, the difference being frequently so great as to require a passage to be translated anew. He has likewise undertaken to prepare the Greek Text for publication, and to supply the prefatory matter. Many passages will still be found imperfect and unsatisfactory, but it has been thought better to leave them evidently so, than to resort to uncertain conjectures. A few conjectural emendations, however, have been admitted into the Text, and many more suggested. It is hoped that the remainder of the work may be published without much delay, and that the Greek Text may follow it. The last volume of the Homilies on St. John may be expected also before the end of the present year, and probably the conclusion of the Homilies on St. Matthew.

A COMMENTARY

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES,

BY

S. JOHN CHRYSOSTOM,

ARCHBISHOP OF CONSTANTINOPLE.<sup>a</sup>

HOMILY I.

ACTS i. 1, 2.

The former treatise have I made, O Theophilus, concerning all things which Jesus began both to do and to teach, until the day on which, having given charge to the Apostles, whom He had chosen, by the Holy Spirit, He was taken up.

To many persons this Book is so little known, both it and its author, that they are not even aware that there is such a book in existence<sup>b</sup>. For this reason especially I have taken

<sup>a</sup> These Sermons were preached at Constantinople, in the second or third year of S. Chrysostom's archiepiscopate: see Hom. xlv. p. 336. "Lo, by the grace of God, we also have been by the space of three years, not indeed night and day exhorting you, but often every third, or at least every seventh, day doing this." It appears from Hom. i. that the course began during the weeks of Easter: at which season the Book of Acts was by long established practice read in other Churches,

(as at Antioch and in Africa) if not at Constantinople. See S. Chrys. Hom. "Cur in Pentecoste Acta legantur," and S. August. Tr. in Joann. vi. 18.

<sup>b</sup> S. Chrys. had made the same complaint at Antioch in the Homilies (A.D. 387.) "in Principium Actorum, &c." t. iii. p. 54. "We are about to set before you a strange and new dish . . . strange, I say, and not strange. Not strange; for it belongs to the order of Holy Scripture: and yet strange; because peradventure your.

HOMIL. this narrative for my subject, that I may draw to it such as do
I. not know it, and not let such a treasure as this remain hidden out of sight. For indeed it may profit us no less than even the Gospels; so replete is it with Christian wisdom and sound doctrine, especially in what is said concerning the Holy Ghost. Then let us not hastily pass by it, but examine it closely. Thus, the predictions which in the Gospels Christ utters, here we may see these actually come to pass; and note in the very facts the bright evidence of Truth which shines in them, and the mighty change which is taking place in the disciples now that the Spirit has come
John 14, upon them. For example, they heard Christ say, Whoso 12. believeth on Me, the works that I do shall he do also, and greater works than these shall he do: and again, when He
Mat. 10, foretold to the disciples, that they should be brought before 18. rulers and kings, and in their synagogues they should scourge them, and that they should suffer grievous things, and over-
Id. 24, come all: and that the Gospel should be preached in all the 14. world: now all this, how it came to pass exactly as it was said, may be seen in this Book, and more besides, which He told them while yet with them. Here again you will see the Apostles themselves, speeding their way as on wings over land and sea; and those same men, once so timorous and void of understanding, on the sudden become quite other than they were; men despising wealth, and raised above glory and passion and concupiscence, and in short all such affections: moreover, what unanimity there is among them now: no where any envying as there was before, nor any of the old hankering after the preeminence, but all virtue brought in them to its last finish, and shining through all, with surpassing lustre, that charity, concerning which
John 13, the Lord had given so many charges, saying, In this shall 35. all men know that ye are My disciples, if ye love one another. And then, besides, there are doctrines to be found here, ears are not accustomed to such a subject. Certainly, there are many to whom this Book is not even known: (πολλοῖς γοῦν τὸ βιβλίον τοῦτο οὐδὲ γινώσκουσιν ἔστι) and many again think it so plain, that they slight it: thus to some men their knowledge, to some their ignorance, is the cause of their neglect. . . . . We are to enquire then who wrote it, and when, and on what subject: and why it is ordered (νερομωθένται) to be read at this festival. For peradventure you do not hear this Book read [at other times] from year's end to year's end."

which we could not have known so surely as we now do, <sup>Acts</sup> if this Book had not existed, but the very crowning point of I. 1, 2. our salvation would be hidden, alike for practice of life and for doctrine.

The greater part, however, of this work is occupied with the acts of Paul, who laboured more abundantly than they <sup>1 Cor. 15, 10.</sup> all. And the reason is, that the author of this Book, that is, the blessed Luke, was his companion: a man, whose high qualities, sufficiently visible in many other instances, are especially shewn in his firm adherence to his Teacher, whom he constantly followed. Thus at a time when all had forsaken him, one gone into Galatia, another into Dalmatia, <sup>2 Tim. 4, 10.</sup> hear what he says of this disciple: Only Luke is with me. And giving the Corinthians a charge concerning him, he says, Whose praise is in the Gospel throughout all the <sup>2 Cor. 8, 18.</sup> Churches. Again, when he says, He was seen of Cephas, <sup>1 Cor. 15, 5. 1.</sup> then of the twelve, and, according to the Gospel which ye received, he means the Gospel of this Luke. So that there can be no mistake in attributing this work to him: and when I say, to him, I mean, to Christ. And why then did he not relate every thing, seeing he was with Paul to the end? We may answer, that what is here written, was sufficient for those who would attend, and that the sacred writers ever addressed themselves to the matter of immediate importance, whatever it might be at the time: it was no object with them to be writers of books: in fact, there are many things which they have delivered by unwritten tradition. Now while all that is contained in this Book is worthy of admiration, so is especially the way the Apostles have of coming down to the wants of their hearers: a condescension suggested by the Spirit Which has so ordered it, that the subject on which they chiefly dwell is that which pertains to Christ as Man. For so it is, that while they discoursed so much about Christ, they have spoken but little concerning His Godhead: it was mostly of the Manhood that they discoursed, and of the Passion, and the Resurrection, and the Ascension. For the thing required in the first instance was this, that it should

Hom. in Princip. Act. p. 54. "First let us reject it; for, Call no man master we must see who wrote the Book... upon earth: but if God, let us receive whether a man, or God: and if man, it."

HOMIL. be believed that He was risen, and ascended into heaven.

1. As then the point on which Christ Himself most insisted was, to have it known that He was come from the Father, so is it this writer's principal object to declare, that Christ was risen from the dead, and was received up into Heaven, and that He went to God, and came from God. For, if the fact of His coming from God were not first believed, much more, with the Resurrection and Ascension added thereto, would the Jews have found the entire doctrine incredible. Wherefore gently and by degrees he leads them on to Acts 17, higher truths. Nay, at Athens Paul even calls Him Man simply, without saying more. For if, when Christ Himself spoke of His equality with the Father, they often attempted to stone Him, and called Him a blasphemer for this reason, it was little to be expected that they would receive this doctrine from the fishermen, and that too, with the Cross coming before it.

[2.] But why speak of the Jews, seeing that even the disciples often upon hearing the more sublime doctrines were troubled John 16, and offended? Therefore also He told them, I have many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now. If those could not, who had been so long time with Him, and had been admitted to so many secrets, and had seen so many wonders, how was it to be expected that men, but newly dragged away from altars, and idols, and sacrifices, and cats, and crocodiles, (for such did the Gentiles worship,) and from the rest of their evil ways, should all at once receive the more sublime matters of doctrine? And how in particular should Jews, hearing as they did every day of their lives, and having it ever sounded in their ears, Deut. 6, Lord thy God is one Lord, and beside Him is none other : 4. who also had seen Him hanging nailed on the Cross, nay, had themselves crucified and buried Him, and not seen Him even risen: when they were told that this same person was God and equal with the Father, how should they, of all men, be otherwise than shocked and revolted? Therefore it is that gently and little by little they carry them on, with much consideration and forbearance letting themselves down to their low attainments, themselves the while enjoying in more plentiful measure the grace of the Spirit, and doing greater works in Christ's name than Christ Himself did, <sup>Acts I. 1, 2.</sup> that they may at once raise them up from their grovelling <sup>Homil.</sup> apprehensions, and confirm the saying, that Christ was <sup>12, 3.</sup> raised from the dead. For this, in fact, is just what this Book is: a Demonstration of the Resurrection<sup>d</sup>: this being once believed, the rest would come in due course. The subject then and entire scope of this Book, in the main, is just what I have said. And now let us hear the Preface itself.

The former treatise have I made, O Theophilus, of all <sup>v. 1.</sup> that Jesus began both to do and to teach. Why does he put him in mind of the Gospel? To intimate how strictly he may be depended upon. For at the outset of the former work he says, It seemed good to me also, having had perfect <sup>Luke 1,</sup> understanding of all things from the very first, to write <sup>3.</sup> unto thee in order. Neither is he content with his own testimony, but refers the whole matter to the Apostles, saying, Even as they delivered them unto us, which from <sup>Luke 1,</sup> the beginning were eyewitnesses and ministers of the word. <sup>2.</sup> Having then accredited his account in the former instance, he has no need to put forth his credentials afresh for this treatise, seeing his disciple has been once for all satisfied, and by the mention of that former work he has reminded him of the strict reliance to be placed in him for the truth. For if a person has shewn himself competent and trustworthy to write of things which he has heard, and moreover has obtained our confidence, much more will he have a right to our confidence when he has composed an account, not of things which he has received from others, but of things which he has seen and heard. For thou didst receive what relates to Christ; much more wilt thou receive what concerns the Apostles.

What then, (it may be asked,) is it a question only of history, with which the Holy Spirit has nothing to do? Not so. For, if those delivered it unto us, who from the beginning were eyewitnesses and ministers of the word; then, what he says, is theirs. And why did he not say, 'As they who

HOMIL. were counted worthy of the Holy Spirit delivered them unto
 I. us;’ but Those who were eyewitnesses? Because, in matter of belief, the very thing that gives one a right to be believed, is the having learned from eyewitnesses: whereas the other appears to foolish persons mere parade and pretension.

John 1, And therefore John also speaks thus: I saw, and bare
 34. record that this is the Son of God. And Christ expresses Himself in the same way to Nicodemus, while he was dull

Id. 3, 11. of apprehension, We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen; and no one receiveth our witness.

Accordingly, He gave them leave to rest their testimony in many particulars on the fact of their having seen them,

John 15, when He said, And do ye bear witness concerning Me,
 27. because ye have been with Me from the beginning. The Apostles themselves also often speak in a similar manner;

Acts 2, We are witnesses, and the Holy Spirit which God hath
 32. given to those that obey Him; and on a subsequent occasion,

Acts 10, Peter, still giving assurance of the Resurrection, said, Seeing 41. we did eat and drink with Him. For they more readily received the testimony of persons who had been His companions, because the notion of the Spirit was as yet very much beyond them. Therefore John also at that time, in his Gospel, speaking of the blood and water, said, he himself saw it, making the fact of his having seen it equivalent, for them, to the highest testimony, although the witness of the Spirit is more certain than the evidence of sight, but not so with unbelievers. Now that Luke was a partaker of the Spirit, is abundantly clear, both from the miracles which even now take place; and from the fact that in those times even ordinary persons were gifted with the Holy Ghost; and

2 Cor. 8, again from the testimony of Paul, in these words, Whose
 18. praise is in the Gospel; and from the appointment to which he was chosen: for having said this, the Apostle adds, But also appointed of the Churches to travel with us with this grace which is administered by us.

[3.] Now mark how unassuming he is. He does not say, The former Gospel which I preached, but, The former treatise have I made; accounting the title of Gospel to be too great for him; although it is on the score of this that the Apostle dignifies him: Whose praise, he says, is in the Gospel. But he himself modestly says, The former treatise Acts I. 1, 2. have I made—O Theophilus, of all that Jesus began both to do and to teach: not simply of all, but from the beginning to the end; until the day, he says, in which He was taken up. And yet John says, that it was not possible to write all: for were they written, I suppose, says he, that even the world John 21, itself could not contain the books written. How then does <sup>25</sup> the Evangelist here say, Of all? He does not say ‘all,’ but of all; as much as to say, ‘in a summary way, and in the gross;’ and ‘of all that is mainly and pressingly important.’ Then he tells us in what sense he says all, when he adds, Which Jesus began both to do and to teach; meaning, His miracles and teaching; and not only so, but implying that His doing was also a teaching.

But now consider the benevolent and Apostolical feelings of the writer: that for the sake of a single individual he took such pains as to write for him an entire Gospel. That Luke 1, thou mightest have, he says, the certainty of those things, <sup>4</sup> wherein thou hast been instructed. In truth, he had heard Christ say, It is not the will of My Father that one of these Mat. 18, little ones should perish. And why did he not make one <sup>14</sup> book of it, to send to one man Theophilus, but has divided it into two subjects? For clearness, and to give the brother a pause for rest. Besides, the two treatises are distinct in their subject-matter.

But consider how Christ accredited his words by His deeds. Thus He saith, Learn of Me, for I am meek and Ib. 11, lowly in heart. He taught men to be poor*, and exhibited <sup>29</sup> this by His actions: For the Son of Man, He says, hath Ib. 8, 20. not where to lay His head. Again, He charged men to love their enemies; and He taught the same lesson on the Cross, when He prayed for those who were crucifying Him. He said, If any man will sue thee at the law, and take away Ib. 5, 40. thy coat, let him have thy cloke also: now He not only gave His garments, but even His blood. In this way He bade others teach. Wherefore Paul also said, So as ye have us Philip. 3, 17.

* Ms. C. has οκλήμονας, merciful; the rest, ἀκτήμονας, without possessions, which is certainly the true reading. Thus in the Sermon de futuræ Vitæ deliciis, where Chrys. discourses largely on the harmony of Christ's teaching and actions, he says, Πάλιν ἀκτῆ-μοσύνην παιδεύων, ὅρα πῶς διὰ τῶν ἔργων αὐτὴν ἐπιδείκνυνται, λέγων, Αἱ ἀλώμενες, κ. τ. λ.

HOMIL. for an ensample. For nothing is more frigid than a teacher
 I. — who shews his philosophy only in words: this is to act the part not of a teacher, but of a hypocrite. Therefore the Apostles first taught by their conduct, and then by their words; nay rather they had no need of words, when their deeds spoke so loud. Nor is it wrong to speak of Christ's Passion as action, for in suffering all He performed that great and wonderful act, by which He destroyed death, and effected all else that He did for us.

v. 2. Until the day in which He was taken up, after that He, through the Holy Spirit, had given commandments unto the Apostles whom He had chosen. After He had given commandments through the Spirit; i. e. they were spiritual words that He spake unto them, nothing human; either this is the meaning, or, that it was by the Spirit that He gave them commandments. Do you observe in what low terms he still speaks of Christ, as in fact Christ had spoken of

Mat. 12, Himself? But if I by the Spirit of God cast out devils; for indeed the Holy Ghost wrought in that Temple. Well,

Ib. 28, what did He command? Go ye therefore, He says, make
 19. 20. disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you. A high encomium this for the Apostles; to have such a charge entrusted to them, I mean, the salvation of the world! words full of the Spirit! And this the writer hints at

John 6, in the expression, through the Holy Ghost; (and, the words 63. which I spake unto you, saith the Lord, are Spirit;) thus leading the hearer on to a desire of learning what the commands were, and establishing the authority of the Apostles, seeing it is the words of the Spirit they are about to speak, and the commandments of Christ. After He had given commandments, he says, He was taken up. He does not say, 'ascended;' he still speaks as concerning a man. It appears then that He also taught the Disciples after His resurrection, but of this space of time no one has related to us the whole in detail. St. John indeed, as also does the present writer, dwells at greater length on this subject than the others; but none has clearly related every thing, (for they hastened to something else;) however, we have learnt these things through the Apostles, for what they heard, that did they tell. To whom also He shewed Himself alive. Having first spoken of the Ascension, he adverts to the Resurrection; for since thou hast been told that He was taken up, therefore, lest thou shouldest suppose Him to have been taken up by others', he adds, To whom He shewed Himself alive. For if He shewed Himself in the greater, surely He did in the minor circumstance. Seest thou, how casually and unperceived he drops by the way the seeds of these great doctrines? [4.]

Being seen of them during forty days. He was not always with them now, as He was before the Resurrection. For the writer does not say "forty days," but, during forty days. He came, and again disappeared: by this leading them on to higher conceptions, and no longer permitting them to stand affected towards Him in the same way as before, but taking effectual measures to secure both these objects, that the fact of His Resurrection should be believed, and that He Himself should be ever after apprehended to be greater than man. At the same time, these were two opposite things; for in order to the belief in His Resurrection, much was to be done of a human character, and for the other object, just the reverse. Nevertheless, both results have been effected, each when the fitting time arrived.

But why did He appear not to all, but to the Apostles only? Because to the many it would have seemed a mere apparition, inasmuch as they understood not the secret of the mystery. For if the disciples themselves were at first incredulous and were troubled, and needed the evidence of actual touch with the hand, and of His eating with them, how would it have fared in all likelihood with the multitude? For this reason therefore by the miracles [wrought by the Apostles] He renders the evidence of His Resurrection unequivocal, so that not only the men of those times—this is what would come of the ocular proof—but also all men thereafter, should be certain of the fact, that He was risen. Upon this ground also we argue with unbelievers. For if He did not rise again, but remains dead, how did the Apostles perform

HOMIL. miracles in His name? But they did not, say you, perform
I. miracles? How then was our religion<sup>1</sup> instituted? For <sup>1</sup> θεος. this certainly they will not controvert nor impugn what we see with our eyes: so that when they say that no miracles took place, they inflict a worse stab<sup>a</sup> upon themselves. For this would be the greatest of miracles, that without any miracles, the whole world should have eagerly come to be taken in the nets of twelve poor and illiterate men. For not by wealth of money, not by wisdom of words, not by any thing else of this kind, did the fishermen prevail; so that objectors must even against their will acknowledge that there was in these men a Divine power, for no human strength could ever possibly effect such great results. For this He then remained forty days on earth, furnishing in this length of time the sure evidence of their seeing Him in His own proper Person, that they might not suppose that what they saw was a phantom. And not content with this, He added also the evidence of eating with them at their board: as to signify
v. 4. this, the writer adds, And being at table<sup>b</sup> with them, He commanded. And this circumstance the Apostles themselves always put forth as an infallible token of the Resurrection; Acts 10, as where they say, Who did eat and drink with Him.

41. And what did He, when appearing unto them those forty days? Why, He conversed with them, says the writer,
v. 3. concerning the kingdom of God. For, since the disciples both had been distressed and troubled at the things which already had taken place, and were about to go forth to encounter great difficulties, He recovered them by His discourses concerning the future. He commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father. First, He led them out to Galilee, afraid and trembling, in order that they might listen to His words in security. Afterwards, when they had heard, and <sup>Acts</sup> had passed forty days with Him, He commanded them I. 3, 4. that they should not depart from Jerusalem. Wherefore? Just as when soldiers are to charge a multitude, no one thinks of letting them issue forth until they have armed themselves, or as horses are not suffered to start from the barriers until they have got their charioteer; so Christ did not suffer these to appear in the field before the descent of the Spirit, that they might not be in a condition to be easily defeated and taken captive by the many. Nor was this the only reason, but also there were many in Jerusalem who should believe. And then again that it might not be said, that leaving their own acquaintance, they had gone to make a parade among strangers, therefore among those very men who had put Christ to death do they exhibit the proofs of His Resurrection, among those who had crucified and buried Him, in the very town in which the iniquitous deed had been perpetrated; thereby stopping the mouths of all foreign objectors. For when those even who had crucified Him appear as believers, clearly this proved both the fact of the crucifixion and the iniquity of the deed, and afforded a mighty evidence of the Resurrection. Furthermore, lest the Apostles should say, How shall it be possible for us to live among wicked and bloody men, they so many in number, we so few and contemptible, observe how He does away their fear and distress, by these words, But wait for the promise of the Father, which ye have heard v. 4. of Me. You will say, When had they heard this? When He said, It is expedient for you that I go away; for if I go not John 16, away, the Comforter will not come unto you. And again, <sup>7.</sup> And again, id. 14, I will pray the Father, and He shall send you another 16. Comforter, that He may abide with you.

But why did the Holy Ghost come to them, not while [5.] Christ was present, nor even immediately after His departure, but, whereas Christ ascended on the fortieth day, the Spirit descended when the day of Pentecost, that is, the fiftieth, <sup>Acts 2,</sup> was fully come? And how was it, if the Spirit had not yet <sup>1.</sup> come, that He said, Receive ye the Holy Ghost? In order <sup>John 20,</sup> to render them capable and meet for the reception of Him. <sup>23.</sup> For if Daniel fainted at the sight of an Angel, much more <sup>Dan. 8,</sup> <sup>17.</sup>

HOMIL. would these when about to receive so great a grace. Either

I. this then is to be said, or else that Christ spoke of what was Luke 10, to come, as if come already ; as when He said, Tread ye 19. upon serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the devil. But why had the Holy Ghost not yet come ? It was fit that they should first be brought to have a longing desire for that event, and so receive the grace. For this reason Christ Himself departed, and then the Spirit descended.
 For had He Himself been there, they would not have expected the Spirit so earnestly as they did. On this account neither did He come immediately after Christ's Ascension, but after eight or nine days. It is the same with us also : for our desires towards God are then most raised, when we stand in need. Accordingly, John chose that time to send his disciples to Christ when they were likely to feel their need of Jesus, during his own imprisonment. Besides, it was fit that our nature should be seen in heaven, and that the reconciliation should be perfected, and then the Spirit should come, and the joy should be unalloyed. For, if the Spirit being already come, Christ had then departed, and the Spirit remained ; the consolation would not have been so great as it was. For in fact they clung to Him, and could not bear to part with Him ; wherefore also to comfort them He said,

John 16, It is expedient for you that I go away. On this account 7. He also waits during those intermediate days, that they might first despond for a while, and be made, as I said, to feel their need of Him, and then reap a full and unalloyed delight. But if the Spirit were inferior to the Son, the consolation would not have been adequate ; and how could He have said, It is expedient for you ? For this reason the greater matters of teaching were reserved for the Spirit, that the disciples might not imagine Him inferior.

Consider also how necessary He made it for them to abide in Jerusalem, by promising that the Spirit should be granted there. For lest they should again flee away after His Ascension, by this expectation, as by a bond, He keeps them
 v. 4, 5. to that spot. But having said, Wait for the promise of the Father, which ye have heard of Me, He then adds, For John truly baptized with water, but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence. For now indeed He gives them to see the difference there was betwixt Him and John, plainly, and not as heretofore in obscure hints: for in fact He had spoken very obscurely, when He said, Notwithstanding, he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he: but now He says plainly, John baptized with water, but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost. And He no longer uses the testimony, but merely adverts to the person, of John, reminding the disciples of what he had said, and shews them that they are now become greater than John: seeing they too are to baptize with the Spirit. Again, He did not say, I baptize you with the Holy Ghost, but, Ye shall be baptized: teaching us humility. For this was plain enough from the testimony of John, that it was Christ Himself Who should baptize: He it is that shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire; wherefore also He made mention of John<sup>1</sup>.

The Gospels, then, are a history of what Christ did and said; but the Acts, of what that other Comforter said and did. Not but that the Spirit did many things in the Gospels also; even as Christ here in the Acts still works in men as He did in the Gospels: only then the Spirit wrought through the Temple, now through the Apostles: then, He came into the Virgin's womb, and fashioned the Temple; now, into Apostolic souls: then, in the likeness of a dove; now, in the likeness of fire. And wherefore? Shewing there the gentleness of the Lord, but here His taking vengeance also, He now puts them in mind of the judgment likewise. For, when need was to forgive, need was there of much gentleness; but now we have obtained the gift, it is henceforth a time for judgment and examination.

But why does Christ say, Ye shall be baptized, when in fact there was no water in the upper room? Because the more essential part of Baptism is the Spirit, through Whom indeed the water has its operation; in the same manner our Lord also is said to be anointed, not that He had ever been anointed with oil, but because He had received the Spirit. Besides, we do in fact find them receiving a baptism with water [and a baptism with the Spirit], and these at different

<sup>1</sup> So Mss. C. F. D. and the Catena. (John) alone," not of his testimony. The others have μόνον αὐτοῦ, "of him

HOMIL. moments. In our case both take place under one act, but I. then they were divided. For in the beginning they were baptized by John; since, if harlots and publicans went to that baptism, much rather would they who thereafter were to be baptized by the Holy Ghost. Then, that the Apostles might not say, that they were always having it held out to them in promises, (for indeed Christ had already discoursed much to them concerning the Spirit, that they should not imagine It to be an impersonal Energy or Operation<sup>1</sup>), that they might not say this, then, He adds, not many days hence. And He did not explain when, that they might always watch: but, that it would soon take place, He told them, that they might not faint; yet the exact time He refrained from adding, that they might always be vigilant.
 Nor does He assure them by this alone; I mean, by the shortness of the time, but withal by saying, The promise which ye have heard of Me. For this is not, saith He, the only time I have told you, but already I have promised what I shall certainly perform. What wonder then that He does not signify the day of the final consummation, when this day which was so near He did not choose to reveal? And with good reason; to the end they may be ever wakeful, and in a state of expectation and earnest heed.

[6.] For it cannot, it cannot be, that a man should enjoy the benefit of grace except he watch. Seest thou not what 2 Kings Elias saith to his disciple? If thou see me when I am taken 2, 10. up, this that thou askest shall be done for thee. Christ also was ever wont to say unto those that came unto Him, Believest thou? For if we be not appropriated and made over to the thing given<sup>2</sup>, neither do we greatly feel the benefit. So it was also in the case of Paul; grace did not come to him immediately, but three days intervened, during which he was blind; purified the while, and prepared by fear. For as those who dye the purple first season with other ingredients the cloth that is to receive the dye, that

first takes order that the soul shall be thoroughly in earnest, Acts I. 5. and then pours forth His grace. On this account also, neither did He immediately send the Spirit, but on the fiftieth day. Now if any one ask, why we also do not baptize at that season of Pentecost? we may answer, that grace is the same now as then<sup>m</sup>; but the mind becomes more elevated now, by being prepared through fasting. And the season too of Pentecost furnishes a not unlikely reason. What may that be? Our fathers held Baptism to be just the proper curb upon evil concupiscence, and a powerful lesson for teaching to be sober-minded even in a time of delights.

As if then we were banquetting with Christ Himself, and partaking of His table, let us do nothing at random, but let us pass our time in fastings, and prayers, and much sobriety of mind. For if a man who is destined to enter upon some temporal government, prepares himself all his life long, and that he may obtain some dignity, lays out his money, spends his time, and submits to endless troubles; what shall we deserve, who draw near to the kingdom of heaven with such negligence, and both shew no earnestness before we have received, and after having received are again negligent? Nay, this is the very reason why we are negligent after having received, that we did not watch before we had received. Therefore many, after they have received, immediately have returned to their former vomit, and have become more wicked, and drawn upon themselves a more severe punishment; when having been delivered from their former sins, herein they have more grievously provoked the Judge, that having been delivered from so great in respect of this season of the fifty days, the time of the Church's great festivity. The Baptism newly received would restrain the neophytes from giving loose to carnal lusts; having prepared them to keep the feast with a holy and awful gladness.' It should be borne in mind, that these Homilies were commenced during the Πεντηκοστή, i. e. the period of fifty days between Easter and Pentecost: at which season the Book of Acts was usually read in the Churches.

HOM. 11. a disease, still they did not learn sobriety, but that has hap-
 I. pened unto them, which Christ threatened to the paralytic John 5, man, saying, Behold thou art made whole: sin no more,
 14. lest a worse thing come unto thee: and which He also
 Mat. 12, predicted of the Jews, that the last state shall be worse
 45. than the first. For if, saith He, shewing that by their ingratitude they should bring upon them the worst of evils, John 15, if I had not come, and spoken unto them, they had not
 22. had sin; so that the guilt of sins committed after these benefits is doubled and quadrupled, in that, after the honour put upon us, we shew ourselves ungrateful and wicked. And the Laver of Baptism helps not a whit to procure for us a milder punishment. And consider: a man has gotten grievous sins by committing murder or adultery, or some other crime: these were remitted through Baptism. For there is no sin, no impiety, which does not yield and give place to this gift; for the Grace is Divine. A man has again committed adultery and murder; the former adultery is indeed done away, the murder forgiven, and not brought Rom. up again to his charge, for the gifts and calling of God 11, 29. are without repentance; but for those committed after Baptism he suffers a punishment as great as he would if both the former sins were brought up again, and many worse than those. For the guilt is no longer simply equal, but doubled and tripled. Look: in proof that the penalty Heb. 10, of these sins is greater, hear what St. Paul says: He that 28. 29. despised Moses' law died without mercy, under two or three witnesses: of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace?

Perhaps we have now deterred many from receiving baptism. Not however with this intention have we so spoken, but on purpose that having received it, they may continue in temperance and much moderation. 'But I am afraid,' says one. If thou wert afraid, thou wouldest have received and guarded it. 'Nay,' saith he, 'but this is the very reason why I do not receive it,—that I am frightened.' And art thou not afraid to depart thus? 'God is merciful,' saith he.

Receive baptism then, because He is merciful and ready to help. But thou, where to be in earnest is the thing required, dost not allege this mercifulness; thou thinkest of this only where thou hast a mind to do so. And yet that was the time to resort to God's mercy, and we shall then be surest of obtaining it, when we do our part. For he that has cast the whole matter upon God, and, after his baptism, sins, as being man it is likely he may, and repents, shall obtain mercy; whereas he that prevaricates with God's mercy, and departs this life with no portion in that grace, shall have his punishment without a word to be said for him. 'But how if he depart,' say you, 'after having had the grace vouchsafed to him?' He will depart empty again of all good works<sup>a</sup>. For it is impossible, yes, it is in my opinion impossible, that the man who upon such hopes dallied with baptism should have effected ought generous and good. And why dost thou harbour such fear, and presume upon the uncertain chance of the future? Why not convert this fear into labour and earnestness, and thou shalt be great and admirable? Which is best, to fear or to labour? Suppose some one to have placed thee, having nothing to do, in a tottering house, saying, Look for the decaying roof to fall upon thy head: for perhaps it will fall, perhaps not; but if thou hadst rather it should not, then work and inhabit the more secure apartment: which wouldest thou have rather chosen, that idle condition accompanied with fear, or this labour with confidence? Why then, act now in the same way. For the uncertain future is like a decayed house, ever threatening to fall; but this work, laborious though it be, ensures safety.

Now God forbid that it should happen to us to fall [7.] into so great straits as to sin after Baptism. However, even if ought such should happen, God is merciful, and has given

<sup>a</sup> τί οὖν ἂν καταξιώθεις φησιν ἀπελεύσεται πάλιν κενὸς κατορθωμάτων, Cod. C. and so A, but with ἀπελεύσῃ. In the later recension this sentence is omitted, and instead of it, we have, τί δὲ ταῦτα κατὰ τῆς σεαυτοῦ σωτηρίας προβάλλῃ; 'But why dost thou put forth such pretences against thine own salvation?' Chrys. had just said, ἀπελθὼν ἕμοιρος τῆς χάριτος ἀπαιράτητον ἔχει τὴν τιμωρίαν. The objector (with the usual prevaricating formula, τί οὖν ἔάν τὸ καὶ τό; Hom. in Matt. 229 D.) says: τί οὖν ἂν καταξιώθεις, sc. τῆς χάριτος ἀπέλθῃ; to which Chrys. answers: 'Ἀπελεύσεται πάλιν κενὸς κατορθωμάτων: He will depart as empty of good works as he was before his baptism: adding, For it is, I think, utterly impossible that such an one [though he should live ever so long after baptism] would have wrought out his own salvation.

HOMIL. us many ways of obtaining remission even after this. But I. just as those who sin after Baptism are punished for this reason more severely than the Catechumens, so again, those who know that there are medicines in repentance, and yet will not make use of them, will undergo a more grievous chastisement. For by how much the mercy of God is enlarged, by so much does the punishment increase, if we do not duly profit by that mercy. What sayest thou, O man? When thou wast full of such grievous evils, and given over, suddenly thou becamest a friend, and wast exalted to the highest honour, not by labours of thine own, but by the gift of God: thou didst again return to thy former misconduct; and though thou didst deserve to be sorely punished, nevertheless, God did not turn away, but gave unnumbered opportunities of salvation, whereby thou mayest yet become a friend: yet for all this, thou hast not the will to labour. What forgiveness canst thou deserve henceforth? Will not the Gentiles with good reason deride thee as a worthless drone? For if there be power in that doctrine of yours, say they, what means this multitude of uninitiated persons? If the mysteries be excellent and desirable, let none receive baptism at his last gasp. For that is not the time for giving of mysteries, but for making of wills; the time for mysteries is in health of mind and soundness of soul. For, if a man would not prefer to make his will in such a condition; and if he does so make it, he gives a handle for subsequent litigation, (and this is the reason why testators premise these words: "Alive, in my senses, and in health, I make this disposal of my property:") how should it be possible for a person who is no longer master of his senses to go through the right course of preparation for the sacred mysteries? For if in the affairs of this life, the laws of the world would not permit a man who was not perfectly sound in mind to make a will, although it be in his own affairs that he would lay down the law; how, when thou art receiving instruction concerning the kingdom of heaven, and the unspeakable riches of that world, shall it be possible for thee to learn all clearly, when very likely too thou art beside thyself through the violence of thy malady ? And when wilt thou say those words* to Christ, in the act of being buried with Him when at the point to depart hence ? For indeed both by works and by words must we shew our good will towards Him. Now what thou art doing is all one, as if a man should want to be enlisted as a soldier, when the war is just about to break up ; or to strip for the contest in the arena, just when the spectators have risen from their seats. For thou hast thine arms given thee, not that thou shouldest straightway depart hence, but that being equipped therewith, thou mayest raise a trophy over the enemy. Let no one think that it is out of season to discourse on this subject, because it is not Lent now. Nay, this it is that vexes me, that ye look to a set time in such matters. Whereas that Eunuch, barbarian as he was and on a journey, yea on the very highway, yet did not seek for a set time ; no, nor the Gaoler, though he was in the midst of a set of prisoners, and the teacher he saw before him was a man scourged and in chains, and whom he was still to have in his custody. But here, not being inmates of a gaol, nor out on a journey, many are putting off their baptism even to their last breath.

Now if thou still questionest that Christ is God, stand away from the Church : be not here, even as a hearer of the Divine Word, and as one of the catechumens† : but if thou art sure of this, and knowest clearly this truth, why delay ? why shrink back and hesitate ? For fear, say you, lest I should sin. But dost thou not fear what is worse, to depart for the next world with such a heavy burden ? For it is not equally excusable, not to have gotten a grace set before you, and to have failed in attempting to live uprightly. If thou be called to account, Why didst thou not come for it ? what * Τὰ ἑνὸς ἐκείνου : i. e. not (as Ben. seems to interpret) "Buried with Christ;" as if this were part of the form of words put into the mouth of the person to be baptized: but the words, "I renounce thee, O Satan, and all thy angels, and all thy service, and all thy pomp: and I enlist myself with Thee, O Christ." S. Chrysost. Serm. ad pop. Antioch. xxi. p. 244. The words, "buried with Him," serve to shew more clearly the absurdity of such delay: 'we are "buried with Christ in His death," that we may rise again to newness of life, not that we should pass at once from the spiritual burial to the literal.'

† The catechumens were allowed to be present at the first part of the service (Missa catechumenorum); and were dismissed after the Sermon, before the proper Prayers of the Church, or Missa Fidelium.

HOMIL. wilt thou answer? In the other case thou mayest allege the
 I. — burden of thy passions, and the difficulty of a virtuous life: but nothing of the kind here. For here is grace, freely conveying liberty. But thou fearest lest thou shouldest sin? Let this be thy language after Baptism: and then entertain this fear, in order to hold fast the liberty thou hast received; not now, to prevent thy receiving such a gift. Whereas now thou art wary before baptism, and negligent after it. But thou art waiting for Lent: and why? Has that season any advantage? Nay, it was not at the Passover that the Apostles received<sup>r</sup> the grace, but at another season; and
 ch. 2, 41. then three thousand, (Luke says,) and five thousand were 4, 4. baptized: and again Cornelius. Let us then not wait for and ch. a set time, lest by hesitating and putting off we depart 10. empty, and destitute of so great gifts. What do you suppose is my anguish when I hear that any person has been taken away unbaptized, while I reflect upon the intolerable punishments of that life, the inexorable doom! Again, how I am grieved to behold others drawing near to their last gasp, and not brought to their right mind even then. Hence too it is that scenes take place quite unworthy of this gift. For whereas there ought to be joy, and dancing, and exultation, and wearing of garlands, when another is christened; the wife of the sick man has no sooner heard that the physician has ordered this, than she is overcome with grief, as if it were some dire calamity; she sets up the greatest lamentation, and nothing is heard all over the house but crying and wailing, just as it is when condemned criminals are led away to their doom. The sick man again is then more sorely grieved; and if he recovers from his illness, is as vexed as if some great harm had been done to him. For since he had not been prepared for a virtuous life, he has no heart for the conflicts which are to follow, and shrinks at the thought of them. Do you see what devices the devil contrives, what shame, what ridicule? Let us rid ourselves of this disgrace; let us live as Christ has enjoined. He gave us Baptism, not that we should receive and depart, but that we should shew the fruits of it in our after life. How can one say to him who is departing and broken down, Bear fruit? Hast thou not <sup>Acts</sup> heard that the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace? How <sup>I. 5.</sup> comes it then that the very contrary takes place here? For <sup>Gal. 5,</sup> 22. the wife stands there mourning, when she ought to rejoice; the children weeping, when they ought to be glad together; the sick man himself lies there in darkness, and surrounded by noise and tumult, when he ought to be keeping high festival; full of exceeding despondency at the thought of leaving his children orphans, his wife a widow, his house desolate. Is this a state in which to draw near unto mysteries? answer me; is this a state in which to approach the sacred table? Are such scenes to be tolerated? Should the Emperor send letters and release the prisoners in the gaols, there is joy and gladness: God sends down the Holy Ghost from Heaven to remit not arrears of money, but a whole mass of sins, and do ye all bewail and lament? Why, how grossly unsuitable is this! Not to mention that sometimes it is upon the dead that the water has been poured, and holy mysteries flung upon the ground. However, not we are to blame for this, but men who are so perverse. I exhort you then to leave all, and turn and draw near to Baptism with all alacrity, that having given proof of great earnestness at this present time, we may obtain confidence for that which is to come; whereunto that we may attain, may it be granted unto us all by the grace and mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ, to Whom be glory and power for ever and ever. Amen.

HOMILY II.

ACTS I. 6.

When they therefore were come together, they asked of Him, saying, Lord, wilt Thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?

WHEN the disciples intend to ask any thing, they approach Him together, that by dint of numbers they may abash Him into compliance. They well knew that in what He had said Mat. 24, 36. previously, Of that day knoweth no man, He had merely declined telling them: therefore they again draw near, and put the question. They would not have put it had they been truly satisfied with that answer. For having heard that they were about to receive the Holy Ghost, they, as being now worthy of instruction, desired to learn. Also they were quite ready for freedom: for they had no mind to address themselves to danger; what they wished was to breathe freely again; for they were no light matters that had happened to them, but the utmost peril had impended over them. And without saying any thing to Him of the Holy Ghost, they put this question: Lord, wilt Thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel? They did not ask, when? but whether at this time. So eager were they for that day. Indeed, to me it appears that they had not any clear notion of the nature of that kingdom; for the Spirit had not yet instructed them. And they do not say, When shall these things be? but they approach Him with greater honour, saying, Wilt Thou at this time restore again the kingdom, as being now already fallen. For there they were still affected towards sensible objects, seeing they were not yet become better than those who were before them: here they have henceforth high conceptions concerning Christ. Since then their minds are elevated, He also speaks to them in a higher strain. For He no longer tells them, Of that day not even the Son of Man knoweth; but He says, It is not for you to know the times or the seasons which the Father hath put in His own power. Ye ask things greater than your capacity, He would say. And yet even now they learned things that were much greater than this. And that you may see that this is strictly the case, look how many things I shall enumerate. What, I pray you, was greater than their having learned what they did learn? Thus, they learned that there is a Son of God, and that God has a Son equal with Himself in dignity; they learned that there will be a resurrection; that when He ascended He sat on the right hand of God; and what is still more stupendous, that Flesh is seated in heaven, and adored by Angels, and that He will come again: they learned what is to take place in the judgment: learned that they shall then sit and judge the twelve tribes of Israel; learned that the Jews would be cast out, and in their stead the Gentiles should come in. For, tell me, which is greater? to learn that a person will reign, or to learn the time when? Paul learned things which it is not lawful for a man to utter; things that were before the world was made, he learned them all. Which is the more difficult, the beginning or the end? Clearly to learn the beginning. This, Moses learned, and the time when, and how long ago: and he enumerates the years. And* the wise Solomon saith, I will make mention of things from the beginning of the world. And that the time is at hand, they do know: as Paul saith, The Lord is at hand, be careful for nothing. These things they knew not [then], and yet He mentions many signs. But, as He has just said, Not many days hence, wishing them to be vigilant, and did not openly declare the precise moment, so is it here also. However, it is not about the general Consummation that they now ask Him, but, Wilt Thou at this time, say they, restore the kingdom to Israel?

* Cod. C. omits this sentence here, is evidently out of place. The passage and inserts it below, (p. 24.) where it referred to seems to be Eccclus. 51, 8.

HOMIL. And not even this did He reveal to them. They also asked II. this [about the end of the world] before: and as on that occasion He answered by leading them away from thinking that their deliverance was near, and, on the contrary, cast them into the midst of perils, so likewise on this occasion, but more mildly. For, that they may not imagine themselves to be wronged, and these things to be mere pretences, hear what He says; He immediately gives them that at

Acts 1, 8. which they rejoiced: for He adds: But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto Me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judæa, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth. Then, that they may make no more enquiries, straightway He was received up. Thus, just as on the former occasion He had darkened their minds by awe, and by saying, I know not; here also He does so by being taken up. For great was their eagerness on the subject, and they would not have desisted; and yet it was very necessary that they should not learn this. For tell me<sup>b</sup>, which do the Gentiles most disbelieve? that there will be a consummation of the world, or that God is become man, and issued from the Virgin?<sup>c</sup> But I am ashamed of dwelling on this point, as if it were about some difficult matter. Then again, that the disciples might not say, Why dost thou leave the matter in suspense? He adds, Which the Father hath put in His own power. And yet He declared the Father's power and John 5, 21. His to be one: as in the saying, For as the Father raiseth up the dead and quickeneth them, even so the Son quickeneth whom He will. If where need is to work, Thou actest with the same power as the Father; where it behoves to know, dost Thou not know with the same power? Yet certainly to raise up the dead is much greater than to learn the day. If the greater be with power, much more the other.

[2.] But just as when we see a child crying, and pertinaciously wishing to get something from us that is not expedient for him, we hide the thing, and shew him our empty hands, and say, "See, we have it not:" the like has Christ here done with the Apostles. But as the child, even when we shew<sup>d</sup> him [our empty hands], persists with his crying, conscious he has been deceived, and then we leave him, and depart, saying, "Such an one calls me:" and we give him something else instead, in order to divert him from his desire, telling him it is a much finer thing than the other, and then hasten away; in like manner Christ acted. The disciples asked to have something, and He said He had it not. And on the first occasion He frightened them. Then again they asked to have it now: He said He had it not; and He did not frighten them now, but after having shewn<sup>e</sup> [the empty hands], He has done this, and gives them a plausible reason<sup>f</sup>: Which the Father, He says, hath put in His own power. What? Thou not know the things of the Father! Thou knowest Him, and not what belongs to Him! And yet Thou hast said, None knoweth the Father but the Son; and, The Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God; and Thou not know this! But they feared to ask Him again, lest they should hear Him say, Are ye also without understanding? For they feared Him now much more than before. But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you. As in the former instance He had not answered their question, (for it is the part of a teacher to teach not what the disciple chooses, but what is expedient

Luke 10, 25.
1 Cor.
2, 10.
Mat. 15,
26.

<sup>f</sup> Chrys. therefore explains these sayings of our Lord (polemically against the Arians) as οἰκονομία: i. e. the thing said is not objectively true, but the morality of all actions depends on the subjective condition of the προαίρεσις, or purpose, (παρὰ τὴν τῶν χρωμένων προαίρεσιν γίγνεται φαῦλον ἢ καλόν, de Sacerdot. i. 8.) so that where this is right and good, a deception is lawful. This lax view of the morality of Truth was very general in the Greek Church: not so in the early Latin Church. See the two Treatises of S. Augustine, De Mendacio, ('Lib. of Fathers,' Seventeen Short Treatises of S. Aug.) The stricter doctrine however is maintained by S. Basil, who in his shorter Monastic Rule peremptorily condemns all οἰκονομία, and pious fraud (officiosum mendacium) of every description, on the ground that all falsehood is from Satan, John 5, 44. and that our Lord has made no distinction between one sort of lying and another. Again, the monk Johannes of Lycopolis in Egypt: "All falsehood is foreign from Christ and Christian men, be it in a small or in a great matter: yea, though a good end be served by it, it is never to be allowed, for the Saviour hath declared, that all lying is from the Wicked One." Pallad. Hist. Lausiaca. Bibl. Patr. t. xiii. p. 965.

HOMIL. for him to learn;) so in this, He tells them beforehand, for 11. this reason, what they ought to know, that they may not be troubled. In truth, they were yet weak. But to inspire them with confidence, He raised up their souls, and concealed what was grievous. Since He was about to leave them very shortly, therefore in this discourse He says nothing painful. But how? He extols as great the things which would be painful: all but saying, "Fear not: for ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto Me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judæa, and in Samaria." For since
 Mat. 10, He had said, Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and
 5. into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not, what there He left unsaid, He here adds, And to the uttermost part of the earth; and having spoken this, which was more fearful than all the rest, then that they may not again
 v. 9. question Him, He held His peace. And having this said, while they beheld, He was taken up; and a cloud received Him out of their sight. Seest thou that they did preach and fulfil the Gospel? For great was the gift He had bestowed on them. In the very place, He says, where ye are afraid, that is, in Jerusalem, there preach ye first, and afterwards unto the uttermost part of the earth. Then for assurance of what He had said, While they beheld, He was taken up. Not while they beheld did He rise from the dead, but while they beheld, He was taken up. Inasmuch, however, as the sight of their eyes even here was not all-sufficient; for in the Resurrection they saw the end, but not the beginning, and in the Ascension they saw the beginning, but not the end: because in the former it had been superfluous to have seen the beginning, the Lord Himself Who spake these things being present, and the sepulchre shewing clearly that He is not there; but in the latter, they needed to be informed of the sequel by word of others: inasmuch then as their eyes do not suffice to shew them the height above, nor to inform them whether He is actually gone up into heaven, or only seemingly into heaven, see then what follows. That it was Jesus Himself they knew from the fact that He had been conversing with them, (for had they seen only from a distance, they could not have recognised Him by sight<sup>6</sup>;) but that He is taken up into <sup>Acts</sup> Heaven the Angels themselves inform them. Observe how <sup>1.10,11.</sup> it is ordered, that not all is done by the Spirit, but the eyes also do their part. But why did a cloud receive Him? This too was a sure sign that He went up to Heaven. Not fire, as in the case of Elijah, nor fiery chariot, but a cloud received Him; which was a symbol of Heaven, as the Prophet says<sup>7</sup>; Who maketh the clouds His chariot; it is Ps. 104, of the Father Himself that this is said. Therefore he says,<sup>3</sup> "on a cloud;" in the symbol, he would say, of the Divine power, for no other Power is seen to appear on a cloud. For hear again what another Prophet says: The Lord sitteth <sup>Is. 19, 1.</sup> upon a light cloud. For<sup>1</sup> it was while they were listening with great attention to what He was saying, and this in answer to a very interesting question, and with their minds fully aroused and quite awake, that this thing took place. Also on the mount [Sinai] the cloud was because of Him: since Moses also entered into the darkness, but the cloud there was not because of Moses. And He did not merely say, "I go," lest they should again grieve, but He said, <sup>John 16,</sup> "I send the Spirit;" and that He was going away into <sup>5. 7.</sup> heaven they saw with their eyes. O what a sight they were granted! And while they looked stedfastly, it is said, <sup>v. 10. 11.</sup> toward heaven, as He went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel; which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven—they used the expression "This" demonstratively, saying, this Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall thus—demonstratively, "in this way"—come, in like manner as ye have seen Him going into heaven. Again, the outward appearance is cheering:

Ἐ Πόρρωθεν γὰρ οὐκ ἔνῃν ἰδόντας γινώσκουσι: i. e. had they but seen the Ascension from a distance, and not been conversing with the Lord at the moment of His Assumption. Cod. E. transposes the clause to the end of the sentence; meaning that they could not by mere sight have been cognisant of the fact of His ascension into heaven.

sentence were out of place here. But the connexion may be thus explained: this circumstance, of the cloud, is not idle, but very significant; and the minds of the disciples were alive to its import, as betokening His Godhead. True, might it not also be said of Moses on the mount Sinai, that a cloud received him out of their sight? For "Moses entered into the darkness," Exod. xx. 21. But the cloud there was because of Him, "where God was," not because of Moses.

HOMIL. [in white apparel.] They were Angels, in the form of men.

II. And they say, Ye men of Galilee: they shewed themselves to be trusted by the disciples, by saying, Ye men of Galilee. For this was the meaning: else, what needed they to be told of their country, who knew it well enough? By their appearance also they attracted their regard, and shewed that they were from heaven. But wherefore does not Christ Himself tell them these things, instead of the Angels? He had John 6, beforehand told them all things; [What if ye shall see the 62. Son of Man] going up where He was before?

Moreover the Angels did not say, "whom you have seen taken up," but, going into heaven: ascension is the word, not assumption; the expression "taken up," belongs to the flesh. For the same reason they say, He which is taken up from you shall thus come, not, "shall be sent," but, shall Eph. 4, come. He that ascended, the same is He also that descended. 10.

So again the expression, a cloud received Him: for He Himself mounted upon the cloud. Of the expressions, some are adapted to the conceptions of the disciples, some agreeable with the Divine Majesty. Now, as they behold, their conceptions are elevated: He has given them no slight hint of the nature of His second coming. For this, Shall thus come, means, with the body; which thing they desired to hear; and, that He shall come again to judgment thus upon a cloud. And, behold, two men stood by them. Why is it said, men? Because they had fashioned themselves completely as such, that the beholders might not be overpowered. Which also said: their words moreover were calculated for soothing: Why stand ye gazing up into heaven? They would not let them any longer wait there for Him. Here again, these tell what is greater, and leave the less unsaid. That He will thus come, they say, and that "ye must look for Him from heaven." For the rest, they called them off from that spectacle to their saying, that they might not, because they could not see Him, imagine that He was not ascended, but

J i. e. the Angels had before used the phrase of assumption: but this does not express the whole matter: therefore, to shew that it is the act of His own Divine power, they now say, going, and afterwards express it that He will come, not that He will be sent. He ascended, as He descended, by His own Divine power. So again it is said, "A cloud received Him:" but in this He was not passive: as God He stepped upon the cloud: ἔπλεθ, alluding to the expression in the Psalm above cited, τίθεις τὴν ἐπὶ βασιαν.

even while they are conversing, would be present ere they were aware. For if they said on a former occasion, Whither goest Thou? much more would they have said it now<sup>k</sup>. Acts
I. 10, 11.
John 13,

Wilt Thou at this time, say they, restore the kingdom to Israel? They so well knew His mildness, that after His Passion also they ask Him, Wilt thou restore? And yet He had before said to them, Ye shall hear of wars and rumours of wars, but the end is not yet, nor shall Jerusalem be taken. But now they ask Him about the kingdom, not about the end. And besides, He does not speak at great length with them after the Resurrection. They address then this question, as thinking that they themselves would be in high honour, if this should come to pass. But He, (for as touching this restoration, that it was not to be, He did not openly declare; for what needed they to learn this? hence they do not again ask, What is the sign of Thy coming, and of the end of the world? for they are afraid to say that: but, Wilt Thou restore the kingdom to Israel? for they thought there was such a kingdom,) but He, I say, both in parables had shewn that the time was not near, and here where they asked, and He answered thereto, Ye shall receive power, says He, when the Holy Ghost is come upon you. Is come upon you, not, is sent, [to shew the Spirit's coequal Majesty. How then darest thou, O opponent of the Spirit, to call Him a creature<sup>l</sup>?] And ye shall be witnesses to Me. He hinted at the Ascension. [And when He had spoken these things<sup>m</sup>.] Which they had heard before, and He now reminds them of. [He was taken up.] Already it has been shewn, that He went up into heaven. [And a cloud etc.] Clouds and darkness are under His feet, saith the Scripture: for this is declared by the expression, And a cloud received Him: the Lord of heaven, it means. For as a king is shewn by X

<sup>k</sup> All the Editions and the Latin Versions connect with this the following sentence: "Much more would they have said now, Dost Thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel?" But it is evident, that at this point begins the recapitulation, or renewed exposition. It is in fact a peculiarity of these Discourses, that Chrys. having gone through the exposition of the text, often, as here, goes over the same ground again, usually with some such formula as, "But let us look through what has been said from the beginning."

HOMIL. the royal chariot, so was the royal chariot sent for Him.

II. [Behold, two men etc.] That they may vent no sorrowful exclamations, and that it might not be with them as it was with Elisha, who, when his master was taken up, rent his mantle. And what say they? This Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall thus come. And, Behold, two men stood by them. With good reason: for in the mouth of two witnesses shall every word be established: and these utter the same things. And it is said, that they were in white apparel. In the same manner as they had already seen an Angel at the sepulchre, who had even told them their own thoughts; so here also an Angel is the preacher of His Ascension; although indeed the Prophets had frequently foretold it, as well as the Resurrection*.

[4.] Every where it is Angels: as at the Nativity, for that which is conceived in her, saith one, is by the Holy Ghost: and again to Mary, Fear not, Mary. And at the Resurrection: He is not here; He is risen, and goeth before you. Come, and see! And at the Second Coming. For that they may not be utterly in amaze, therefore it is added, Shall thus come. They recover their breath a little; if indeed He shall come again, if also thus come, and not be unapproachable! And that expression also, that it is from them He is taken up, is not idly added. And of the Resurrection indeed Christ Himself bears witness; (because of all things this is, next to the Nativity, nay even above the Nativity, the most wonderful: His raising Himself to life again:) for, Destroy, He says, this Temple, and in three days I will raise it up. Shall thus come, say they. If any therefore desires to see Christ; if any grieves that he has not seen Him: having this heard, let him shew forth an admirable life, and certainly he shall see Him, and shall not be disappointed. For Christ will come with greater * Here Erasmus has followed another reading (of E.), the very reverse in sense: "And if indeed the Prophets did not foretell this, be not astonished, for it was superfluous to say any thing individually about this, being necessarily involved in the idea of the resurrection, (τῇ ἀναστάσει συνρουμένης.)"

• In the later recension it is added: "but is declaratory of His love towards them, and of their election, and that He will not leave those whom He has chosen."

glory, though thus, in this manner, with a body; and much more wondrous will it be, to see Him descending from <sup>X</sup>Acers I. 10, 11. heaven. But for what He will come, they do not add.

[Shall thus come, etc.] This is a confirmation of the Resurrection; for if He was taken up with a body, much rather must He have risen again with a body. Where are those who disbelieve the Resurrection? Who are they, I pray? Are they Gentiles, or Christians? for I am ignorant. But no, I know well: they are Gentiles, who also disbelieve the work of Creation. For the two denials go together: the denial that God creates any thing from nothing, and the denial that He raises up what has been buried. But then, being ashamed to be thought such as know not the power of God, that we may not impute this to them, they allege: We do not say it with this meaning, but because there is no need of the body. Truly it may be seasonably said, The fool will speak foolishness. Are you not ashamed not to grant, that God can create from nothing? If He creates from matter already existing, wherein does He differ from men? But whence, you demand, are evils? Though you should not know whence, ought you for that to introduce another evil in the knowledge of evils? Hereupon two absurdities follow. For if you do not grant, that from things which are not, God made the things which are, much more shall you be ignorant whence are evils: and then, again, you introduce another evil, the affirming that Evil<sup>1</sup> is uncreated. Consider now what a thing it is, when you wish to find the source of evils, to be both ignorant of it, and to add another to it. Search after the origin of evils, and do not blaspheme God. And how do I blaspheme? says he. When you make out that evils have a power equal to God's; a power uncreated. For, observe what Paul says; For the invisible things of Him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made. But the devil would have both to be of matter, that there may be nothing left from which we may come to the knowledge of God. For tell me, whether is harder: to<sup>1</sup> take <sup>1</sup> The text in both classes of manuscripts, and in the Edd., needs reformation. The argument is, If good and evil be, as the Manicheans say, both self-subsistent, then evil must subsist for ever. For if, as they affirm, HOMIL. that which is by nature evil, (if indeed there be ought such ; II. — for I speak upon your principles, since there is no such thing as evil by nature,) and make it either good, or even coefficient of good? or, to make of nothing? Whether is easier, (I speak of quality;) to induce the non-existent quality; or to take the existing quality, and change it into its contrary? where there is no house, to make the house; or where it is utterly destroyed, to make it identically exist again? Why, as this is impossible, so is that: to make a [5.] thing into its opposite. Tell me, whether is harder; to make a perfume, or to make filth have the effect of perfume? Say, whether of these is easier; (since we subject God to our reasonings; nay, not we, but ye;) to form eyes, or to make a blind man to see, continuing blind, and yet more sharp-sighted than one who does see? to make blindness into sight, and deafness into hearing? To me the other seems easier. Say then, do you grant God that which is harder, and not grant the easier? But souls also they affirm to be of His substance. Do you see what a number of impieties and absurdities are here! In the first place, wishing to shew that evils are from God, they bring in another thing more impious than this, that they are equal with Him in majesty, and God prior in existence to none of them, assigning this great prerogative even to them! In the next place, they affirm evil to be indestructible: for if that which is uncreated can be destroyed, ye see the blasphemy! So that it comes to this, either' that nothing is of God, if not these; or that these are God! Thirdly, what I have before spoken of, in this point they defeat themselves, and prepare against themselves fresh indignation. Fourthly,

God cannot create out of nothing, neither can He change a thing into its opposite; nay, much less, for this is harder than that. In E. (the text of the Edd.) the reading is, τὸ φύσει κακὸν καλὸν ποιῆσαι (εἰ γε τί ἐστι· καὶ ὑμᾶς γὰρ λέγω· φύσει γὰρ οὐδὲν ἔστι ποιῆσαι κακὸν καλοῦ συνεργόν) ἢ τὸ ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων: which as usual in this Ms. is an attempt to explain the meaning, but is not what the context requires: in C. A. (the original text,) τὸ φύσει κακὸν ποιῆσαι (εἰ γε τί ἐστι· καὶ ὑμᾶς γὰρ λέγω· φύσει γὰρ οὐδὲν ἔστι ποιῆσαι κακὸν ἢ καλὸν καὶ καλοῦ συνεργόν) ἢ τὸ [οὐκ. A.] ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων. Read, τὸ φύσει κακὸν (εἰ γε τί ἐστι· καὶ ὑμᾶς γὰρ λέγω· φύσει γὰρ οὐδὲν ἔστι κακὸν) ποιῆσαι ἢ καλὸν ἢ καλοῦ συνεργόν.

<sup>1</sup> "Ὡστε ἀνάγκη ἢ μηδὲν τοῦ Θεοῦ εἶναι εἰ μὴ ταῦτα· ἢ καὶ Θεὸν εἶναι. For so it seems the passage should be read, for which the Mss. have ἢ εἰ μὴ ταῦτα, and then in the older text, ἢ καὶ Θεὸν εἶναι, for which the modern recension, D. E. F. and Edd. have ἢ καὶ Θεὸν μὴ εἶναι.

they affirm unordered matter to possess such inherent<sup>1</sup> power. Fifthly, that evil is the cause of the goodness of God, and that without this the Good had not been good. Sixthly, they bar against us the ways of attaining unto the knowledge of God. Seventhly, they bring God down into men, yea plants and logs. For if our soul be of the substance of God, but the process of its transmigration into new bodies brings it at last into cucumbers, and melons, and onions, why then the substance of God will pass into cucumbers! And if we say, that the Holy Ghost fashioned the Temple [of our Lord's Body] in the Virgin, they laugh us to scorn: and if, that He dwelt in that spiritual Temple, again they laugh; while they themselves are not ashamed to bring down God's substance into cucumbers, and melons, and flies, and caterpillars, and asses, thus excogitating a new fashion of idolatry: for let it not be as the Egyptians have it, "The onion is God;" but let it be, "God in the onion"! Why dost thou shrink from the notion of God's entering into a body? 'It is shocking,' says he. Why then this is much more shocking. But', forsooth, it is not <sup>1</sup> τὴν ἐνσωμάτωσιν τοῦ Θεοῦ. Edd. μετενσωμάτωσιν. But the Manichees affirmed a μετενσωμάτωσις of the particle of the Divine Substance, the human soul; viz. the more polluted soul transmigrates into other men, and animals, (Archelai et Manet. Disput. §. ix. Routh, Rel. Sacc. iv. 161.) but in the last stage of the process of its purgation, into vegetable substances less attached to the earth by roots, such as gourds, &c. in which the Divine particle is self-conscious and intelligent, (see the following note,) whereas in animal substances it is brutified. In this sense it is said above, ἡ μετενσ. ἐκβαίνει εἰς σικύους κ. τ. λ. What they denied was, an ἐνσωμάτωσις Θεοῦ by Incarnation.

shocking, [how should it not be so in God?] The exclamation, Εἴθετε σὺν-φερὸν ἀσεβείας! seems to imply either that ὄντως αἰσχρόν is part of the Manichean's reply, or that something is omitted. Perhaps the reporter wrote, τὸ δὲ σ. ὄντως αἰσχρόν, meaning σῶμα: "But the body, &c." Ἄν εἰς ἡμᾶς γένηται can hardly be, as taken by Erasmi, quod si nobis contingat, i. e. that our substance should migrate into plants, &c. but rather, if it be into us that this (embodying of the Divine Substance) takes place. For illustration of the Manichean tenets here alluded to, comp. Euod. de Fid. adv. Manich. § 35. (Opp. S. Augustin. Append. t. viii. Ben.) Non Deus Manichei luctum pateretur de partis suæ abscissione vel amissione; quam partem dicunt quum in fructibus vel in herbis fuerit, id est, in melone, vel beta, vel taliibus rebus, et principium suum et medietatem et finem nosse, cum autem ad carnem venerit omnem intelligentiam amittere; ut propterea magister hominibus missus sit, quia stulta in illis facta est pars Dei, etc. "Then the God of the Manichees would not suffer grief in consequence of the cut-so, if it be into us! ‘But thy notion is indeed shocking.’ Do ye see the filthiness of their impiety?—But why do they not wish the body to be raised? And why do they say the body is evil? By what then, tell me, dost thou know God? by what hast thou the knowledge of existing things? The philosopher too: by means of what is he a philosopher, if the body does nothing towards it? Deadened the senses, and then learn something of the things one needs to know! What would be more foolish than a soul, if from the first it had the senses deadened? If the deadening of but a single part, I mean of the brain, becomes a marring of it altogether; if all the rest should be deadened, what would it be good for? Shew me a soul without a body. Do you not hear physicians say, The presence of disease sadly enfeebles the soul? How long will ye put off hanging yourselves? Is the body material? tell me. “To be sure, it is.” Then you ought to hate it. Why do you feed, why cherish it? You ought to get quit of this prison. But besides: “God cannot overcome matter, unless he<sup>1</sup> implicate himself with it: for he cannot issue orders to it, (O feebleness!) until he close<sup>2</sup> with it, and<sup>3</sup> take his stand (say you) through the whole of it!” And a king indeed does all by commanding; but God, not by commanding the evil! In short, if it were unparticipant of all good, it could not subsist at all. For Evil cannot subsist, unless it lay hold upon somewhat of the accidents of Virtue: so that if it had been heretofore all unmixed with virtue, it would have perished long ago: for such is the condition of evils. Let there be a profligate man, let him put upon himself no restraint whatever, will he live ten days? Let there be a robber, and devoid of all conscience in his dealings with every one, let him be such even to his fellow-robbers, will he be able to live? Let there be a thief, void of all shame, who knows not what blushing is, but steals openly in public. It is not in the nature of evils to subsist, unless they get some small

ACTS i. 12.

Then returned they unto Jerusalem from the mount called Olivet, which is from Jerusalem a sabbath day's journey.

- [1.] THEN returned they, it is said: namely, when they had heard. For they could not have borne it, if the angel had not<sup>1</sup> referred them to another Coming. It seems to me, that it was also on a sabbath-day<sup>a</sup> that these things took place; for he would not thus have specified the distance, saying, from the mount called Olivet, which is from Jerusalem a sabbath day's journey, unless they were then going on the sabbath-day a certain definite distance. And when they were come in, it says, they went up into an upper room, where they were making their abode: so then they remained in Jerusalem after the Resurrection: both Peter, and James, and John: no longer is only the latter together with his brother mentioned<sup>b</sup>, but together with Peter the two: and Andrew, and Philip, and Thomas, Bartholomew, and Matthew, and James (the son) of Alphæus, and Simon Zelotes, and Judas (the brother) of James. He has done well to mention the disciples: for since one had betrayed Christ, and another had been unbelieving, he hereby shews that, except the first, all of them were preserved.
- v. 13. These were all continuing with one accord in prayer together with the women. For this is a powerful weapon in temptations; and to this they had been trained. [Con-
v. 14. <sup>a</sup> καλῶς. tinuing with one accord]. <sup>2</sup>Good. Besides, the present

temptation directed them to this: for they exceedingly feared the Jews. With the women, it is said: for he had said that they had followed Him: and with Mary the mother of Jesus. How then [is it said, that that disciple] took her to his own home at that time? But then the Lord had brought them together again, and so returned. And with His brethren. These also were before unbelieving.

And in those days, it says, Peter stood up in the midst of the disciples, and said. Both as being ardent, and as having been put in trust by Christ with the flock, and as having precedence in honour<sup>d</sup>, he always begins the discourse. (The number of the names together were about an hundred and twenty.) Men and brethren, he says, this Scripture must needs have been fulfilled, which the Holy Ghost spake before, [etc.] Why did he not ask Christ to give him some one in the room of Judas? It is better as it is. For in the first place, they were engaged in other things; secondly, of Christ's presence with them, the greatest proof that could be given was this: as He had chosen when He was among them, so did He now being absent. Now this was no small matter for their consolation. But observe how Peter does every thing with the common consent; nothing imperiously. And he does not speak thus without a meaning. But observe how he consoles them concerning what had passed. In fact, what had happened had caused them no small consternation. For if there are many now who canvass this circumstance, what may we suppose they had to say then?

<sup>c</sup> Παλιν δὲ συναγαγὼν αὐτοὺς οὕτως κατήλθεν. So the older text: i. e. When they were scattered every man to his own home, that disciple had taken her eis τὰ ἴδια. But after the Resurrection Christ had gathered them together, and so (with all assembled) had returned to the usual place or mode of living.

the citation being omitted in the Mss. the remodeller of the text makes alterations, and adds matter of his own, to make the exposition run smoother. "Why did he not ask Christ, alone, to give him some one in the place of Judas? And why of their own selves do they not make the election?" Then instead of βέλτιον γέγονε λοιπόν. πρῶτον μὲν γὰρ, κ. τ. λ. he has, βελτίων λοιπὸν ἦν γεγονώς δὲ Πέτρος αὐτὸς αὐτοῦ, κ. τ. λ. "Peter has now become a better man than he was. So much for this point. But as to their request to have their body filled up not simply, but by revelation, we will mention two reasons; first, &c."

HOMIL. Men and brethren, says Peter. For if the Lord called III. them brethren, much more may he. ["Men," he says]: they all being present<sup>1</sup>. See the dignity of the Church, the angelic condition! No distinction there, neither male nor female. I would that the Churches were such now! None there had his mind full of some worldly matter, none was anxiously thinking about household concerns. Such a benefit are temptations, such the advantage of afflictions!

This Scripture, says he, must needs have been fulfilled, which the Holy Ghost spake before. Always he comforts them by the prophecies. So does Christ on all occasions. In the very same way, he shews here that no strange thing had happened, but what had already been foretold. This Scripture must needs have been fulfilled, he says, which the Holy Ghost by the mouth of David spake before. He does not say, David, but the Spirit through him. See what kind of doctrine the writer has at the very outset of the book. Do you see, that it was not for nothing that I said in the beginning of this work, that this book is the Polity of the Holy Spirit? Which the Holy Ghost spake before by the mouth of David. Observe how he appropriates<sup>1</sup> him; and that it is an advantage to them, that this was spoken by David, and not by some other Prophet. Concerning Judas, he says, which was guide. Here again mark the philosophical temper of the man: how he does not mention him with scorn, nor say, "that wretch," "that miscreant:" but simply states the fact; and does not even say, "who betrayed Him," but does what he can to transfer the guilt to others: nor does he animadvert severely even on these: Which was guide, he says, to them that took Jesus. Furthermore, before he declares where David had spoken, he relates what had been the case with Judas, that from the things present he may fetch assurance of the things future, and shew that this man had already v. 17, 18. received his due. For he was numbered, says he, with us, and had obtained part of this ministry. Now this man acquired a field out of the reward of iniquity. He gives <sup>Acts</sup> his discourse a moral turn, and covertly mentions the cause <sup>I.</sup> of the wickedness, because it carried reproof with it<sup>a</sup>. And <sup>16—21.</sup> he does not say, The Jews, but, this man, acquired it. For since the minds of weak persons do not attend to things future, as they do to things present, he discourses of the immediate punishment inflicted. And falling headlong, he burst asunder in the midst. He does well to dilate not upon the sin, but upon the punishment. And, he says, all his bowels gushed out. This brought them consolation<sup>b</sup>. And it was known unto all the dwellers at Jerusalem; v. 19. inasmuch as that field is called in their proper tongue Aceldama, that is to say, The field of blood. Now the [2.] Jews<sup>i</sup> gave it this name, not on this account, but because of Judas; here, however, Peter makes it to have this reference, and when he brings forward the adversaries as witnesses, both by the fact that they named it, and by saying, in their proper tongue, this is what he means.

Then after the event, he appositely brings in the Prophet, saying, For it is written in the Book of Psalms, Let his <sup>v. 20.</sup> habitation be desolate, and let no man dwell therein: this <sup>Ps. 69,</sup> <sup>25.</sup> is said of the field and the dwelling: And his bishopric let another take; that is, his office, his priesthood. So that this, he says, is not my counsel, but His who hath foretold these things. For, that he may not seem to be undertaking a great thing, and just such as Christ had done, he adduces the Prophet as a witness. Wherefore it behoves of these men which <sup>v. 21.</sup> have companied with us all the time. Why does he make it their business too? That the matter might not become an object of strife, and they might not fall into contention <sup>a</sup> λαθρόντως λέγει την αἰτίαν, παιδευτικῇ οὐσίαν: i. e. "in speaking of the wages of Judas, he indicates, that the Jews, by whom he was hired, were the authors of the wickedness: but because this carried reproof, he does it covertly, by implication." In the next sentence, he goes on to another point of the exposition, Καὶ οὐ λέγει, κ.τ.λ. i. e. "And observe also, that with the same wise forbearance, he says it not of the Jews, but of Judas, that a piece of ground was all that was gotten by this wickedness: now, in fact, not Judas earned this, but the Jews." The modern text has οὐ λέγει γὰρ.

<sup>i</sup> Here also Chrys. seems to be imperfectly reported. His meaning may be gathered from what is said further on, in the recapitulation: i. e. in giving the field that name, "because it was the price of blood," (Matt. 27, 8.) they unconsciously prophesied: for indeed the reward of their iniquity was this, that their place became an Aceldama.

- HOMIL. about it. For if the Apostles themselves once did this, 111. much more might those. This he ever avoids. Wherefore at the beginning he said, Men and brethren. It behooves to choose from among you<sup>1</sup>. He defers the decision to the whole body, thereby both making the elected objects of reverence, and himself keeping clear of all invidiousness with regard to the rest. For such occasions always give rise to great evils. Now that some one must needs be appointed, he adduces the prophet as witness: but from among what persons: Of these, he says, which have accompanied with us all the time. To have said, the worthy must present themselves, would have been to insult the others; but now he refers the matter to length of time; for he says not simply, These who have accompanied with us, but, all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us,
 v. 22. beginning from the baptism of John unto that same day that He was taken up from us, must one be ordained to be a
 v. 23. besides, he was not yet endowed with the Spirit. And they appointed two, Joseph called Barsabas, who was surnamed Justus, and Matthias. Not he appointed them; but it was he that introduced the proposition to that effect, at the same time pointing out that even this was not his own, but from old time by prophecy; so that he acted as expositor, not as preceptor. Joseph called Barsabas, who was surnamed Justus. Perhaps both names are given, because there were others of the same name, for among the Apostles also there were several names alike; as James, and James (the son) of Alphæus; Simon Peter, and Simon Zelotes; Judas (the brother) of James, and Judas Iscariot. The appellation, however, may have arisen from a change of life, and very likely also of the moral character<sup>2</sup>. They

sake of distinction. The name (as Latin) may have been given in consequence of a change of life (viz. of circumstances), and (as meaning 'the Just') perhaps also from a change of character (προαίρεσις.) —Or, προαίρεσις (βίου) may be opposed to μεταβολή βίου, and then the meaning

take part of this ministry and Apostleship, from which Judas by transgression fell, that he might go to his own place.
 They do well to mention the sin of Judas, thereby shewing that it is a witness they ask to have; not increasing the number, but not suffering it to be diminished. And they v. 26.

distance of a sabbath-day's journey:] so that there was no long way to go, to be a cause of alarm to them while yet trembling and fearful. And when they were come in, they went up into an upper room. They durst not appear in the town. They also did well to go up into an upper room, as it became less easy to arrest them at once.
And they continued, it is said, with one accord in prayer.
 Do you see how watchful they were? Continuing in prayer, and with one accord, as it were with one soul, continuing therein: two things reported in their praise.
 [Where<sup>m</sup> they were abiding, etc., to, And Mary the Mother of Jesus and His brethren.] Now Joseph perhaps was dead: for it is not to be supposed that when the brethren had become believers, Joseph believed not; he who in fact had believed before any. Certain it is that we no where find him looking upon Christ as man merely. As where His mother said, [Thy father and I did seek thee sorrowing. And upon [Luke 2, 48.]

would be, that the name may have related to a change, i. e. reformation of life, or perhaps to his original choice or moral purpose of life. But ἵσως δὲ καὶ seems best to suit the former explanation.

μουςιν ἐνι καὶ δεδοικὸσιν αὐτοῖς: i. e. "so that not being a long way for them walking, it was not, &c." which construction being somewhat obscure, the modern text has, τοῦτό φησιν, ἵνα δείξῃ ὅτι μακρὰν οὐ βαλίζουσιν ὁδὸν, ὡς φόβον τινὰ μὴ γενέσθαι τρέμουςιν ἐνι καὶ δεδοικὸσιν αὐτοῖς.

Again, consider the moderation of James. He it was who received the Bishopric of Jerusalem, and here he says nothing. Mark also the great moderation of the other Apostles, how they concede the throne to him, and no longer dispute with each other. For that Church was as it were in heaven: having nothing to do with this world's affairs: and resplendent not with walls, no, nor with numbers, but with the zeal of them that formed the assembly. They were about an hundred and twenty, it says. The seventy perhaps whom Christ Himself had chosen, and other of the more earnest-minded disciples, as Joseph and Matthias. [3.] [Men and brethren, etc.] Here is forethought for providing a teacher: here was the first who ordained a teacher. He did not say, 'We are sufficient.' So far was he beyond all vain-glory, and he looked to one thing alone. And yet he had the same power to ordain as they all collectively<sup>d</sup>. But menius, however, gives a different turn to this passage of St. Chrys. "And if Joseph had been alive, he too would have been present: especially as he never, like his sons (οἱ ἐξ αὐτοῦ, viz. the ἀδελφοί), entertained a doubt of the mystery of the Incarnation. But it is manifest that he was long dead; since even on the occasion when, as Jesus was teaching, His kinsfolk demanded to see Him, Joseph was not present. For what says the Gospel? "Thy mother and thy brethren without seek thee;" but not also, Thy father.

<sup>a</sup> Ἡ μήτηρ σου καὶ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ σου ἐζητοῦμέν σε. A. C. ὁ πατήρ σου κ. τ. λ. B. For ἐζητ. we must read ζητοῦσιν. The passage referred to is Matt. 13, 47. where however it is not Mary that speaks, but A certain person said unto Him, Behold, Thy mother and Thy brethren stand without seeking to speak with Thee. In the Homily on that passage, Chrys. interprets that Mary presented herself on that occasion οὐδὲν οὐδέτινα περὶ αὐτοῦ μέγα φανταζομένη, "having as yet no high idea of His Person," and that both she and His brethren ὡς ἀνθρώπων προσ-εἶχον ψιλῶ, "looked upon Him as mere man." In the same way he adverts to that incident here, for contrast with the higher faith of Joseph: but as the statement, "His mother said," is not accurate, the modern text substitutes the passage, Luke ii. 48. and reads, ἡ μήτηρ ἔλεγεν, 'Εγὼ καὶ ὁ πατήρ σου ἐδυνάμενοι ἐζητοῦμέν σε. It seems that Chrys. cited this passage also, (hence our Mas. have ἐζητοῦμεν for ζητοῦσι,) meaning, that it was not Joseph who said this, but Mary.—Œcu-

well might these things be done in this fashion, through the noble spirit of the man, and in regard that prelacy then was not an affair of dignity, but of provident care for the governed. This neither made the elected to become elated, for it was to dangers that they were called, nor those not elected to make a grievance of it, as if they were disgraced. But things are not done in this fashion now; nay, quite the contrary.—For observe, they were an hundred and twenty, and he asks for one out of the whole body: with good right, as having been put in charge of them: for to him had Christ said, And when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren.

For he was numbered with us, says Peter. On this account it behoves to propose another; to be a witness in his place. And see how he imitates his Master, ever discoursing from the Scriptures, and saying nothing as yet concerning Christ; namely, that He had frequently predicted this Himself. Nor does he mention where the Scripture speaks of the treachery of Judas; for instance, The mouth of the wicked and the mouth of the deceitful are opened against me; but where it speaks only of his punishment; for this was most to their advantage. It shews again the benevolence of the Lord: For he was numbered with us, he says, and obtained his lot of this ministry. He calls it everywhere lot, shewing that the whole is from God's grace and election, and reminding them of the old times, inasmuch as God chose him into His own lot or portion, as of old He took the Levites. He also dwells upon the circumstances respecting Judas, shewing that the reward of the treachery was made itself the herald of the punishment. For he acquired, he says, a field out of the reward of the iniquity. Observe the divine economy in the event. Of the iniquity, he says. For there are many iniquities, but never was any thing more iniquitous than this: so that the affair was one of iniquity. Now not only to those who were present did the event become known, but to all thereafter, so that without meaning or knowing what they were about, they gave it a name; just as Caiaphas had prophesied uncon-

HOMIL. sciously. God compelled them to call the field in Hebrew III. Aceldama. By this also the evils which were to come upon
 Mat. 26, the Jews were declared: and Peter shews the prophecy
 24. to have been so far in part fulfilled, which says, It had been good for that man if he had not been born. We may with propriety apply this same to the Jews likewise; for if he who was guide suffered thus, much more they. Thus far however Peter says nothing of this. Then, shewing that the term, Aceldama, might well be applied to his fate, he introduces the prophet, saying, Let his habitation be desolate. For what can be worse desolation than to become a place of burial? And the field may well be called his. For he who cast down the price, although others were the buyers, has a right to be himself reckoned owner of a great desolation<sup>1</sup>. This desolation was the prelude to that of the Jews, as will appear on looking closely into the facts. For indeed they destroyed themselves by famine, and killed many, and the city became a burial-place of strangers, of soldiers<sup>2</sup>, for as to those, they would not even have let them be buried, for in fact they were not deemed worthy of sepulture.

Wherefore of these men which have companied with us, continues Peter. Observe how desirous he is they should be eye-witnesses. It is true indeed that the Spirit would shortly come; and yet great care is shewn with regard to this circumstance. Of these men, he says, which have companied with us, all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us. He shews that they had dwelt with Christ, not simply been present as disciples. In fact, from the very beginning there were many that then followed Him. Observe, for instance, how this appears in these words:

<sup>2</sup> Τάφος γέγονεν ἡ πόλις τῶν ξένων, τῶν στρατιωτῶν. In the defective state of the text it is not easy to conjecture what this can mean. Perhaps, alluding to the words in St. Matthew, "a place to bury strangers in," St. Chrys. may have explained, that the strangers were not heathen, (ἐκείνους γὰρ οὐδ' ἂν εἴασαν ταφῆναι, they would not have allowed such to be buried in or by the Holy City, much less have provided a place of burial for them.) but foreign Jews: and if in τάφος γέγονεν ἡ πόλις he alludes to the description in Josephus, B. J. v. 12. 3. and 13. 7. this explanation of the term "strangers" would be the more apposite, as the myriads who perished in the siege were assembled from all parts of the world. The 'soldiers' seem to be the mercenaries on the side of the Jews: five thousand Idumæans are mentioned, B. J. v. 6. 1.

Jesus.—All the time, he says, that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us, beginning from the baptism of John. <sup>ACTS I. 12—26.</sup> True! for no one knew what preceded that event, though they did learn it by the Spirit. Unto that same day that He was taken up from us, must one be ordained to be a witness with us of His resurrection. He said not, a witness of the rest of His actions, but a witness of the resurrection alone. For indeed that witness had a better right to be believed, who was able to declare, that He Who ate and drank, and was crucified, the same rose again. Wherefore it was needed that he should be a witness, not only of the time preceding this event, nor only of what followed it, and of the miracles; the thing required was, the resurrection. For the other matters were manifest and acknowledged, but the resurrection took place in secret, and was manifest to these only. And they do not say, Angels have told us; but, We have seen<sup>1</sup>. For this it was that was most needful at that time: that they should be men having a right to be believed, because they had seen. ✓)

And they appointed two, it is said. Why not many? That the feeling of disappointment might not reach further, extending to many. Again, it is not without reason<sup>1</sup> that he puts Matthias last; he would shew, that frequently he that is honourable among men, is inferior before God. And they all pray in common, saying, Thou, Lord, which knowest the hearts of all men, shew. Thou, not We. And very seasonably they use the epithet, "heart-knowing:" for by Him Who is this<sup>2</sup> must the choice be made. So confident were they, that assuredly one of them must be appointed. They said not, Choose, but, "Shew the chosen one;" knowing that all things were foreordained of God; Whom Thou didst choose: one of these two, say they, to have his lot in this ministry and apostleship. For there was besides another ministry<sup>1</sup>. And they gave them their lots. For they did not<sup>1</sup> διακονία.

<sup>1</sup> Here the Edd. have ἡμεῖς· πόθεν δηλον; ἐξ ὧν θαυματουργοῦμεν. "ourselves: how is this proved? by the miracles we work." C. has not these words, which are not needed, but rather disturb the sense

θισιν ἐκεῖνον, according to which the sense would be the same: "Not without reason does he avoid putting Matthias first."

<sup>3</sup> Here the Edd. add, οὐχὶ τῶν ἔξωθεν, "not by those without:" but these words are not found in our Mss. of either text, nor in the Catena.

HOMIL. yet consider themselves to be worthy to be informed by some III. sign<sup>v</sup>. And besides, if in a case where neither prayer was [4.] made, nor men of worth were the agents, the casting of lots Jonah 1, so much availed, because it was done of a right intention, 7. I mean in the case of Jonah; much more did it here. Thus<sup>w</sup> did he, the designated, fill up the company, complete the order: but the other candidate was not annoyed; for the apostolic writers would not have concealed [that or any other] failings of their own, seeing they have told of the very chief Mat. 20, Apostles, that on other occasions they had indignation, and 24; 26, this not once only, but again and again.
8.

Mark Let us then also imitate them. And now I address no 10, 14, longer every one, but those who aim at preferment. If thou 21; 14, believest that the election is with God, be not displeased.
4. For it is with Him thou art displeased, and with Him thou art exasperated: it is He who has made the choice; thou doest the very thing that Cain did; because, forsooth, his brother's sacrifice was preferred, he was indignant, when he ought to have felt compunction. However, that is not what I mean here; but this, that God knows how to dispense things for the best. In many cases, thou art in point of disposition more estimable than the other, but not the fit person. Besides, on the other hand, thy life is irreproachable, and thy habits those of a well-nurtured man, but in the Church this is not all that is wanted. Moreover, one man is adapted for one thing, another for another. Do you not observe, how much discourse the holy Scripture has made on this matter? But let me say why it is that the thing has become a subject of competition: it is because we come to the Episcopate not as unto a work of governing and superintending the brethren, but as to a post of dignity and repose. Did you but know that a Bishop is bound to belong to all, to bear the burden of all; that others, if they are angry, are pardoned, but he never; that others, if they sin, have excuses made for them, he has none; you would not be eager<sup>p</sup> for the dignity, would not run after it. So it is,

<sup>v</sup> So, except E, all our Mss. and the Catena: and Morel. Ben. But Sav. and Par. "they did not yet think themselves worthy to make the election by themselves: wherefore they desire to be informed by some sign." An unnecessary alteration; for the sign means some miraculous token. So Eucumen.

the Bishop is exposed to the tongues of all, to the criticism of all, whether they be wise or fools. He is harassed with cares every day, nay, every night. He has many to hate him, many to envy him. Talk not to me of those who curry favour with all, of those who desire to sleep, of those who advance to this office as for repose. We have nothing to do with these; we speak of those who watch for your souls, who consider the safety and welfare of those under them before their own. Tell me now: suppose a man has ten children, always living with him, and constantly under his control; yet is he solicitous about them; and a bishop, who has such numbers, not living under the same roof with him, but having it at their own discretion whether they will obey him or not—what had he not need to be! But he is honoured, you will say. With what sort of honour, indeed! Why, the paupers and beggars abuse him openly in the market-place. And why does he not stop their mouths then? Yes, very proper work, this, for a bishop, is it not? Then again, if he do not give to all, the idle and the industrious alike, lo! a thousand complaints on all sides. None is afraid to accuse him, and speak evil of him. In the case of civil governors, fear steps in; with bishops, nothing of the kind. As for the fear of God, it does not influence people, as regards them, in the least degree. Why speak of the anxiety connected with the word and doctrine? the painful work in Ordinations? Either, perhaps, I am a poor wretched incompetent creature, or else, the case is as I say. The soul of a Bishop is for all the world like a vessel in a storm: lashed from every side, by friends, by foes, by one's own people, by strangers. Does not the Emperor rule the whole world, the Bishop a single city? Yet a Bishop's anxieties are as much beyond those of the Emperor, as the waters of a river simply moved by the wind are surpassed in agitation by the swelling and raging sea. And why? because in the one case there are many to lend a hand, for all goes on by law and by rule; but in the other there is none of this, nor is there authority to command; but if one be greatly moved, then he is harsh; if the contrary, then he is cold! And in him these opposites

III.

Besides, the very demands of business preoccupy him: how many is he obliged to offend, whether he will or not! How many to be severe with! I speak not otherwise than it is, but as I find it in my own actual experience. I do not think there are many among Bishops that will be saved, but many more that perish: and the reason is, that it is an affair that requires a great mind. Many are the exigences which throw a man out of his natural temper; and he had need have a thousand eyes on all sides. Do you not see what a number of qualifications the Bishop must have? to be apt to teach, patient, holding fast the faithful word in doctrine<sup>1</sup>. What trouble and pains does this require! And then, others do wrong, and he bears all the blame. To pass over every thing else: if one soul depart unbaptized, does this not subvert all his own prospect of salvation? The loss of one soul carries with it a penalty which no language can represent. For if the salvation of that soul was of such value, that the Son of God became man, and suffered so much, think how sore a punishment must the losing of it bring! And if in this present life he who is cause of another's destruction is worthy of death, much more in the next world. Do not tell me, that the presbyter is in fault, or the deacon. The guilt of all of these comes perforce upon the head of those who ordained them. Let me mention another instance. It chances, that a bishop has inherited from his predecessor a set of persons of indifferent character*. What measures is it proper to take in respect of by-gone transgressions, (for here are two precipices:) so as not to let the offender go unpunished, and not to cause scandal to the rest? Must one's first step be to cut him off? There is no actual present ground for that. But is it right to let

2—9.
Tit. 1,
7—9.

* Συμβάλειν τινὰ κληρὸν διαδέξασθαι ἀνδρῶν μοχθηρῶν. The expression below, ὅτι μοχθηρὸς τις ἐστὶ shews that the ἀνδ. μοχθ., 'ill-conditioned men,' are clerks. The offences meant seem to have been before ordination: and the difficulty is, How to deal with a clerk who ought not to have been ordained at all? You cannot cut him off from the order of clergy, there being no present actual delinquency to justify such a step. Then suppose you do not call him to account for the past, on the ground that the bishop who ordained him must be answerable: what are you to do, when this man should in the regular course be advanced to a higher order of the ministry? To refuse to ordain him, would be to publish his unworthiness, and call attention to the scandal of his having been ordained in the first instance: to advance him, would be even worse.

him go unmarked? Yes, say you; for the fault rests with the bishop who ordained him. Well then? must one refuse to ordain him again, and to raise him to a higher degree of the ministry? That would be to publish it to all men, that he is a person of indifferent character, and so again one would cause scandal in a different way. But is one to promote him to a higher degree? That is much worse.

If then there were only the responsibility of the office [5.] itself for people to run after in the episcopate, none would be so quick to accept it. But as things go, we run after this, just as we do after the dignities of the world. That we may have glory with men, we lose ourselves with God. What profit in such honour? How self-evident its nothingness is! When you covet the episcopal rank<sup>1</sup>, put in the other scale, the account to be rendered after this life. Weigh against it, the happiness of a life free from toil, take into account the different measure of the punishment. I mean, that even if you have sinned, but in your own person merely, you will have no such great punishment, nothing like it: but if you have sinned as bishop, you are lost. Remember what Moses endured, what wisdom he displayed, what good deeds he exhibited: but, for committing one sin only<sup>2</sup>, he was bitterly punished; and with good reason; for this fault was attended with injury to the rest. Not in regard that the sin was public, but because it was the sin of a spiritual Ruler<sup>1</sup>; for in truth we do not pay the same penalty for<sup>1</sup> leptus public and for hidden faults. The sin may be the same, cf. S. Aug. in Ps. 99, 6. but not the<sup>2</sup> harm of it; nay, not the sin itself; for it is not the same thing to sin in secret and unseen, and to sin openly. But the bishop cannot sin unobserved. Well for him if he escape reproach, though he sin not; much less can he think to escape notice, if he do sin. Let him be angry, let him laugh, or let him but dream of a moment's relaxation, many are they that scoff, many that are offended, many that term leptus to Moses, does not mean that Moses was a Priest, but that he held a station similar in some regards to that of Bishops afterwards. Aaron was properly the High Priest, but Moses was a type of Christian Bishops, considered as Chief Pastors and Rulers.

HOMIL. lay down the law, many that bring to mind the former III. bishops, and abuse the present one; not that they wish to sound the praise of those; no, it is only to carp at him that they bring up the mention of fellow-bishops, of presbyters. Sweet, says the proverb, is war to the inexperienced: but<sup>a</sup> it may rather be said now, that even after one has come out of it, people in general have seen nothing of it: for in their eyes it is not war, but like those shepherds in Ezekiel, we slay and devour. Which of us has it in his power to shew that Ezek.

Gen. 31, he has taken as much care for the flocks of Christ, as Jacob did for Laban's? Which of us can tell of the frost of the night? For talk not to me of vigils, and all that parade<sup>b</sup>.

Ἰσπαρχοὶ καὶ τοπάρχαι The contrary plainly is the fact. Prefects, and governors<sup>c</sup> of provinces, do not enjoy such honour as he that governs the Church. If he enter the palace, who but he is first? If he go to see ladies, or visit the houses of the great, none is preferred to him. The whole state of things is ruined and corrupt. I do not speak thus as wishing to put us bishops to shame, but to repress your hankering after the office. For with what conscience<sup>d</sup>, (suppose you succeed in becoming a bishop, having made interest for it either in person or by another,) with what eyes will you look the man in the face who worked with you to that end? What will you have to plead for your excuse? For he that unwillingly, by compulsion and not with his own consent, was

 μενας ἐκείρους, κ.τ.λ. Perhaps Chrys. is not fully reported here. The meaning seems to be: "The proverb, γλυκὺς ὁ πόλεμος ἀπείροις, may well be applied here; it is a fine thing to be a bishop, to those who have not tried it. Little do people think what this war is, before they have entered into it. But in our times, not only πρὸ τοῦ ἐμβῆναι, but even μετὰ τὸ ἐκβῆναι, after a good bishop has gone through with it, the generality of people do not see that there has been any war in the case. We bishops, in their view, are like Ezekiel's shepherds. And no marvel, for many among us are such." The author of the modern text has given a different turn to the sentiment. Here it is: "The same may well be said in the present case; or rather, we do say it before we have entered into the contest; but after we have embarked in it, we become not even visible to the generality. For to us now there is no war, against those who oppress the poor, nor do we endure to battle in defence of the flock; but like those shepherds, &c."

raised to the office, may have something to say for himself, though for the most part even such an one has no pardon to expect<sup>d</sup>, and yet truly he so far has something to plead in excuse. Think how it fared with Simon Magus. What signifies it that you give not money, if, in place of money, you pay court, you lay many plans, you set engines to work? Thy money perish with thee! Thus was it said to him, and thus will it be said to these: your canvassing perish with you, because you have thought to purchase the gift of God by human intrigue! But there is none such here? And God forbid there should! For it is not that I wish any thing of what I have been saying to be applicable to you: but just now the connexion has led us on to these topics. In like manner when we talk against covetousness, we are not preaching at you, no, nor against any one man personally. God grant it may be the case, that these remedies were prepared by us without necessity. The wish of the physician is, that after all his pains, his drugs may be thrown away because not wanted: and this is just what we desire, that our words may not have been needed, and so have been spoken to the wind, so as to be but words. I am ready to submit to any thing, rather than be reduced to the necessity of using this language. But if you like, we are ready to leave off; only let our silence be without bad effects. No one, I imagine, though he were ever so vainglorious, would wish to make a display of severity, when there is nothing to call for it. I will leave the teaching to you: for that is the best teaching, which teaches by actions<sup>e</sup>. For indeed the best physicians, although the sickness of their patients brings them in fees, would rather their friends were well. And so we too wish all to be well. It is not that we desire to be approved, and you reprov'd. I would gladly manifest, if it were possible, with my very eyes, the love which I bear to you: for then no one would be able to reproach me, though my language were ever so rough. "For speech of friends, yea, were it insult, can be borne<sup>f</sup>;" more faithful are the wounds of a

HOMILY IV.

And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place. And suddenly there came a sound from heaven.

DOST thou perceive the type? What is this Pentecost? The time when the sickle was to be put to the harvest, and the ingathering was made. See now the reality, when the time was come to put in the sickle of the word: for here, as the sickle, keen-edged, came the Spirit down. For hear the words of Christ: Lift up your eyes, He said, and look <sup>John 4,</sup> on the fields, for they are white already to harvest. And <sup>36.</sup> again, The harvest truly is great, but the labourers are few. <sup>Matt. 9,</sup> But as the first-fruits of this harvest, He Himself took [our <sup>38.</sup> nature], and bore it up on high. Himself first put in the sickle. Therefore<sup>a</sup> also He calls the Word the Seed. When, <sup>Luke 8,</sup> it says, the day of Pentecost was fully come: that is, when at <sup>5. 11.</sup> the Pentecost, while about it, in short<sup>b</sup>. For it was essential that the present events likewise should take place during the feast, that those who had witnessed the crucifixion of Christ, might also behold these. And suddenly there came a sound <sup>v. 2.</sup> from heaven. Why did this not come to pass without sensible tokens? For this reason. If even when the fact was such, men said, They are full of new wine, what would they not have said, had it been otherwise? And it is not merely, there came a sound, but, from heaven. And the

v. 3. what is more awful still, And there appeared unto them, it says, cloven tongues like as of fire. Observe how it is always, “like as;” and rightly: that you may have no gross sensible notions of the Spirit. Also, as it were of a blast:
 therefore it was not a wind. Like as of fire. For when the Spirit was to be made known to John, then it came upon the head of Christ as in the form of a dove: but now, when a whole multitude was to be converted, it is like as of fire.
And it sat upon each of them. This means, that it remained and rested upon them. For the sitting is significant of settledness and continuance.

Was it upon the twelve that it came? Not so; but upon the hundred and twenty. For Peter would not have quoted Joel 2, to no purpose the testimony of the prophet, saying, And it 28. shall come to pass in the last days, saith the Lord God,
I will pour out of My spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams.

 new to them, and there was no need of any other sign.
And it sat upon each of them, says the writer. Observe now, how there is no longer any occasion for that person to grieve, who was not elected as was Matthias. And they were all filled, he says; not merely received the grace of the Spirit, but were filled. And began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance. It would not have been said, All, the Apostles also being there present, unless the rest also were partakers. For were it not so,

having above made mention of the Apostles distinctively <sup>Acts 17.1-11.</sup> and by name, he would not now have put them all in one with the rest. For if, where it was only to be mentioned that they were present, he makes mention of the Apostles apart, much more would he have done so in the case here supposed<sup>4</sup>. Observe, how when one is continuing in prayer, when one is in charity, then it is that the Spirit draws near. It put them in mind also of another vision: for as fire did He appear also in the bush. As the Spirit <sup>Exod.</sup> gave them utterance, ἀποθέγγεσθαι. For the things spoken<sup>3, 2.</sup> by them were ἀποθέγματα, profound utterances. And, it v. 5. says, there were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews, devout men. The fact of their dwelling there was a sign of piety: that being of so many nations they should have left country, and home, and relations, and be abiding there. For, it says, There were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven. Now when this was noised<sup>v. 6.</sup> abroad, the multitude came together, and were confounded. Since the event had taken place in a house, of course they came together from without. The multitude was confounded: was all in commotion. They marvelled; Because that every man heard them speak in his own language. And<sup>v. 7-13.</sup> they were amazed, it says, and marvelled, saying one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak Galileans? They immediately turned their eyes towards the Apostles. And how (it follows) hear we every man in our own tongue, wherein we were born? Parthians, and Medes, and Elamites, and the dwellers in Mesopotamia, and in Judea, and Cappadocia, in Pontus, and Asia, Phrygia, and Pamphylia, in Egypt, and in the parts of Libya about Cyrene: mark how they run from east to west: and strangers of Rome, Jews and proselytes, Cretes and Arabians, we do hear them speak in our tongues the wonderful works of God. And they

<sup>d</sup> i. e. if the gift descended only upon the Twelve, there would have been specific and distinctive mention of them in this narrative, as there was in the former chapter; and with much more reason here than there. The writer would not have said merely, They were all together: it sat upon each one of them: they were all filled: if he had meant that the Spirit came only upon the Apostles.

<sup>e</sup> i. e. Mark how the enumeration, "Parthians, and Medes," &c. goes from east to west. This comment having been transposed to the end of v. 12. was misunderstood: and E. has instead of it, "Do you see how it was, that, as if they had wings, they sped their way through the whole world?"

HOMIL. were all amazed, and were in doubt, saying one to another,

IV. What meaneth this? Others mocking said, These men are

[2.] full of new wine. O the excessive folly! O the excessive malignity! Why it was not even the season for that; for it was Pentecost. For this was what made it worse: that when those were confessing—men that were Jews, that were Romans, that were proselytes, yea perhaps that had crucified Him—yet these, after so great signs, say, They are full of new wine!

Recapitulation. But let us look over what has been said from the beginning. [And when the day of Pentecost, etc.] It filled, he says,

This no where happened in the case of the Prophets: for to uninebriated souls such accesses are not attended with much disturbance; but “when they have well drunken,” then indeed it is as here, but with the Prophets it is other-

Ex. 3, 3. wise<sup>1</sup>. The roll of a book<sup>2</sup> is given him, and Ezekiel ate what he was about to utter. And it became in his mouth, it is said, as honey for sweetness. (And<sup>3</sup> again the hand of God touches the tongue of another Prophet; but here it Jer. 1, 9. is the Holy Ghost Himself: so equal is He in honour with the Father and the Son.) And again, on the other hand,

<sup>2</sup> So de Sancta Pentecoste, Hom. i. t. ii. 465. “Why does Ezekiel receive the gift of prophecy not by the likeness of fire, but by a book, while the Apostles receive the gifts by fire? For concerning him we read, that one gave him in his mouth a roll of a book, &c.: but concerning the Apostles not so, but there appeared unto them tongues as of fire. Why is it a book and writing there, here tongue and fire? Because there the Prophet went his way to accuse sins, and to bewail Jewish calamities: whereas these went forth to consume the sins of the whole world: therefore he received a writing, to call to mind the coming calamities; these fire, to burn up the sins of the world, and utterly abolish them. For as fire falling among thorns will with ease destroy them, even so the grace of the Spirit consumed the sins of men.”

<sup>3</sup> This, which we have marked as parenthesis, seems to be out of its place: it interrupts what is said about Ezekiel, and besides is not relevant to the matter immediately in hand. Ἐταῦθα δὲ αὐτὸ τὸ Πν. τὸ “Α. κ. τ. λ. would come in more suitably after the mention of the fire in the bush, in which God appeared to Moses. And so Ecumenius seems to have taken it. “But it is in the likeness of fire, because the Spirit also is God, and to prove by this also that the Spirit is of one Nature (ὁμοφύης) with the Father, Who appears in this manner to Moses at the bush.”

Ezekiel calls it, Lamentations, and mourning, and woe. <sup>Acta 11.1-13. Ez.2,10.</sup> To them it might well be in the form of a book; for they still needed similitudes. Those had to deal with only one nation, and with their own people; but these with the whole world, and with men whom they never knew. Also Elisha <sup>2 Kings 13.</sup> receives the grace through the medium of a mantle; another by oil, as David; and Moses by fire, as we read of him at <sup>1 Sam. 16, 13. Exod.3, 2.</sup> the bush. But in the present case it is not so; for the fire itself sat upon them. (But wherefore did the fire not appear so as to fill the house? Because they would have been terrified.) But the story shews, that it is the same here as there<sup>1</sup>. For you are not to stop at this, that there appeared unto them cloven tongues, but note that they were of fire. Such a fire as this is able to kindle infinite fuel. Also, it is well said, Cloven, for they were from one root: that you may learn, that it was an operation sent from the Comforter.

But observe how those men also were first shewn to be worthy, and then received the Spirit as worthy. Thus, for instance, David: what he did among the sheepfolds, the same he did after his victory and trophy, that it might be shewn how simple and absolute was his faith. Again, see Moses despising royalty, and forsaking all, and after forty <sup>Exod.2, 11.</sup> years taking the lead of the people; and Samuel occupied <sup>1 Sam.3, 3.</sup> there in the temple; Elisha leaving all; Ezekiel again, made <sup>1 Kings 19, 21.</sup> manifest by what happened thereafter<sup>1</sup>. In this manner, you see, did these also leave all that they had. They learnt also

<sup>1</sup> ἵνα δείχῃ αὐτοῦ γυνή ἢ πίστις. Not, "ut palam fieret fides ejus," Ben. but, "quo ipsius nuda simplexque fides declararetur," Erasm. The meaning seems to be: David after the victory over Goliath, when the hearts of the people were turned to him, and he might have taken possession of the kingdom to which he was anointed, yet did not seek worldly greatness, but chose rather to suffer persecutions, &c.: as developed in the Homilies de Davide et Saule, t. iv. 752. Below, for ἀνατρεφόμενον ("Samuel brought up in the temple,") A. has ἀναστρεφόμενον, which we have adopted.

Elisha and Ezekiel, A. omits the clause. Chrys. elsewhere makes it a special praise of Ezekiel, that he chose rather to accompany his people into captivity, than to remain in his own land: Interp. in Isai. i. t. 1. 2. and ad Stagyr. iii. t. ii. 228. In this manner then, (he would say here,) Ez. "left all," and having thus given proof of his worth, received the gift of prophecy. The modern text reads: "Ezekiel again. And that the case was thus, is manifest from what followed. For indeed these also forsook all that they had. Therefore they then received the Spirit, when they had given proof of their own virtue."—By these (οἱ τοῖ) we must understand the Old Test. saints just mentioned. It should rather have been ἐκεῖνοι, but Chrys. is negligent in the use of these pronouns. See Hom. in Matt. Field. Adnot. p. 709. B.

HOWIL. what human infirmity is, by what they suffered; they learnt that IV. it was not in vain they had done these good works. Even 1 Sam. 9. Saul, having first obtained witness that he was good, thereafter received the Spirit. But in the same manner as {here did none of them receive. Thus Moses was the greatest of the Prophets, yet he, when others were to receive the Spirit, himself suffered diminution<sup>1</sup>. But here it is not so; but just as fire kindles as many flames as it will, so here the largeness of the Spirit was shewn, in that each one received a fountain of the Spirit; as indeed He Himself had foretold, that those who believe in Him, should have

John 4, a well of water springing up into everlasting life. And 14. good reason that it should be so. For they did not go forth to argue with Pharaoh, but to wrestle with the devil. But the wonder is this, that when sent they made no objections;

Exod. 4, they said not, they were weak in voice, and of a slow tongue.
 10. For Moses had taught them better. They said not, they were

Jer. 1, 6. too young. Jeremiah had made them wise. And yet they had heard of many fearful things, and much greater than were theirs of old time; but they feared to object.—And because they were angels of light, and ministers of things above, [Suddenly there came from heaven, etc.] To them of old, no one from heaven appears, while they as yet follow after a vocation on earth; but now that Man has gone up on high, the Spirit also descends mightily from on high. As it were a rushing mighty wind: making it manifest by this, that nothing shall be able to withstand them, but they shall blow away all adversaries like a heap of dust. And it filled all the house. The house also was a symbol of the world. And it sat upon each of them, [etc.] and the multitude came together, and were confounded. Observe their piety; they pronounce no hasty judgment, but are perplexed: whereas those reckless ones pronounce at once, saying, These men are full of new wine. Now it was in order that they might have it in their power<sup>2</sup>, in compliance with the Law, to appear thrice in the year in the Temple, that they dwelt there, these devout men from all nations. Observe here, the writer has no intention of flattering them.

<sup>1</sup> Ἡλαττοῦτο. Alluding to Numb. 11, 17. "I will take of the Spirit that is upon thee, and will put it upon them."

it in their power, according to the law of their fathers, to appear thrice in the year, &c." The modern text has, ἐν δὲ τῇ... δὲ τοῦτο. "Because it was permitted... therefore."

For he does not say that they pronounced any opinion: Acts but what? Now when this was noised abroad, the multitude II.1-13. came together, and were confounded. And well they might be; for they supposed the matter was now coming to an issue against them, on account of the outrage committed against Christ. Conscience also agitated their souls, the very blood being yet upon their hands, and every thing alarmed them. Behold, are not all these which speak Galileans? For indeed this was confessed. [And how hear we] so much did the sound alarm them. [Every man in our own tongue, etc.] for it found the greater part of the world assembled there. [Parthians and Medes, etc.] This nerved the Apostles: for, what it was to speak in the Parthian tongue, they knew not, but now learnt from what those said. Here is mention made of nations that were hostile to them, Cretans, Arabians, Egyptians, Persians: and that they would conquer them all was here made manifest. But as to their being in [3.] those countries, they were there in captivity, many of them: or else, the doctrines of the Law had become disseminated [among] the Gentiles in those countries<sup>a</sup>. So then the testimony comes from all quarters: from citizens, from foreigners, from proselytes. We do hear them speak in our tongues the wonderful works of God. For it was not only that they spoke (in their tongues), but the things they spoke were wonderful. Well then altered: "But, inasmuch as the Jews were in captivity, it is likely that there were then present with them many of the Gentiles: ἃ ὅτι καὶ πρὸς τὰ ἔθνη τὰ τῶν δογμάτων ἦδη κατέσπαρτο, καὶ διὰ τοῦτο πολλοὶ καὶ ἐξ αὐτῶν παρήσαν ἐκεῖ. Or, because τὰ τῶν δ. had become disseminated among the Gentiles also, add therefore many also of them were there present, κατὰ μνημὴν ὧν ἤκουσαν. Here τὰ τῶν δογμάτων is taken to mean 'the doctrines of the Christian Faith': as Erasmus renders the passage, Sive quod ad gentes quoque fidei dogmata seminata fuerint, et hanc ob causam complures ex iis aderant ut memorarent quæ audierant. It can hardly be supposed that St. Chrysostom meant to represent that some of these Parthians, Medes, &c. were Gentiles who had heard in their own country the tidings of the Faith of Christ, and therefore were present at Jerusalem: yet this is what he is made to say in this text.

HOMIL. might they be in doubt: for never had the like occurred. Observe 1V. the ingenuousness of these men. They were amazed and were John 8, 48. in doubt, saying, What meaneth this? But others mocking said, These men are full of new wine, and therefore mocked. O the effrontery! And what wonder is it? Since even of the Lord Himself, when casting out devils, they said that He had a devil! For so it is; wherever impudent assurance exists, it has but one object in view, to speak at all hazards, it cares not what; not that the man should say something real and relevant to the matter of discourse, but that he should speak, no matter what. [They are full of new wine.] Quite a thing of course, (is not it?)* that men in the midst of such dangers, and dreading the worst, and in such despondency, have the courage to utter such things! And observe: since this was unlikely; because they would not have been drinking much [at that early hour], they ascribe the whole matter to the quality (of the wine), and say, They are full of it. But Peter, standing up with the eleven, lifted up his voice, and said unto them. In a former place<sup>p</sup> you saw his provident forethought, here you see his manly courage. For if they were astonished and amazed, was it not as wonderful that he should be able in the midst of such a multitude to find language, he, an unlettered and ignorant man? If a man is troubled when he speaks among friends, much more might he be troubled among enemies and blood-thirsty men. That they are not drunken, he shews immediately by his very voice, that they are not beside themselves, as the soothsayers: and this too, that they were not constrained by some compulsory force. What is meant by, with the eleven? They expressed themselves through one common voice, and he was the mouth of all. The

Œcumen. says, explaining this remark of Chrys., the fumes of γλεύκος mount more quickly to the brain, &c. Erasmus, seemingly referring this to μεμεστωμένοι, translates "hebetudini crapulæque rem totam ascribunt:" Ben. even more strangely, "agendi et loquendi modo totum asoribunt."

eleven stood by as witnesses to what he said. He lifted up his voice, it is said. That is, he spoke with great confidence, that they might perceive the grace of the Spirit. He who had not endured the questioning of a poor girl, now in the midst of the people, all breathing murder, discourses with such confidence, that this very thing becomes an unquestionable proof of the Resurrection: in the midst of men who could deride and make a joke of such things as these! What effrontery, think you, must go to that! what impiety, what shamelessness<sup>1</sup>! For wherever the Holy Spirit is present, He makes men of gold out of men of clay. Look, I pray you, at Peter now: examine well that timid one, and devoid of understanding; as Christ said, Are ye also yet without understanding? the man, who after that marvellous confession was called Satan. Consider also the unanimity of the Apostles. They themselves ceded to him the office of speaking; for it was not necessary that all should speak. And he lifted up his voice, and spoke out to them with great boldness. Such a thing it is to be a spiritual man! Only let us also bring ourselves into a state meet for the grace from above, and all becomes easy. For as a man of fire falling into the midst of straw would take no harm, but do it to others: not he could take any harm, but they, in assailing him, destroy themselves. For the case here was just as if one carrying hay should attack one bearing fire: even so did the Apostles encounter these their adversaries with great boldness.

For what did it harm them, though they were so great a multitude? Did they not spend all their rage? did they not turn the distress upon themselves? Of all mankind, were ever any so possessed with both rage and terror, as those became possessed? Were they not in an agony, and were dismayed, and trembled? For hear what they say, Do ye wish to bring this man's blood upon us? Did they<sup>r</sup> (the Apostles)

Jews to the Apostles) is not expressed in the original. To remedy the confusion occasioned by this negligence, the modern text (Edd.) transposes this part: viz. after the sentence ending, "so great a multitude:" it has, "For tell me: did they not fight—in a picture?" And then, "What? I pray you; did they not exhaust, &c." Clearly the other is the original order.

HOMIL. not fight against poverty and hunger: against ignominy and infamy, (for they were accounted deceivers:) did they not fight' against ridicule and wrath and mockery?—for in their case the contraries met: some laughed at them, others punished them;—were they not made a mark for the wrathful passions, and for the merriment', of whole cities? exposed to factions and conspiracies: to fire, and sword, and wild beasts? Did not war beset them from every quarter, in ten thousand forms? And were they any more affected in their minds by all these things, than they would have been at seeing them in a dream or in a picture'? With bare body they took the field against all the armed, though against them all men had arbitrary power: [against them, were] terrors of rulers, force of arms, in cities and strong walls': without experience, without skill of the tongue, and in the condition of quite ordinary men, matched against juggling conjurors, against impostors, against the whole throng of sophists, of rhetoricians, of philosophers grown mouldy in the Academy and the walks of the Peripatetics, against all these they fought the battle out. And the man whose occupation had been about lakes so mastered them, as if it cost him not so much ado as even a contest with dumb fishes: for just as if the opponents he had to outwit were indeed more mute than fishes, so easily did he get the better of them! And Plato, that talked a deal of nonsense in his day, is silent now, while this man utters his voice every where; not among

It is shewn, first, how the Jews were utterly worsted, and how awfully the whole posture of affairs was reversed for them; and then, how victoriously the preachers of the new Faith maintained their ground against the whole world.

<sup>1</sup> Edd. "Were they not subjected to the ridicule and mockery of those present? For in their case both these befel together: for some derided them, others mocked." Which is weak enough; but the original text could not be retained, because on the supposition that all this relates to the Jews then present, the mention of "wrath" and "punishment" would be irrelevant.

wrath." Ben. without specifying the authority, notes a various reading, ἀθυμία, which is found in none of the Paris copies, and is quite unmeaning. Edd. μανία.

<sup>3</sup> Ben. interprets: "So unlooked for were these trials, that the Apostles seemed to themselves to be dreaming or b. holding these things in a picture." But when the true order of the text is restored, no such far-fetched comment is needed.

his own countrymen alone, but also among Parthians, and Medes, and Elamites, and in India, and in every part of the earth, and to the extremities of the world. Where now is Greece with her big pretensions? Where the name of Athens? Where the ravings of the philosophers? He of Galilee, he of Bethsaida, he, the uncouth rustic, has overcome them all. Are you not ashamed—confess it—at the very name of the country of him who has defeated you? But if you hear his own name too, and learn that he was called Cephas, much more will you hide your faces. This, this has undone you quite: because you esteem this a reproach, and account glibness of tongue a praise, and want of glibness a disgrace. You have not followed the road you ought to have chosen, but leaving the royal road, so easy, so smooth, you have trodden one rough, and steep, and laborious. And therefore you have not attained unto the kingdom of heaven.

Why then, it is asked, did not Christ exercise His influence upon Plato, and upon Pythagoras? Because the mind of Peter was much more philosophical* than their minds. They were in truth children shifted about on all sides by vain-glory; but this man was a philosopher, one apt to receive grace. If you laugh at these words, it is no wonder; for those aforetime laughed, and said, the men were full of new wine. But afterwards, when they suffered those bitter calamities, exceeding all others in misery; when they saw their city falling in ruins, and the fire blazing, and the walls hurled to the ground, and those manifold frantic horrors, which no one can find words to express, they did not laugh then. And you will laugh then, if you have the mind to laugh, when the time of hell is close at hand, when the fire is kindled for your souls. But why do I speak of the future? Shall I shew you what Peter is, and what Plato, the philosopher? Let us for the present examine their * St. Chrysostom's habitual use of the term philosophy is thus explained in the index of Mr. Field's edition of the Com. on St. Matt. "Philosophy, according to the custom of Chrys. is not Christian piety, not the exercise of any virtue, not a pious and chaste life, not virtue in general, but that part of virtue, which consists in subduing the carnal appetites and affections. Thus to Christian philosophy are to be referred: forbearance and long-suffering; humble-mindedness; contempt of wealth; an austere and monastic life; every other mortification (ἀπάθεια). Its contraries are: emulation, (ζηλοτυμία, see below,) envy and vain-glory, and all other passions."

HOMIL. respective habits, let us see what were the pursuits of each.

IV.

The one wasted his time about a set of idle and useless dogmas, and philosophical, as he says<sup>1</sup>, that we may learn that the soul of our philosopher becomes a fly. Most truly said, a fly! not indeed changed into one, but a fly must have entered upon possession of the soul which dwelt in Plato; for what but a fly is worthy of such ideas! The man was full of irony, and of jealous feelings against every one else, as if he made it his ambition to introduce nothing useful, either out of his own head or other people's. Thus he adopted the metempsychosis from another, and from himself produced the Republic, in which he enacted those laws full of gross turpitude. Let the women, he says, be in common, and let the virgins go naked, and let them wrestle before the eyes of their lovers, and let there also be common fathers, and let the children begotten be common. But with us, not nature makes common fathers, but the philosophy of Peter does this: as for that other, it made away with all paternity<sup>2</sup>. For Plato's system only tended to make the real father next to unknown, while the false one was introduced. It plunged the soul into a kind of intoxication and filthy wallowing. Let all, he says, have intercourse with the women without fear. The reason why I do not examine the maxims of poets, is, that I may not be charged with ripping up fables. And yet I am speaking of fables much more ridiculous than even those. Where have the poets devised ought so portentous as this? But (not to enter into the discussion of his other maxims), what say you to these—

<sup>1</sup> καὶ φιλόσοφα, φησὶν, ἵνα: 'and "philosophical," forsooth:' but perhaps it should be καὶ φιλοσόφησεν ἵνα: 'this was the upshot of his philosophizing.' Ἡ τοῦ φιλοσόφου ψυχὴ: 'the soul of the philosopher himself (A. τοῦ διδασκάλου), viz. equally with the souls of other men, becomes, for instance, a fly, &c.' Comp. infra p. 65. "our soul passes into flies and dogs, &c." and Hom. in Ev. Joann. t. viii. 8. D. "they say that the souls of men become flies, gnats, shrubs."—Edd. "For what is the benefit from learning that the soul of the philosopher, &c." The next sentence (ὅπως μύια—οὐκ εἰς μύιαν μετέπεπτεν (sc. ἡ ψυχὴ), ἀλλ' ἐπίβαινε (sc. μύια) τῇ ἐν Πλατ. οἰκόνσῃ ψυχῇ) seems to mean, 'He talks of the soul becoming a fly: and truly the soul in Plato might be claimed by a fly:' ἐπεβ. τῇ ψ. as e. g. in ἐπιβαίνειν τῇ ἐπαρχίᾳ, to step into possession of, &c. Ποίας γὰρ ταῦτα οὐ μύιας; Edd. ματαυλογίας; adding, Πόθεν δὲ τοιαῦτα ληρεῖν ἐπεβλήτο; 'What could put it into his head to rave in this fashion?'

when he equips the females with arms, and helmets, and greaves, and says that the human race has no occasion to differ from the canine? Since dogs, he says, the female and the male, do just the same things in common, so let the women do the same works as the men, and let all be turned upside down. For the devil has always endeavoured by their means<sup>a</sup> to shew that our race is not more honourable than that of brutes; and, in fact, some have gone to such a pitch of 'absurdity, as to affirm that the irrational creatures are<sup>1</sup> endued with reason. And see in how many various ways he has run riot in the minds of those men! For whereas their leading men affirmed that our soul passes into flies, and dogs, and brute creatures; those who came after them, being ashamed of this, fell into another kind of turpitude, and invested the brute creatures with all rational science, and made out that the creatures—which were called into existence on our account—are in all respects more honourable than we! They even attribute to them foreknowledge and piety. The crow, they say, knows God, and the raven likewise, and they possess gifts of prophecy, and foretell the future; there is justice among them, and polity, and laws. Perhaps you do not credit the things I am telling you. And well may you not, nurtured as you have been with sound doctrine; since also, if a man were fed with this fare, he would never believe that there exists a human being who finds pleasure in eating dung. The dog<sup>b</sup> also among them is jealous, according to Plato. But when we tell them that these things are fables, and are full of absurdity, 'You do not enter<sup>2</sup> into the higher<sup>3</sup> meaning,' say they. No, we do not enter into this your surpassing nonsense, and may we never do so: for it requires (of course<sup>c</sup>!) an excessively profound mind, to inform me, what all this impiety and confusion would be at. Are you talking, senseless men, in the language of crows, as the children are wont (in play)? For you are in very deed children, even as they. But Peter never thought of saying any of these things:

And what, pray you, is that Minerva of theirs, and Apollo, and Juno? They are different kinds of demons among them. And there is a king of theirs, who thinks fit to die for the mere purpose of being accounted equal with the gods. But not so the men here: no, just the contrary. But with those, great is the self-elation, great the bragging; all for the sake of men's honours, nothing for the pure love of truth and virtue<sup>1</sup>. For where an action is done for glory, all is worthless. For though a man possess all, yet if he have not the mastery over this (lust), he forfeits all claim to true philosophy, he is in bondage to the more tyrannical and shameful passion. Contempt of glory; this it is that is sufficient to teach all that is good, and to banish from the soul every pernicious passion. I exhort you therefore to use the most strenuous endeavours to pluck out this passion by the very roots; by no other means can you have good esteem with God, and draw down upon you the benevolent regard of that Eye which never sleepeth. Wherefore, let us use all earnestness to obtain the enjoyment of that heavenly influence, and thus both escape the trial of present evils, and attain unto the future blessings, through the grace and lovingkindness of our Lord Jesus Christ, with Whom to the Father and the Holy Ghost be glory, power, honour, now and ever, and to all ages. Amen.

ACTS ii. 14.

Ye men of Judæa, and all ye that dwell at Jerusalem, be this known unto you, and hearken to my words.

[YE men of Judæa, and all ye that dwell at Jerusalem,] whom the writer above described as strangers. Here he directs his discourse to those others, the mockers*, and while he seems to reason with those, he sets these right. For indeed it was divinely ordered that some mocked, that he might have a starting point for his defence, and by means of that defence, might teach. [And all ye that dwell in Jerusalem.] It seems they accounted it a high encomium to dwell in Jerusalem too<sup>b</sup>. Be this, says he, known unto you, and hearken unto my words. In the first instance he made

* The ἐκεῖνοι, if the old text be correct, are the mockers, but these are not "the devout men out of every nation under heaven," therefore οὗς ζήλους εἶπεν ἀνωτέρω can hardly be meant to refer to the following clause, ἐνταῦθα πρὸς ἐκείνους κ.τ.λ. The omission of the text-words, and the seeming antithesis of ἀνωτέρω and ἐνταῦθα, caused a confusion which the modern text attempts to remedy by transposing τοὺς διαχλ. to the place of τοὺς. "Whom the writer above called strangers, to those Peter here directs his speech, and he seems indeed to discourse with those, but corrects the mockers." This just inverts Chrysostom's meaning, which is clear enough from the following context.

He says: "The 'dwellers in Jerusalem' are especially the devout men out of every nation mentioned above, and to instruct these (τοὺς) is the real aim of the discourse, which however is addressed in the first instance to the others (ἐκείνους), whose mockery gave occasion to it. St. Peter stands up apparently for the purpose of defending himself and his brethren: but this is in fact quite a secondary object, and the apology becomes a sermon of doctrine."

<sup>b</sup> Καὶ τὸ ἐν Ἱ. οἰκεῖν. Below he explains ἄνδρες Ἰουδαῖοι to mean, "dwellers in Judæa:" therefore the καὶ seems to mean, "to be not only such, but dwellers in Jerusalem also."

HOMIL. them more disposed to attend to him. For not as ye<sup>c</sup> V. suppose, says he, are these drunken. Do you observe the
 v. 16. mildness of his defence? Although having the greater part of the people on his side, he reasons with those others gently; first he removes the evil surmise, and then he establishes his apology. On this account, therefore, he does not say, "as ye mock," or, "as ye deride," but, as ye suppose; wishing to make it appear that they had not said this in earnest, and for the present taxing them with ignorance rather than with malice. For these are not drunken, as ye suppose, seeing it is but the third hour of the day. And why this? Is it not possible at the third hour to be drunken? But he did not insist upon this to the letter; for there was nothing of the kind about them; the others said it only in mockery. Hence we learn that on unessential points one must not spend many words. And besides, the sequel is enough to bear him out on this point: so now the dis-
 v. 16. 17. course is for all in common. But this is that which was Joel 2, spoken by the prophet Joel, And it shall come to pass in the Christ, nor His promise: but the promise is that of the Father.

<sup>1 συγκα-</sup> Observe the wisdom: observe the considerate forbearance<sup>1</sup>.
<sup>τάβαιν</sup> He did not pass on to speak at once of the things relating to Christ; that He had promised this after His Crucifixion; truly that would have been to upset all. And yet, you will say, here was sufficient to prove His divinity. True, it was, if believed, (and the very point was that it should be believed;) but if not believed, it would have caused them to be stoned. And I will pour out of My Spirit upon all flesh. He offers even to them excellent hopes, if they would have them. And so far, he does not leave it to be regarded as the exclusive advantage of himself and his company; which would have made them be looked upon with an evil eye; thus cutting off all envious feeling. And your sons shall prophesy. And yet, he says, not yours this achievement, this distinction; the gift has passed over to your children. Himself and his company he calls their <sup>Acts</sup> sons, and those [whom he is addressing] he calls his and <sup>II.</sup> their fathers. <sup>14—20.</sup> And your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams; and on My servants and on My handmaidens I will pour out in those days of My Spirit; and they shall prophesy. So far he shews that he and his have found favour, in that they had received<sup>1</sup> [the Spirit]; not so they whom he is addressing; <sup>1 κατ- αἰσθη- τας.</sup> for that they had crucified [the Lord]. So Christ also, <sup>Mat. 12, 27.</sup> willing to mitigate their wrath, said, By whom do your sons cast out devils? He did not say, My disciples; for indeed it seemed a flattering mode of expression. And so Peter also did not say, 'They are not drunk, but speak<sup>4</sup> by the Spirit:' but he takes refuge with the prophet, and under shelter of him, so speaks. As for the accusation [of drunkenness], he cleared himself of that by his own assertion; but for the grace, he fetches the prophet as witness. I will pour out of My Spirit upon all flesh. [And your sons, etc.] To some the grace was imparted through dreams, to others it was openly poured forth. For indeed by dreams the prophets saw, and received revelations.

Then he goes on with the prophecy, which has in it also something terrible. And I will shew wonders in heaven <sup>v. 19.</sup> above, and signs [in the earth beneath]. In these words he speaks both of the judgment to come, and of the taking of Jerusalem. Blood and fire, and vapour of smoke. Observe how he describes the capture. The sun <sup>v. 20.</sup> shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood. This results from the<sup>2</sup> internal affection of the sufferers. <sup>2 διαθ- σεις</sup> It is said, indeed, that many such phenomena actually did occur in the sky, as Josephus attests. At the same time the Apostle strikes fear into them, by reminding them of the darkness which had lately occurred, and leading them to expect things to come. Before that great and notable day of the Lord come. For be not confident, he means to say, because at present you sin with impunity. For these things

<sup>d</sup> Here the innovator, again mistaking his author's meaning, as if it were—Peter did not say, "These are not drunk," but what he did say was,

"They speak by the Spirit"—finds it necessary to add, καὶ οὐχ ἀπλῶς, And not merely so, but, &c.

HOMIL. are the prelude of a certain great and dreadful day. Do you
V. see how he made their souls to quake and melt within them, and turned their laughter into pleading for acquittal*? For if these things are the preludē of that day, it follows that the extreme of danger is impending. But what next? He again
Rom. lets them take breath, adding, And it shall come to pass, 10, 13. that whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord, shall be saved. This is said concerning Christ, as Paul affirms, but Peter does not venture as yet to reveal this.

Well, let us look over again what has been said. It is well managed, that as against men laughing and mocking, he starts up and begins with, Be this known unto you all,
and hearken unto my words. But he begins by saying, Ye men of Judæa. By the expression Ἰουδαῖοι, I take him to mean those that lived in Judæa.—And, if you please, let us compare those expressions in the Gospel, that you may learn what a sudden change has taken place in Peter.
Mat. 26, A damsel, it is written, came out unto him, saying, Thou 69—72. also wast with Jesus of Nazareth. And, says he, I know not the Man. And being again questioned, he began to [2.] curse and to swear. But see here his boldness, and his great freedom of speech.—He did not praise those who had said, We do hear them speak in our tongues the wonderful works of God; but by his severity towards those others, he made these more earnest, and at the same time his address is clear from all appearance of adulation. And it is well to remark, on all occasions, however the Apostles may <sup>1 συγκατάβασις</sup> condescend to the level of their hearers<sup>1</sup>, their language is clear from all appearance both of adulation and of insolence: which is a difficult point to manage.

Now that these things should have occurred at the third hour, was not without cause. For<sup>1</sup> the brightness of this * ἀπολογία, as in 2 Cor. 7, 11.

 culous fire appears at a time when there would be many to see it, people not being engaged in their works, nor within their houses at their noon-tide meal. Œcumenius evidently had the old text before him, for he gives the same sense with the slightest verbal alterations. In the Catena the sense is altered by omission of the negatives, “When people are about their work, when about their dinner,” &c. The innovator (followed by Edd.) makes it, “For when the brightness of the light is shewn, then men are not occupied in the business of dinner, (οὐ περὶ ἔργα...

fire is shewn at the very time when people are not engaged in their works, nor at dinner; when it is bright day, when all are in the market-place. Do you observe also the freedom which fills his speech? And hearken to my words. And he added nothing, but, This, says he, is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel; And it shall come to pass in the last days. He shews, in fact, that the consummation is nigh at hand, and the words, In the last days, have a kind of emphasis. [I will pour out, etc.] And then, that he may not seem to limit the privilege to the sons only, he subjoins, And your old men shall dream dreams. Mark the sequence. First sons; just as David said, Instead of thy fathers, were begotten thy sons. And again Malachi; They shall turn the hearts of the fathers to the children. And on my hand- maidens, and on my servants. This also is a token of excellence, for we have become His servants, by being freed from sin. And great is the gift, since the grace passes over to the other sex also, not as of old, it was limited to just one or two individuals, as Deborah and Huldah<sup>a</sup>. He did not say that it was the Holy Ghost, neither did he expound the words of the prophet; but he merely brings in the prophecy to fight its own battle. As yet also he has said nothing about Judas; and yet it was known to all what a doom and punishment he had undergone; for nothing was more forcible than to argue with them from prophecy: this was more forcible even than facts. For when Christ performed miracles, they often contradicted Him. But when Christ brought forward the prophet, saying, The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit Thou on my right hand, they were silent, and no man, we read, was able to answer Him a word. And on all occasions He Himself also appealed to the Scriptures; for instance, If he called them gods to whom the word of God came. And in many places one may find this. On this account here also Peter says, I will pour out of my spirit upon not to do so: (as also this obscure saying, I will shew wonders in heaven above, put them the more in fear because it was obscure.) And it would have been more an offence, had it been interpreted from the very first. Then besides, even as plain, he passes over it, wishing to make them regard it as such. But after all, he does interpret to them anon, when he discourses to them upon the resurrection, and after he has paved the way by his discourse. For<sup>2</sup> since the good things were not sufficient to allure them, [it is added, And I will shew wonders, etc.] <sup>1</sup>Yet this has never been fulfilled.  ment<sup>2</sup>. For in the invocation is the salvation.

What, I pray you, is this you say? Do you talk of [3.] salvation for them after the Cross? Bear with me a little.
 Great is the mercy of God. And this very fact does, no less than the resurrection, prove Him to be God, yea, no less than His miracles—the fact that He calls these to Him. For surpassing goodness is, above all things, peculiarly God's own. Therefore also He says, None is good <sup>Luke 18,</sup> save one, that is, God. Only let us not take this goodness <sup>19.</sup> for an occasion of negligence. For He also punishes as God. In fact, the very punishments here spoken of, He brought them to pass, even He who said, Every one who shall call on the name of the Lord, shall be saved. I speak of the fate of Jerusalem; that intolerable punishment: of which I will tell you some few of the particulars, useful to us in our contest, both with the Marcionites and many other heretics. For, since they distinguish between Christ a good God, and that evil God [of the Old Testament], let us see who it was that effected these things. The evil God, taking vengeance for Christ? or not so? How then alien to Him? But was it the good God? Nay, but it is demonstrated that both the Father and the Son did these things. The Father in many places; for instance, when He says in the parable of the vineyard<sup>3</sup>, [He will <sup>Mat. 21,</sup> miserably destroy those wicked husbandmen : again in the <sup>41.</sup> parable of the marriage feast, the King is said] to send His <sup>id. 22, 7.</sup>

Moreover, Christ Himself also speaks of the future tribulations, than which never any thing more dreadful came to pass; never any thing more ruthless, my beloved, than the deeds then done*! And He Himself declared it. For what could you wish to see more grievous than these? * * *—probed them with their daggers*!—

Joseph. * * * But shall I relate to you the shocking case of the woman, that tragic tale? * * * Did not the actual events cast all misery into the shade? But shall I tell you of famines and pestilences? One might speak of horrors without number: nature was unknown; law unknown: they outdid wild beasts in ferocity. True, these miseries came by the fate of wars; but because God, because Christ so willed it to be. These facts will apply both against the Marcionites and against those who do not believe that there is a hell: for they are sufficient to silence their impudence. Are not these calamities more severe than the Babylonian<sup>a</sup>? Are not these ο ὃν οὐδὲν ὠμότερον γέγονεν, ἀγαπῆτοι, τῶν τότε πεπραγμένων πραγμάτων. This may be explained as a negligent construction, but perhaps some words are omitted. The next sentence, Καὶ αὐτὸς ἀπεφάνητο (which phrase is repeated below,) refers to Matt. 24, 21. There shall be great tribulation, such as has not been from the beginning of the world to this time.

ῥ ὀβελοσχοῖς (dagger-blades, or spear-heads, or spits,) αὐτοὺς διέπειραν. In Hom. vi. p. 94. infra, we have the phrase τινὲς ὀβελοσχοῖς πεκυρωμένοι διέπειραν σῶμα. It is evident that something is omitted, and no more probable supposition presents itself, than that Chrys. here read out from Josephus or Eusebius the description of the famine among the besieged, (which the reporter of the sermon omitted at the time, intending to insert it at his leisure;) and that the short sentence in the text is the preacher's own parenthetical explanation of some part of the description. Thus, B. J. vi. 3. 3.

speaking of the cruelties practised upon dying wretches suspected of having food concealed about their persons, Josephus says: Ἄλλα καὶ τοὺς ἐκπνέοντας οἱ λήσταί διηρεύνων, μήτις ὑπὸ κόλπον ἔχων τροφήν στήπτοισι τὸν θάνατον αὐτῶ. Perhaps ὀβελοσχοῖς αὐτοὺς διέπειραν in C.'s comment upon διηρεύνων.—Or, in like manner, it may refer to the description in B. J. v. 12. 3. how the λησταί, after ransacking the bodies of the dead, tried the edges of their swords upon them, &c. Τὰς τε ἀκμὰς τῶν ξιφῶν ἐδοκιμάζον ἐν τοῖς πτώμασι, καὶ τινὰς τῶν ἐρρημμένων ἐτι ζῶντας διήλωνον ἐπὶ περὶ τοῦ σιδήρου. Perhaps, however, the expression may be taken in a metaphorical sense as in the phrase above cited: "they pierced themselves (ἐαυτοὺς for αὐτοὺς) as with spits or lancets."

sufferings more grievous than the famines of that time? Yes, Acts for [never was the like from the beginning of the world] no, nor <sup>II.</sup> 14-21. ever shall be such. And this was Christ's own declaration. Mat. 24, In what sense then, think ye, is it said that Christ re- <sup>21.</sup> mitted them their sin? Perhaps it seems a commonplace question: but do ye solve it.—It is not possible to shew anywhere, even in fiction, any thing like what the reality was here. And had it been a Christian that wrote this history, the matter might be regarded with suspicion: but if he was a Jew, and a Jewish zealot, and after the Gospel, how can the meaning of the facts be otherwise than palpable to all men? For you will see the man, how, every where, he always extols the concerns of the Jews. —There is therefore a hell, O man! and God is good.—Aye, did you shudder at hearing these horrors? But these, which take place here, are nothing in comparison with what shall be in that world. Once more I am compelled to seem harsh, disagreeable, stern. But what can I do? I am set to this: just as a severe schoolmaster is set to be hated by his scholars: so are we. For would it not be strange indeed, that, while those who have a certain post assigned them by kings do that which is appointed them, however disagreeable the task may be, we, for fear of your censure, should leave our appointed task undone? Another has a different work. Of you, many have it for their work, to shew mercy, to act humanely, to be pleasant and agreeable to the persons to whom you are benefactors. But to those to whom we do good, we seem stern and severe, troublesome and disagreeable. For we do good, not by the pleasure we give, but by the pain we inflict. So it is also with the physician: though he indeed is not excessively disagreeable, for the benefit afforded by his art is had immediately; ours hereafter. So again the magistrate is odious to the dis-

* Πᾶς ὃν φανεῖ φησὶν, i. e. as it is said in the text, Everyone that calleth on the name of the Lord shall be saved. The question is the same as was put in the beginning of this section: "What? do you speak of salvation for them, after crucifying the Lord? And this, when you have shewn us how fearfully that sin was visited?" This question, as a very simple one, he leaves the hearers to answer for themselves, by distinguishing between believers and unbelievers, the penitent and the hardened.—The innovator quite alters the sense; "How then say some that Christ remitted them their sin?" which makes the next sentence idle.

HOMIL. orderly and seditious; so the legislator is vexatious to them
 V. for whom he makes laws. But not so he that invites to enjoyment, not so he that prepares public festivities and entertainments, and puts all the people in garlands: no, these are men that win acceptance, feasting, as they do, whole cities with all sorts of spectacles; contributing largely, bearing all the cost. And therefore those whom they have treated, requite them for these enjoyments with words of welcome and benediction, with hanging<sup>1</sup> of tapestries, and a blaze of lamps, and with wreaths, and boughs, and brilliant garments. Whereas, at the sight of the physician, the sick become sad and downcast: at sight of the magistrate, the rioters become subdued: no running riot then, no gambolling, except when he also goes over into their ranks*. Let us see, then, which render the best service to their cities; those who provide these festivities, and banquettings, and expensive entertainments, and manifold rejoicings; or those who restrain all those doings, bearing before them stocks, scourges, executioners, dreaded soldiers, and a voice fraught with much terror: and issuing orders, and making men hang down their heads, and with the rod dispersing the idlers in the market-place. Let us see, I say; these are the disagreeable, those the beloved: let us see where the gain<sup>2</sup> rests*. What comes then of your pleasure-givers? A kind of frigid enjoyment, lasting till the evening, and to-morrow vanished; mirth ungoverned, words unseemly and dissolute. And what of these? Awe, sobriety, subdued thoughts; reasonableness of mind, an end of idleness; a curb on the passions within; a wall of defence, next to God<sup>3</sup>, against assailants from without. It is by means of these we have each our property, but by those ruinous festivities we dissipate it. Robbers indeed have not invaded it, but vain-glory together with pleasure acts the part of robber. Each sees the robber for the attendants of any high official, and may perhaps be taken in that sense here.) Erasmus goes wide of the text: nec exultant eo quod et ille ad hoc opus ordinatus est: and so Montf. nec exultantes quod ille ad hoc officium sit constitutus.

carrying off every thing before his eyes, and is delighted at it! A new fashion of robbery, this, to induce people to be glad when one is plundering them! On the other part, there is nothing of the kind: but God, as the common Father, has secured us as by a wall against all [depredators], both seen and unseen. For, Take heed, saith He, that ye do not your alms before men. The soul learns from the one, [excess<sup>x</sup>; from the other,] to flee injustice. For injustice consists not merely in grasping at more wealth than belongs to us, but in giving to the belly more than its needful sustenance, in carrying mirth beyond its proper bounds, and causing it to run into frantic excesses. From the one, it learns sobriety; from the other, unchastity. For it is unchastity, not merely to have carnal intercourse with women, but even to look upon a woman with unchaste eyes. From the one, it learns modesty; from the other, conceited self-importance. For, All things, says the Apostle, are lawful for me, but not all things expedient. From the one, decent behaviour; from the other, unseemliness. For, as to the doings in the theatres, I pass these. But to let you see that it is not even a pleasure either, but a grief, shew me, but a single day after the festival, both those who spent their money in giving it, and those who were feasted with spectacles: and you shall see them all looking dejected enough, but most of all him, your<sup>1</sup> famous man that has spent his<sup>1</sup> money for it. And this is but fair: for, the day before, he delighted the common man, and the common man indeed was in high good humour and enjoyment, and rejoiced indeed in the splendid garment, but then not having the use of it,

1 Cor.
6, 12.

<sup>x</sup> Hom. in Matt. lxxi. p. 699. C. Chrys. describes κενοδοξία (vainglory) in almsgiving, as the thief that runs away with the treasure laid up in heaven. And something of this sort seems to have been in his thoughts here, where however his meaning is evidently very imperfectly expressed. The texts cited shew that ἐκεῖ, ἐκεῖθεν, refer to something more than, as above, good laws and government in general; for here he speaks of the Gospel discipline of the inner man. "Where this restraint is, no dissipation of our temporal or spiritual wealth has place: for God, as common Father, has raised a wall to keep out all robbers both seen and unseen, from all our possessions: from the former He guards us, by law and good government; from the latter, by the Gospel prohibition of all vainglory: Take heed that ye do not your alms, &c."

<sup>x</sup> Μανθάνει ψυχὴ ἐντεῦθεν, opp. to ἐκεῖθεν as in the following sentences: ἐκεῖθεν σωφροσύνην μανθάνει, ἐντεῦθεν ἀκολασίαν—ἐκ. ἐπιείκειαν, ἐντ. τύφον—ἐκ. κοσμιότητα, ἐντ. ἀσχημοσύνην. Therefore, either something is wanting: e. g. πλεονεξίαν ἐκεῖθεν, or for ἐντ. we must read ἐκεῖθεν.

HOMIL. and seeing himself stripped of it, he was grieved and annoyed ;
 — V. — and wanted to be the great man, seeing even his own enjoyment to be small compared with his<sup>y</sup>. Therefore, the day after, they change places, and now he, the great man, gets the larger share in the dejection.

Now if in worldly matters, amusements are attended with such dissatisfaction, while disagreeable things are so beneficial, much more does this hold in things spiritual. Why is it that that no one quarrels with the laws, but on the contrary all account that matter a common benefit? For indeed not strangers from some other quarter, nor enemies of those for whom the laws are made, came and made these orders, but the citizens themselves, their patrons, their benefactors: and this very thing, the making of laws, is a token of beneficence and good-will. And yet the laws are full of punishment and restraint, and there is no such thing as law without penalty and coercion. Then is it not unreasonable, that while the expositors of those laws are called deliverers, benefactors, and patrons, we are considered troublesome and vexatious if we speak of the laws of God? When we discourse about hell, then we bring forward those laws: just as in the affairs of the world, people urge the laws of murder, high-way robbery, and the like, so do we the penal laws: laws, which not man enacted, but the Only-Begotten Son of God Himself. Let him that the following sentence, Διὰ τοῦτο, &c. Montf. translates, Qui vero sumptus fecit, suam præ illius felicitate parvam putabat, as if ἐκεῖνος and ἐκείνου in the same sentence referred to two different and contrasted persons. The meaning of the passage is, As, on the day before, the entertainer had τὸ πλεόν τῆς εὐθυμίας, it is but fair that on the following day τὸ πλεόν τῆς ἀθυμίας should be transferred to him. This is expressed by Διὰ τοῦτο τῇ ὕστ. ἀντιδιδόσιν ἀλλήλοις: which however Erasmus renders, Idcirco sequenti die reddunt sibi vestes iterum: Montf. redduntur vestes. (Perhaps there is an allusion to the legal phrase ἀντίδοσις. v. Isocrat. περὶ ἀντιδ.) into the fire. Let him that reviles, receive his due in hell. Acts II.

Mat. 18, hath no mercy, He says, be punished; for such is the import 23. of the parable. Let him that remembereth injuries, pay the last penalty. Let him that is angry without cause, be cast

If you think these laws which you hear strange, be not amazed. For if Christ was not intended to make new laws, why did He come? Those other laws are manifest to us; we know that the murderer and adulterer ought to be punished. If then we were meant only to be told the same things over again, where was the need of a heavenly Teacher? Therefore He does not say, Let the adulterer be punished, but, whoso looketh on with unchaste eyes. And where, and when, the man will receive punishment, He there tells us. And not in fine public monuments, nor yet somewhere out of sight, did He deposit His laws; not pillars of brass did He raise up, and engrave letters thereon, but twelve souls raised He up for us, the souls of the Apostles, and in their minds has He by the Spirit inscribed this writing. This cite we to you. If this was authorized to Jews, that none might take refuge in the plea of ignorance, much more is it to us. But should any say, 'I do not hear, therefore have no guilt,' on this very score he is most liable to punishment. For, were there no teacher, it would be possible to take refuge in this plea; but if there be, it is no longer possible. Thus see how, speaking of Jews, the Lord deprives them of all excuse; If I had not come and spoken John 16,
unto them, they had not had sin: and Paul again, But Rom.
10, 18.
I say, have they not heard? Nay, but into all the earth went forth their sound. For then there is excuse, when there is none to tell the man; but when the watchman sits there, having this as the business of his life, there is excuse no longer. Nay, rather, it was the will of Christ, not that we should look only upon these written pillars, but that we should ourselves be such. But since we have made ourselves unworthy of the writing, at least let us look to those. For just as the pillars threaten others, but are not themselves obnoxious to punishment, nor yet the laws, even so * Εἰς ἀναθήματα οὐδὲ εἰς κρύβδην. The modern text has εἰς ἄξονας οὐδὲ εἰς κρύβεις, alluding to the peculiar form of tables on which the laws of Athens were written. On critical grounds we retain the reading of the old text, which, as being the more difficult one, is not likely to have been substituted for the other. Οὐκ εἰς ἀναθήματα; 'not on public monuments for display.' Laws of an Emperor, for instance, engraved on handsome monuments, may be called ἀναθήματα. Οὐδὲ εἰς κρύβδην, (also an unusual expression,) 'nor yet where no one would see them.'

HOMIL. the blessed Apostles. And observe; not in one place only
V. stands this pillar, but its writing is carried round about in all the world. Whether you go among the Indians, you shall hear this: whether into Spain, or to the very ends of the earth, there is none without the hearing, except it be of his own neglect. Then be not offended, but give heed to the things spoken, that ye may be able to lay hold upon the works of virtue, and attain unto the eternal blessings in Christ Jesus our Lord, with Whom to the Father and Holy Ghost together be glory, power, honour, now and ever, world without end. Amen.

ACTS ii. 22.

Ye men of Israel, hear these my words.

[Ye men of Israel]: it is not for flattery that he uses this term; but, as he has borne hard upon them, he relaxes a little, and puts them in mind of their great ancestor<sup>a</sup> [Israel]. Here again he begins with an introduction, that they may not become excited, now that he is going to make express mention to them of Jesus: for in what preceded, there was no reason why they should be excited, while the Prophet was the subject of discourse: but the name of Jesus would have given offence at the very outset.—And he does not say, ‘Do as I bid you,’ but, Hear: as being not at all exacting. And observe how he forbears to speak of the high matters, and begins with the very low: Jesus, he says: and then straightway mentions the place He belonged to, being one which was held in mean estimation: Jesus of Nazareth: and does not say any thing great about Him, nor even such as one would say about a Prophet, so far: Jesus, he says, of Nazareth, a man proved (to be) from God among you. Observe; what great matter was this, to say that He was sent from God<sup>b</sup>?

<sup>a</sup> τοῦ προπάτορος, A. C. F. D. and Cat. but τοῦ Δαυὶδ εἰκαίρας, B. E. Edd. (Eccumenius fell into the same mistake, and has τοῦ προπάτορος Δαυὶδ. But it is evident that Chrys. is commenting on the address ἄνδρες Ἰσραηλῖται.

nothing even that would be great if said of an ordinary Prophet. For, observe: πόσον μέγα, what sort of great thing was it, to say that Christ was sent from God?’ In the following sentences Chrys. seems to have been scarcely understood by his reporter. His meaning may be thus represented: ‘And yet so it is: everywhere in the

- HOMIL. VI. For this was the point which on all occasions both He and John and the Apostles were studious to shew. Thus, hear John 1, John saying; The same said unto me, On whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and abiding on Him, this is He. 33.
- ib. 7, 28. But Christ Himself does this to an extreme; Of Myself I am not come, He sent Me. And everywhere in the Scriptures this seems the point most studiously insisted upon. Therefore also this holy leader of the blessed company, the lover of Christ, the good shepherd, the man put in trust with the keys of heaven, the man who received the Spiritual Wisdom, when he has first subdued the Jews by fear, and has shewn what great things have been vouchsafed to the disciples, and what a right they have to be believed, then first proceeds to speak concerning Him. Only think what boldness it was to say it, in the midst of the murderers—that He is risen! And yet he does not all at once say, He is risen; but what?—"He came," says he, "from God: this is manifest by the signs which"—he does not yet say, Jesus Himself wrought: but what?—"which God wrought by Him in the midst of you." He calls themselves as witnesses. A man proved (to be sent) from God among you, by miracles and wonders and signs, which God wrought by Him in the midst of you, as also ye yourselves know. Then, having fallen upon the mention of that their sacrilegious outrage, observe how he endeavours to quit them of the crime:
- v. 23. Him, he says, being by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God delivered up: [adding however,] ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain: for

Scriptures we find examples of this remarkable μετασσις: "Christ was sent from God," seems to be the point most studiously inculcated (τὸ σπουδαζόμενον): nay, we find it carried to the utmost (μεθ' ὑπερβολῆς) in some of Christ's own expressions. And so here: when Peter stands up—he, the leader of the Apostles, the lover of Christ, the good shepherd, the man entrusted with the keys of the kingdom of heaven, the man who has received the deposit of the Wisdom of the Spirit—after he has subdued the audience by the terrors of the coming judgments, has shewn that he and his company have received wonderful gifts as foretold by the Prophet, and has made it felt that they have a right to be believed: you may well expect after all this that his first word about Christ will be something great; that he will certainly launch out boldly into the declaration, He is risen! Only think, though, what boldness to say this in the midst of the murderers!—Nothing of the kind. He begins with, "Jesus the Nazarene, a man proved to be from God unto you by signs, &c. which—(He did? no, but) God did by Him, &c. Wait a while, however: the Orator will say all that needs to be said in due time."

though it was predetermined, still they were murderers*. ΑΚΤΑ II.
22—24.
[By the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God:] all but using the same words as Joseph did; just as he said to his brethren; Be not angry one with another by the way; God sent me hither. It is God's doing. 'What of us, then?' Gen. 45, 5. 24.
(it might be said,) 'it was even well done on our part.' That they may not say this, therefore it is that he adds, By wicked hands ye have crucified and slain. Here then he hints at Judas; while at the same time he shews them that it was not from any strength of theirs, and would not have been, if He had not Himself permitted it: it was God that delivered Him up. He has transferred the evil entire upon the head of Judas, now already parted from them; for he it was that delivered Him over to them by the kiss. Or, By wicked hands, refers to the soldiers: for neither is it simply, Ye have slain, but, By wicked men ye have done this<sup>d</sup>. And observe how everywhere they make it of great importance that the Passion should first be confessed. WHOM GOD RAISED UP, v. 24. says he. This was the great thing; and observe how he sets it in the middle of his discourse: for the former matters had been confessed; both the miracles and the signs and the slaying—Whom God, says he, raised up, having loosed the pains of death, because it was not possible that He should be kept in its power. It is something great and sublime that he has hinted at here. For the expression, It was not possible, even itself is that of one assigning something*.

<sup>d</sup> The confusion may be cleared up by supposing that Chrys. here commented upon the words διὰ χειρῶν ἀνθρώπων as admitting of a double connexion: viz. with ἐκδοτον λαβόντες and with προσπ. ἀνέλετε. In the former, it refers to Judas; while at the same time, it is shewn that of themselves they had no power against Him: He was delivered up by the predestination and will of God, by means of the wicked hands of Judas; upon whom (already gone to his doom) the evil is shifted entire. But again, as ἐκδοτον is not put simply and without addition (ἀπλῶς), so neither (οὐδὲ) is ἀνέλετε: but "by wicked hands ye slew," i. e. by the soldiers.

* The text seems to be corrupt: καὶ αὐτὸ διδόντος ἔστιν τί· δείκνυσιν ὅτι. B. omits ἔστιν τί. Perhaps καὶ αὐτὸ is derived from an abbreviation of κρατεῖσθαι αὐτόν: and διδόντος ἔστιν τί· may be, "is (the expression) of one assigning something, i. e. some special prerogative to Him;" or, possibly, "For the expression, Καθότι οὐκ ἦν δυνατόν even of itself implies the granting of something (in His case):" viz. as a postulate. E. καὶ αὐτὸν

- HOMIL. It shews that death itself in holding Him had pangs as VI. in travail, and was sore bestead: whereas, by pains, or, travail-pangs, of death, the Old Testament means danger and disaster: and that He so rose as never more to die. For the assertion, Seeing that it was not possible that He should be holden of it, means this, that His rising was not common to the rest. Then, however, before their thoughts can enter at all into his meaning, he brings David upon them, an authority which sets aside all human reasoning. For David saith (with reference) to Him. And observe how, once more, the testimony is lowly. For therefore he begins the citation further up, with the matters of lowlier import: therefore<sup>1</sup> was death not in the number of grievous things, [because,] says he, I foresaw the Lord always before my face, that He is on my right hand that I should not be moved: and, that Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell. Then, having finished the citation from the Prophet, he adds; Men and brethren. When he is about to say any thing great, he uses this opening address, to rouse and to διδότα ἐμφανίζει κατασχέιν καὶ ὅτι, i. e. "that it was even He that gave death the power to hold Him:" this, which is adopted by Edd. is, however, not a various reading, but only an attempt to restore the passage. (Ecumen. gives no assistance: he has only, διὰ δὲ τοῦ, καθότι οὐκ ἦν δύναμις αὐτῶν κρατ., τὸ μεγαλεῖον αὐτοῦ παύσασθαι, καὶ ὅτι οὐκέτι ἀποθήσκει. In the next sentence E. and Edd. have: "For by 'pains of death' Scripture is every where wont to express 'danger:'" but Ecumen. and Cat. agree with the old reading, ἡ Παλάσι. Possibly the meaning of the whole passage may be somewhat as follows. 'It is something great and sublime that Peter has darkly hinted in saying, "it was not possible that He should be holden of it." And the very expression καθότι implies that there is something to be thought of, (comp. Caten. in l.) Then, in the Old Test., the expression ὡδίνες θανάτου means pains in which death is the agent; but here they are the pangs inflicted upon death itself, travailing in birth with Christ "the first-begotten from the dead." It shews then both that death could not endure to hold Him, and, that Christ being raised from the dead dieth no more. For the assertion, &c. But then, without giving them time to ponder upon the meaning of what he has darkly hinted, he goes off to the Prophet, &c.—On the expression ὡδίνες λέγει Mr. Field, Index to Hom. in Matt. a. v., remarks, that "it is said sometimes of the child-bearing woman herself, as p. 118. B., sometimes of the child born, as p. 375. A. sometimes of the person aiding in the delivery, as Job 39, 2. Hence the obscure passage Acts 2, 34. is to be explained. See Theophylact in l."

conciliate them. Let me be allowed, he says, to speak freely to you of the patriarch David. Remarkable lowliness, in a case where he was giving no hurt, nor was there any reason why the hearers should be angry. For he did not say, This is not said concerning David, but concerning the Christ. But in another point of view: by his reverential expression towards the blessed David, he awed them; speaking of an acknowledged fact as if it were a bold thing to say, and therefore begging them to pardon him for saying it. And hereupon his expression is not simply "concerning David," but concerning the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried: he does not also say, "and is not risen again," but in another way, (though this too would have been no great thing to say,) And his sepulchre is with us unto this day, he has said what comes to the same thing. Then—and even so he does not come to the mention of Christ, but what next?—he goes on with his encomium upon David, Being therefore a prophet, and knowing that with an oath God had sworn unto him. But [2.] this he says, that were it but on account of the honour shewn to David, and the descent from him, they may accept what is said concerning Christ's resurrection, as seeing that it would be an injury to the prophecy, and a derogating from<sup>1</sup> their honour, if this were not the fact. And knowing, <sup>1 τῆς ἐλπίδος</sup> he says, that with an oath God had sworn unto him—<sup>αὐτοῦς</sup> he does not say simply 'promised'—<sup>τιμῆς</sup> of the fruit of his loins after the flesh to raise up Christ, to seat Him upon his throne. Observe how he has again only hinted at what is sublime. For now that he has soothed them with his expression, he confidently adds this: The prophet [saith it] of His resurrection, that neither was His soul left <sup>τ. 31.</sup> in hell, nor did His flesh see corruption. This again is wonderful: it shews that His resurrection was not like that of other men. For though death laid hold on Him, yet it did not its own work then.—And, as regards the sin, he has spoken of that, covertly and darkly; of the punishment, he forbore to add any thing; but that they had slain Him, this he has spoken out; for the rest, he now comes to the sign given by God. And when it is once proved, that He, the slain, was just, was dear to God, then, though thou be silent

HOMIL. VI. of the punishment, be sure that he which did the sin will condemn himself more than ever thou canst condemn him. So then, that he refers all to the Father, is in order that they may receive what is said: and that assertion, Not possible, he fetches in from the prophecy. Well then, let us again look over what has been said.

Recapitulation of v. 22-31. Jesus of Nazareth, a man proved (to be sent) from God unto you: one, of whom, by reason of His works, there can be no doubt; but who, on the contrary, is demonstrated.

John 3, 2. Thus also Nicodemus said, No man can do these miracles which Thou doest.—By miracles, and wonders, and signs which God wrought by Him in the midst of you: not secretly.

Setting out from facts notorious to those whom he was addressing, he then comes to things hidden. Thereupon, [in saying, By the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God,] he shews that it was not because they had the power to do it, and that there was a wisdom and a Divine arrangement in the event, seeing it was from God. He rapidly passes over the

v. 23. unpleasant part, [adding, Whom God raised up, etc.] For it is always a point of great importance with them to shew that He was once dead. Though ye should deny it, says

v. 24. <sup>1</sup> ἐκεῖνοι he<sup>1</sup>, those (ptesent) will bear witness to the fact. [Having loosed the pangs of death.] He that gives Death trouble, may much more give trouble to them that crucified Him: however, nothing of the kind is here said, as that He had power to slay you. Meanwhile<sup>2</sup>, let us also learn thus to hold. For one that is in pain like a woman in travail, does not hold the thing held, and is not active but passive; and

v. 25. makes haste to cast it off. And it is well said: For David saith in reference to Him; that you may not refer that saying to the Prophet.—[Therefore being a Prophet, and knowing, etc.] Do you observe how he now interprets the prophecy, and does not<sup>3</sup> give it bare of comment? How καὶ ἡμεῖς οὕτω.—Edd. τὴν δὲ μανθάνωμεν καὶ ἡμεῖς διὰ τῶν εἰρημέτων τί ἐστι τὸ κατέχειν. If this is: "What is the meaning of the expression κατέχειν, the emphatic καὶ ἡμεῖς is superfluous; and besides, the word κατέχειν does not occur in the text commented upon. Ecum. and the Catena give no help.

did He seat Him upon David's throne? For the kingdom <sup>Acts II.</sup> after the Spirit is in heaven. Observe how, along with the <sup>22—34.</sup> resurrection, he has also declared the kingdom in the fact of His rising again. He shews that the Prophet was under constraint: for the prophecy was concerning Him. Why does he say, not, Concerning His kingdom (it was a great matter), but, Concerning His resurrection? And how did He seat Him upon his (David's) throne? Why, He reigns as King over Jews also, yea, what is much more, over them that crucified Him. For His flesh saw no corruption. This seems to be less than resurrection, but it is the same thing.

This Jesus—observe how he does not call Him otherwise—<sup>v. 33, 34.</sup> hath God raised up: whereof all we are witnesses. Being therefore by the right hand of God exalted: again he takes refuge with the Father, and yet it had been enough to say what precedes: but he knows what a great point this is. Here he has hinted at the Ascension also, and that Christ is in heaven: but neither does he say this openly. And having received, says he, the promise of the Holy Ghost. Observe how, in the beginning of his discourse, he does not say that Jesus Himself had sent It, but the Father: now, however, that he has mentioned His signs and the things done to Him by the Jews, and has spoken of His resurrection, he boldly introduces what he has to say about these matters, again adducing themselves as witnesses by both senses: [He hath shed forth this, which ye do see and hear.] And of the resurrection he has made continual mention, but of their outrageous deed he has spoken once for all. And having received the promise of the Holy Ghost. This again is great. The promise, he says: because [promised] before His Passion. Observe how he now makes it all His, [He hath poured forth this,] covertly making a great point. For if it was He that poured it forth, it is of Him that the Prophet has spoken above, In the last days I will pour forth of supra, My Spirit on My servants, and on Mine handmaids, and I<sup>v. 17.</sup> will do wonders in the heaven above. Observe what he

"And gives it bare (of comment), shewing." Montf. mistranslates γυμνήν ὡς. "nudam exponat," and notices the old reading, (A. B. C.) with the remark, "Unus Codex propter ὅν γυμνήν. Minus recte." But Chrys. is now commenting on v. 30, 31. "Above, St. Peter gave the prophecy by itself: now he adds his own exposition and reasoning, Being therefore a Prophet, &c."

HOMIL. VI. secretly puts into it! But then, because it was a great thing, he again veils it with the expression of His having received of the Father. He has spoken of the good things fulfilled, of the signs; has said, that He is king, the point that touched them; has said, that it is He that gives the Spirit. (For, however much a person may say, if it does not issue in something advantageous, he speaks to no purpose.) Just as John: Matt. 3. 11. The Same, says he, shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost. And it shews that the Cross not only did not make Him less, but rendered Him even more illustrious, seeing that of old God promised it to Him, but now has given it. Or [it may be], the promise which He promised to us. He so foreknew it about to be, and has given it to us greater after the resurrection. And, hath poured it out, he says; not<sup>1</sup> requiring worthiness: and not simply gave, but with abundance. Whence<sup>1</sup> does this appear? Henceforth after the mention of His giving the Spirit, he confidently speaks also of His ascension into heaven; and not only so, but again adducing the witness, and reminding them of that Person concerning Whom Mat. 22. 43. Christ once spake. For not David, says he, ascended into the heavens. [3.] Here he no longer speaks in lowly phrase<sup>2</sup>, having the confidence which results from the things said; nor does he say, Be it permitted me to speak, or the like; But he saith himself; The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit Thou on My right hand, until I make Thine enemies Thy footstool. Now if He be David's Lord, much more shall they not disdain Him. Sit Thou on My right hand: he has set the whole matter here; until I make Thine enemies Thy footstool: here also he has brought upon them a great terror, just as in the beginning he shewed what He does to His friends, what to His enemies. And again, as to the act of subjugation, not to provoke unbelief, he ascribes it to the Father. Since then these are great things that he has uttered,

<sup>3</sup> Here five of our Mss. have μεθ' ὑπερβολῆς, 'hyperbolically:' but the reading of E. μεθ' ὑποστολῆς is attested by Œcumen. and the Catena.

he again brings his discourse down to lowly matters. Let therefore, he says, the whole house of Israel know assuredly: Acts II. 36.
v. 36.
i. e. question ye not, nor doubt ye: then also in the tone of command it follows; that God hath made Him both Lord— this he says from David—and Christ, this from the Psalm<sup>1</sup>: For when it would have been rightly concluded, Let therefore the whole house of Israel know assuredly that He sitteth on the right hand of God, this, which would have been great, he forbears, and brings in a different matter which is much more humble, and the expression, Hath made; i. e. hath ordained: so that there is nothing about<sup>1</sup> communication of<sup>1</sup> substance here, but the expression relates to this which has<sup>13</sup> been mentioned. Even this Jesus, Whom ye crucified. He does well to end with this; thereby agitating their minds. For when he has shewn how great it is, he has then exposed their daring deed, so as to shew it to be greater, and to possess them with terror. For men are not so much attracted by benefits as they are chastened by fear.

But the admirable and great ones, and beloved of God, need none of these motives: men, such as was Paul: not of the kingdom, not of hell, made he account. For this is Rom. 9, indeed to love Christ, this to be no hireling, nor to reckon it<sup>3</sup> a matter of trafficking and trading, but to be indeed virtuous, and to do all for the love of God. Then what tears does it not deserve, when, owing so large a measure, we do not even like traders seek the kingdom of heaven! He promises us so great things, and not even so is He worthy to be heard? What can come up to this enmity<sup>m</sup>! And yet, they that are mad after money-making, though it be with enemies, though it be with slaves, though it be with persons most hostile to them, that they come in contact, though it be with persons utterly evil, if only they expect that they shall be enabled by their means to make money, they will do every thing, will flatter, and be obsequious, and make themselves slaves, and will esteem them more to be revered than all men, to get some advantage out of them: for the

Edd. have, "this he says from David and from the Psalm," after the text.

HOMIL. hope of money does not allow them to give a thought to VI. any such considerations as those. But the Kingdom is not so powerful as money is: nay, rather, not in the smallest proportion as powerful. For<sup>a</sup> it is no ordinary Being that promises: but this is greater than even the Kingdom itself, that we receive it from such a Giver! But now the case is the same as if a king, wishing, after ten thousand other benefits, to make us his heirs and coheirs with his son, [should be despised]: while some captain of a band of robbers, who has done ten thousand wrongs to us and to our parents, and is himself fraught with ten thousand wickednesses, and has utterly marred our honour and our welfare, should, on presenting a single penny, receive our worship. God promises a Kingdom, and is despised: the Devil helps us to hell, and he is honoured! Here God, there Devil. But let us see the difference of the tasks enjoined. For if there were none of these considerations in the case: if it were not, here God, there Devil; not, here one helping to a kingdom, there to a hell: the nature itself of the tasks enjoined were sufficient to induce us to comply with the former. For what does each enjoin? The one<sup>o</sup>, the things which make glorious; the other, the things which put to shame: one, the things which involve in ten thousand calamities and disgraces; the other, the things which have with them abundant refreshment. For Mat. 11, 29. look: the one saith, Learn ye of Me, for I am meek and lowly of heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls: the other saith, Be thou savage, and ungentle, and passionate, and wrathful, and more a wild beast than a man. Let us see which is more useful, which, I pray you, more profitable. 'Speak not of this,' say you<sup>p</sup>. * * * But consider that he is the devil:

<sup>a</sup> In the modern text the connexion is supplied, and the thought expanded. "And yet neither is it any ordinary being that promises it: but One who is beyond comparison greater than the Kingdom itself. Now when the promise is a Kingdom, and God the Giver thereof, it is a great thing, the very receiving from such a Giver."

<sup>o</sup> In the original the pronouns are ἐκεῖνος (God), οὗτος (the Devil; for which however our Ms. have οὐ τὰ καὶ αὐτὰ): then inversely, ἐκεῖνος (the Devil),

οὗτος (God). The modern text reduces the antithesis to regularity by transposing the first and second clause, with ἐκεῖνος, οὗτος, in each member. Mr. Field, however, Hom. in Matt. 709 B. not. has remarked, that St. Chrys. is negligent in his use of these pronouns, and this passage may be added to those cited.

 one<sup>3</sup> seem to be in a kind of solitary retreat, enjoying exceeding quiet; while that of<sup>4</sup> the other is like a market-<sup>4</sup> τουτου place and tumult and the midst of cities, where great is the clamour of those going out, the noise of camels, mules, asses, of men shouting loud to those that meet them, that they may not be trodden under foot: and again, of silver-beaters, of braziers, of men thrusting and pushing this way and that, and some overborne, some overbearing? But the soul of<sup>5</sup> τουτου the former is like some mountain-top, with its delicate air, its pure sunshine, its limpid gushing fountains, its multitude φησιν εἶπες· ἀλλ' ἐννόησον ὅτι διάβολός ἐστιν μάλιστα μὲν ἂν ἐκεῖνο δεῖχθῇ· δεῖ καὶ πόρους ὑποστήναι καὶ πάλιν, κ. τ. λ. The addition in N. is perhaps the result of unintentional repetition. If meant for emendation, it supposes an antithesis of χρῆσθ. and ἐφέλιμότερον: "let us grant which is more serviceable (to others): but (the question is) which is more profitable (to oneself)." This, however, is not what the context requires. Rather it seems that something is omitted after εἶπες: e. g. ἀλλ' ἴδωμεν τί εὐκολώτερον, "But let us see which is more easy." In the following sentence, it is not clear whether μάλιστα μὲν belongs to δεῖ καὶ π. ὅ. "of course, if the former appear to be the case, it is necessary, &c." or, to the preceding clause, as in the translation: "above all (consider that it is the devil who gives the bidding), if that appear to be the case (i. e. that it is the easier of the two): it is needful, &c."—Edd. "But not only this, but bethink you that he indeed is the devil: for above all if that be shewn, again the prize of victory shall be greater."

<sup>2</sup> Πλὴν ὅτι καὶ ἡδονὴν ἔχει, δηλὸν ἐκεῖθεν. We have supplied the interpretation in the translation. 'Εκεῖθεν, i. e. from that saying, "Come unto Me, &c." D. has ἐντεῦθεν: i. e. "is manifest from the following consideration."

<sup>3</sup> Here is another instance of the negligent use of the pronouns ἐκεῖνος and οὗτος noticed above, note o. In the modern text this is altered, besides other changes intended as improvements upon the ornate description following. We have retained the original text throughout.

HOMIL. of charming flowers, while the vernal meads and gardens VI. put on their plumage of shrubs and flowers, and glance with rilling waters: and if any sound is heard there, it is sweet, and calculated to affect the ear with a sense of much delight. For either the warbling birds perch on the outermost spray of the branching trees, and cicadas, nightingales and swallows, blended in one harmony, perform a kind of concerted music; or the zephyr gently stirring the leaves, draws whistling tones from pines and firs, resembling oft the notes of the swan: and roses, violets, and other flowers, gently swayed, and <sup>1</sup>dark-dimpling, shew like a sea just rippled over with gentle undulations. Nay, many are the images one might find. Thus, when one looks at the roses, one shall fancy that he beholds in them the rainbow; in the violets, a waving sea; in the lilies, the sky. But<sup>4</sup> not by the spectacle alone, and the beholding, does such an one then cause delight: but also in the very body of him that looks to the meadow, rather it refreshes him, and causes him to breathe freely, so that he thinks himself more in [4.] heaven than on earth. There is withal a sound of a different kind, when water from the mountain-steep, borne by its own force through ravines, gently plashes over its pebbly bed with lulling noise, and so relaxes our frame with the pleasurable sensations, as quickly to draw over our eyes the soft languor of slumber. You have heard the description with pleasure: perhaps also it has made you enamoured of solitude. But sweeter far than this solitude is the soul of the longsuffering. For it was not for the sake of describing a meadow, nor for the sake of making a display of language, that we have broached this similitude: but the object was,
 that, seeing how great is the delight of the longsuffering, and how, by converse with a longsuffering man, one would be far more both delighted and benefitted, than by frequent-added by a later hand.) But the passage seems to be incurably corrupt, and only so much of the sense can be guessed at, that the delight is said not only to affect the eye, but to be felt through the whole frame of the being such spots, ye may follow after such men. For when not even a breath of violence proceeds from such a soul, but mild and engaging words, then indeed does that gentle softness of the zephyr find its counterpart: entreaties also, devoid of all arrogance, but forming the resemblance to those winged warblers,—how is not this far better? For not the body is fanned by the soft breeze of speech; no, it refreshes our souls * * heated and glowing". No physician could so speedily, by ever so great attention, rid a man of the fever, as a longsuffering man, let him take in hand one passionate and burning with wrath, would cool him down by the breath of his own words. And why do I speak of a physician? Not even iron, made red-hot and dipped into water, so quickly parts with its heat, as does the passionate man when he comes in contact with the soul of the longsuffering. But as, if it chance that singing birds find their way into the market, they go for nothing there, just so is it with our precepts when they light upon souls addicted to wrathful passions. Assuredly, sweeter is gentleness than bitterness and frowardness.—Well, but the one was God's bidding, the other the devil's. Do you see that it was not for nothing that I said, even if there were no devil or God in the case, the things enjoined would be enough in themselves to 'revolt' us? For the one is both agreeable to himself, and serviceable to others, the other displeasing to himself, and hurtful to others. Nothing is more unpleasant than a man in a passion, nothing more noisome, more odious, more shocking, as also nothing more pleasing than one who knows not what it is to be in a passion. Better dwell with a wild beast than with a passionate man. For the beast, when once tamed, abides by its law; but the man, no matter how often you have tamed him, again turns wild, unless* however he should of himself settle down into some such habit (of gentleness).

ξένον... καταστήσας: "having settled himself down into some such habit." But the old reading is preferable. 'You may pacify him again and again, but the fit is subdued for the time, not the temper changed. There will be a fresh outbreak by and bye, unless indeed by self discipline (αὐτόν κατ.) he bring himself into a habit, &c."

HOMIL. For as a bright sunny day and winter with all its gloom, VI. so are the soul of the angry and that of the gentle. However, let us at present look not to the mischievous consequences resulting to others, but to those which affect the persons themselves: though indeed it is also no slight mischief (to one's self) to cause ill to another: for the present, however, let that be the consideration. What executioner with his lash can so lacerate the ribs, what red-hot lancets<sup>1</sup> ever so pierced the body, what madness can so dispossess a man of his natural reason, as anger and rage do? I know many instances of persons engendering diseases by giving loose to anger: and the worst of fevers are precisely these. But if they so injure the body, think of the soul! For do not argue that you do not see the mischief, but rather consider, if that which is the recipient of the malignant passion is so hurt, what must be the hurt sustained by that which engenders it! Many have lost their eyes, many have fallen into most grievous disease. Yet he that bears bravely, shall endure all things easily. But, however, both such are the troublesome tasks the devil enjoins, and the wages he assigns us for these is hell. He is both devil and foe to our salvation, and we rather do his bidding than Christ's, Saviour as He is, and Benefactor and Defender, and speaking as He does such words, which are both sweeter, and more reverend, and more profitable and beneficial, and are both to ourselves and to those who live in our company the greatest of blessings. Nothing worse than anger, my beloved! nothing worse than unseasonable wrath. It will not have any long delay; it is a quick, sharp passion. Many a time has a mere word been blurted out in anger, which needs for its curing a whole lifetime, and a deed been done which was the ruin of the man for life. For the worst of it is this, that in a little moment, and by one act, and by a single word, full oft has it cast us out from the possession of eternal good, and brought to nought a world of pains. Wherefore I beseech you to do all you can to curb this savage beast. Thus far, however, I have spoken concerning meekness and wrath: if one should take in hand to treat of other opposites, as covetousness and the mad passion for glory, contrasted with contempt of wealth and of glory ; intemperance with sobriety ; envy with benevolence ; and to marshal them each against its opposite, Acts then one would know how great the difference. Behold II. 36.

how from the very things enjoined it is plainly shewn, that the one master is God, the other the devil ! Why then, let us do God's bidding, and not cast ourselves into bottomless pits ; but while there is time, let us wash off all that defiles the soul, that we may attain unto the eternal blessings, through the grace and mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ, with Whom to the Father and Holy Ghost together be glory, power, honour, now and ever, and world without end. 1/Amen.

HOMILY VII.

Acts ii. 37.

“this.” heart, and said unto Peter and to the rest of the Apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do ?

Do you see what a great thing gentleness is ? More than any vehemence, it pricks our hearts, inflicts a keener wound. For as in the case of bodies which have become callous, the man that strikes upon them does not affect the sense so powerfully, but if he first mollify them and make them tender, then he pierces them effectually ; so in this instance also, it is necessary first to mollify. But that which softens, is not wrath, not vehement accusation, not personal abuse ; it is gentleness. The former indeed rather aggravate the callousness, this last alone removes it. If then you are desirous to reprove any delinquent, approach him with all possible mildness. For see here ; he gently reminds them of the outrages they have committed, adding no comment ; he declares the gift of God, he goes on to speak of the grace which bore testimony to the event, and so draws out his discourse to a still greater length. So they stood in awe of the gentleness of Peter, in that he, speaking to men who had crucified his Master, and breathed murder against himself and his companions, discoursed to them in the character of an affectionate father and teacher. Not merely were they persuaded ; they even condemned themselves, they came to a sense of their past behaviour. For he gave no room for their anger to be roused, and darken their judgment, but by means of humility he dispersed, as it were, the mist and darkness of their indignation, and then pointed out to them the daring outrage they had committed. For so it is; when we say of ourselves that we are injured, the opposite party endeavour to prove that they have not done the injury; but when we say, we have not been injured, but have rather done the wrong, the others take the contrary line. If, therefore, you wish to place your enemy<sup>11</sup> <sup>els</sup> in the wrong, beware of accusing him; nay, <sup>ἀγῶνα</sup> plead for him, <sup>ἀγῶνι-</sup> he will be sure to find himself guilty. There is a natural <sup>σῶαι</sup> spirit of opposition in man. Such was the conduct of Peter. He did not accuse them harshly; on the contrary, he almost endeavoured to plead for them, as far as was possible. And this was the very reason that he penetrated into their souls. You will ask, where is the proof that they were pricked? In their own words; for what say they? Men and brethren, what shall we do? Whom they had called deceivers, they call brethren: not that hereby they put themselves on an equality with them, but rather by way of attracting their brotherly affection and kindness: and besides<sup>a</sup>, because the Apostles had deigned to call them by this title. And, say they, What shall we do? They did not straightway say, Well then, we repent; but they surrendered themselves to the disciples. Just as a person on the point of shipwreck, upon seeing the pilot, or in sickness the physician, would put all into his hands, and do his bidding in every thing; so have these also confessed, that they are in extreme peril, and destitute of all hope of salvation. They did not say, How shall we be saved? but, What shall we do? Here again Peter, though the question is put to all, is the man to answer. Repent, says he, and be baptized every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ. He does not yet say, Believe, but, Be baptized every one of you. For<sup>b</sup> this they received in baptism. Then he speaks of the gain; For the remission of

[Now when they heard this, etc. Then Peter said unto them, etc.] What had been said was not enough. For those sayings indeed were sufficient to bring them to faith; but these are to shew what things the believer behoves to do. And he said not, In the Cross, but, In the name of Jesus Christ let every one of you be baptized. And he does not put them continually in mind of the Cross, that he may not seem to reproach them, but he says simply, Repent: and why? That we may be punished? No: And let each of you be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins. And yet quite other is the law of this world's tribunals: but in the case of the Gospel<sup>a</sup> proclamation, when the delinquent has confessed, then is he saved! Observe how Peter does not instantly hurry over this, but he specifies also the conditions, and adds, Ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost; an assertion accredited by the fact, that the Apostles themselves had received that gift. [For the promise, etc.] The promise, i. e. the gift of the Holy Ghost<sup>1</sup>. So far, he speaks of the easy part, and that which

* This citation from v. 44. is not misplaced: it refers to the words ἐπὶ τῷ αὐτῷ with which in Chrysostome's copy and many considerable authorities, this verse ended. (Ὁ Κύριος προσε. τ. σωζ. καθ' ἡμέραν ἐπὶ τῷ αὐτῷ. Πέτρος δὲ καὶ ἱ. ἀνέβαινον κ. τ. λ. Lachm.)—In the opening of the next paragraph, the modern text has: "And with many other words he testified." This he says, shewing that what had been said, &c." But it is evident that the recapitulation begins here, with v. 37. and τὰ λεχθέντα, and ἐκείνα, mean the preceding discourse, v. 14—36.; ταῦτα, not "the many other words," v. 40. but, "Repent and be baptized."

has with it a great gift; and then he leads them to practice: Acts for it will be to them a ground of earnestness, to have tasted <sup>II.</sup> 37—44. already of those so great blessings: [and with many other v. 40. words did he testify, etc.] Since, however, the hearer would desire to learn what was the sum and substance of these further words, he tells us this: [Saying, save yourselves from this untoward generation.].—[They then, that v. 41. gladly received his words, etc.] they approved of what had been said, although fraught with terror, and after their assent given, proceed at once to baptism<sup>a</sup>. And they continued, it v. 42. is written, stedfastly in the doctrine (or, 'teaching') of the Apostles: for it was not for one day, no, nor for two or three days that they were under teaching, as being persons who had gone over to a different course of life<sup>b</sup>. [And they continued with one accord in the Apostles' doctrine, etc.] The expression is not, ὁμοῦ, 'together,' but, ὁμοθυμαδὸν, with one accord; (and daily, he says [afterwards], they were continuing with one accord in the temple,) i. e. with one soul<sup>c</sup>. And here again in his conciseness, he does not relate the teaching given; for as young children, the Apostles nourished them with spiritual food. And fear came upon every soul: v. 43. clearly, of those, as well, who did not believe; namely, upon seeing so great a change all at once effected, and besides in consequence of the miracles. [And all that believed were v. 44. together, and had all things in common, etc.] They are all become angels on a sudden; all of them continuing in prayer and hearing, they saw that spiritual things are common, and no one there has more than other, and they speedily came, ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ, together, to the same thing in common, even to the μὴ ψυχῇ. B. C. F. D. St. Chrys. here returns to v. 42. in which he read in his copy the word ὁμοθυμαδόν. Commenting on that expression, he refers to v. 46. (as his remark on that verse above was that they were taught, τῆς διδασκαλίας ἀπέλανον, in the Temple.) Or perhaps this clause may have been added by the scribe, because he did not find προσκαρτ. ὁμοθ. in v. 42. but did find it in v. 46.—E. "But he says not ὁμοῦ, but ὁμοθ., since it is possible to be ὁμοῦ yet not ὁμοθ., when people are divided in opinion. And with words he exhorted. And here again, &c." So Edd.

HOMIL. VII. imparting to all<sup>1</sup>. And all the believing, it says, were ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ: and to see that this does not mean that they were together in place, observe what follows, [And had all things common.] All, it says: not one with the exception of another. This was an angelic commonwealth, not to call any thing of theirs their own. Forthwith the root of evils was cut out. By what they did, they shewed what they had heard: this was that which he said, Save yourselves from this untoward generation.—And daily continuing with one accord in the temple. Since they are become three thousand, they take them abroad now: and<sup>1</sup> withal, the boldness imparted by the Spirit being great: and daily they went up as to a sacred place, as frequently we find Peter and John doing this: for at present they disturbed none of the Jewish observances. And this honour too passed over to the place; the eating in the house. In what house? In the Temple<sup>1</sup>. Observe the increase of piety. They cast away their riches, and rejoiced, and had great gladness, for greater were the riches they received<sup>1</sup> without labour. None reproached, none envied, none grudged; no pride, no contempt was there. As children they did indeed account themselves to be under teaching: as new born babes, such was their disposition. Yet why use this faint image? If you remember how it was when God shook our city with an earthquake, how subdued all men were. Such was the case then with those converts. No knavery, no villainy then: such is the effect of fear, of affliction! No<sup>m</sup> talk of “mine” and “thine” then. Hence gladness waited at their table; no one seemed to eat of his own, or of another's;—I grant this may seem a riddle. Neither did they consider their brethren's property foreign to themselves; it was <sup>Acts 11.</sup> the property of a Master; nor again deemed <sup>44—47.</sup> they ought their own, all was the brethren's. The poor man knew no shame, the rich no haughtiness. This is gladness. The latter deemed himself the obliged and fortunate party; the others felt themselves as honoured herein, and closely were they bound together. For indeed, because when people make doles of money, there are apt to be insults, pride, grudging; therefore says the Apostle, Not grudgingly, <sup>2 Cor. 9, 7.</sup> or of necessity.—[With gladness and simplicity of heart, etc.] See of how many things he bears witness to them! Genuine faith, upright conduct, perseverance in hearing, in prayers, in singleness, in cheerfulness. [Praising God.] <sup>v. 47.</sup> Two things there were which might deject them; their [3.] abstemious living, and the loss of their property. Yet on both these accounts did they rejoice. [And having favour with all the people.] For who but must love men of this character, as common fathers? They conceived no malice towards each other; they committed all to the grace of God. [With all the people.] Fear there was none; yea, though they had taken their position in the midst of dangers*. By singleness, however, he denotes their entire virtue, far surpassing their contempt of riches, their abstinence, and their perseverance in prayer. For thus also they offered pure praise to God: this is to praise God. But observe also here how they immediately obtain their reward. Having favour with all the people. They were engaging, and highly beloved. For who would not prize and admire their simplicity of character; who would not be linked to one in whom was nothing underhand? To whom too does salvation belong, but to these? To whom those great marvels? Was it not to shepherds that the Gospel was first preached? and to Joseph<sup>p</sup>, being a man of simple

HOMIL. mind, insomuch that he did not let a suspicion of adultery VII. frighten him into doing wrong? Did not God elect rustics, Prov. those artless men? For it is written, Blessed is every simple 11, 25. soul. And again, He that walketh simply, walketh surely.
 Prov. 10, 9. 'True,' you will say, 'but prudence also is needed.' Why, what is simplicity, I pray you, but prudence? For when you suspect no evil, neither can you fabricate any: when you have no annoyances, neither can you remember injuries.
 Has any one insulted you? You were not pained. Has any one reviled you? You were nothing hurt. Has he envied you? Still you had no hurt. Simplicity is a high road to true philosophy. None so beautiful in soul as the simple. For as in regard of personal appearance, he 'serious that is sullen, and downcast, and 'reserved, even if he be good-looking, loses much of his beauty; while he that relaxes his countenance, and gently smiles, enhances his good looks; so in respect of the soul, he that is reserved, if he have ten thousand good points, disfigures them; but the frank and simple, just the reverse. A man of this last description may be safely made a friend, and when at variance easily reconciled. No need of guards and out-posts, no need of chains and fetters with such an one; but great is his own freedom, and that of those who associate with him. But what, you will say, will such a man do if he fall among wicked people? God, Who has commanded us to be simple-minded, will stretch out His hand. What was more guileless than David? What more wicked than Saul?
 Yet who triumphed? Again, in Joseph's case; did not he in simplicity approach his master's wife, she him with wicked art? Yet what, I pray, was he the worse? Furthermore, what more simple than was Abel? what more malicious than Cain? And Joseph again, had he not dealt artlessly with his brethren? Was not this the cause of his eminence, that he spoke out unsuspiciously, while they received his words in malice? He declared once and again his dreams unreservedly; and then again he set off to them carrying provisions; he used no caution; he committed all to God:
 nay, the more they held him in the light of an enemy, the more did he treat them as brothers. God had power not to have suffered him to fall into their hands; but that the wonder might be made manifest, how, though they do their worst, he shall be higher than they: though the blow do come upon him, it comes from another, not from himself. / On the contrary, the wicked man strikes himself first, and none other than himself. "For<sup>a</sup> alone," it is said, "shall he bear his troubles." Ever in him the soul is full of dejection, his thoughts being ever entangled: whether he must hear ought or say ought, he does all with complaints, with accusation. Far, very far from such do friendship and harmony make their abode: but fightings are there, and enmities, and all unpleasantness. They that are such suspect even themselves. To these not even sleep is sweet, nor any thing else. And have they a wife also, lo, they are enemies and at war with all: what endless jealousies, what unceasing fear! Aye, the wicked, πονηρὸς, has his name from πονῆν, 'to have trouble.' And, indeed, thus the Scripture is ever calling 'wickedness' by the name of labour; as, for instance, Under his tongue is toil and labour; and again, In the midst of them is toil and labour.

Now if any one should wonder, whence those who had at first been of this last class, now are so different, let him learn that affliction was the cause, affliction, that schoolmistress of heavenly wisdom, that mother of piety. When riches were done away with, wickedness also disappeared. True, say you, for this is the very thing I am asking about; but whence comes all the wickedness there is now? How is it that it came into the minds of those three thousand and five thousand straightway, to choose virtue, and that they simultaneously became Christian philosophers, whereas now hardly one is to be found? how was it that they then were in such harmony? What was it, that made them resolute and active? What was it that so suddenly inflamed them? The reason is, that they drew near with much piety; that honours were not so sought after as they are now; that they transferred their thoughts to things future, and looked for nothing of things present. This is the sign of an ardent mind, to encounter perils; this was their idea of Christianity. We take a different view, we seek our comfort here. The result were forthwith baptized. They did not speak those cold words which we do now, nor did they contrive delays; and yet they had heard all the requirements: but that word, Save yourselves from this generation, made them to be not sluggish; rather they welcomed the exhortation; and that they did welcome it, they proved by their deeds, they shewed what manner of men they were. They entered at once the lists, and took off the coat; whereas we do enter, but we intend to fight with our coat on. This is the cause that our antagonist has so little trouble, for we get entangled in our own movements, and are continually thrown down. We do precisely the same thing as he who, having* to cope with a man frantic, breathing fire; and seeing him, a professed wrestler, covered with dust, tawny, stripped, clotted with dirt from the sand and sun, and running down with sweat and oil and dirt; himself, smelling of perfumes, should put on his silken garments, and his gold shoes, and his robe hanging down to his heels, and his golden trinkets on the head, and so descend into the arena, and grapple with him. Such a one will not only be impeded, but being taken up with the sole idea of not staining or rending his fine clothes, will tumble at the very first onset, and withal will suffer that which he chiefly dreaded, the damage of those his fond delights. The <sup>Acts</sup> time for the contest is come, and say, are you putting on II. 47. your silks? It is the time of exercise, the hour of the race, and are you adorning yourself as for a procession? Look not to outward things, but to the inward. For by the thoughts about these things the soul is hampered on all sides, as if by strong cords, so that she cannot let you raise a hand, or contend against the adversary; and makes you soft and effeminate. One may think himself, even when released from all these ties, well off, to be enabled to conquer that impure power. And on this account Christ too did not allow the parting with riches alone to suffice, but what saith He? Sell whatsoever thou hast, and give to the poor, and come and follow Me. Now if, even when we cast away our riches, we <sup>Mark</sup> are not yet in a safe position, but stand still in need of some <sup>10, 21.</sup> further art and close practice; much more, if we retain them, shall we fail to achieve great things, and, instead thereof, become a laughing-stock to the spectators, and to the evil one himself. For even though there were no devil, though there were none to wrestle with us, yet ten thousand roads on all sides lead the lover of money to hell. Where now are they who ask, 'why the devil was made? Behold here <sup>1</sup> διὰ τὸ the devil has no hand in the work, we do it all our- <sup>δὲ</sup> δὲ selves. Of a truth they of the hills might have a right <sup>γὰρ</sup> γὰρ to speak thus, who after they had given proof of their temperance, their contempt of wealth and disregard of all such things, have infinitely preferred to abandon father, and houses, and lands, and wife, and children. Yet, they are the last to speak so: but the men who at no time ought to say it, these do say it. Those are indeed wrestlings with the devil; these he does not think worth entering into. You will say, But it is the devil who instils this same covetousness. Well, flee from it, do not harbour it, O man. Suppose now, you see one flinging out filth from some upper story, and at the same time a person seeing it thrown out, yet standing there and receiving it all on his head: you not only do not pity him, but you are angry, and tell him it serves him right; and, 'Do not be a fool,' every one cries out to him, and lays the blame not so much on the other for shooting out the filth, as on him for letting it come on

HOMIL. him. But now, you know that covetousness is of the devil ;
VII. you know that it is the cause of ten thousand evils ; you see him flinging out, like filth, his noisome imaginations ; and do you not see that you are receiving on your bare head his nastiness, when it needed but to turn aside a little to escape it altogether ? Just as our man by shifting his position would have escaped ; so, do you refuse to admit such imaginations, ward off the lust. And how am I to do this ? you will ask. Were you a Gentile, and had eyes for things present alone, the matter perhaps might be one of considerable difficulty, and yet even the Gentiles have achieved as much ; but you—a man in expectation of heaven and heavenly bliss—and you to ask, How am I to repel bad thoughts ? Were I saying the contrary, then you might doubt : did I say, covet riches, ‘ How shall I covet riches,’ you might answer, ‘ seeing such things as I do ?’ Tell me, if gold and precious stones were set before you, and I were to say, Desire lead, would there not be reason for hesitation ? For you would say, How can I ? But if I said, Do not desire it ; this had been plainer to understand. I do not marvel at those who despise, but at those who despise not riches. This is the character of a soul exceeding full of stupidity, no better than flies and gnats, a soul crawling upon the earth, wallowing in filth, destitute of all high ideas. What is it you say ? Are you destined to inherit eternal life ; and do you say, how shall I despise the present life for the future ? What, can the things be put in competition ? You are to receive a royal vest ; and say you, How shall I despise these rags ? You are going to be led into the king’s palace ; and do you say, How shall I despise this present hovel ? Of a truth, we ourselves are to blame in every point, we who do not choose to let ourselves be stirred up ever so little. For the willing have succeeded, and that with great zeal and facility. Would that you might be persuaded by our exhortation, and succeed too, and become imitators of those who have been successful, through the grace and mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ, with Whom to the Father and the Holy Ghost together be glory, and power, and honour, now and ever, and world without end. Amen.

HOMILY VIII.

ACTS iii. 1.

Now Peter and John went up together into the temple, at the hour of prayer, being the ninth hour.

EVERY where we find these two Apostles in great harmony together. To him Simon Peter beckoned. These two also John<sup>13</sup>, came together to the sepulchre. And concerning John, <sup>24</sup>Ib. 20, Peter said unto Christ, And what shall this man do? Now <sup>3 et seq.</sup>Ib. 21, as for the other miracles, the writer of this book omits them; <sup>21</sup>Ib. 21, but he mentions the miracle by which they were all<sup>a</sup> put in commotion. Observe again that they do not come to them purposely; so clear were they of ambition, so closely did they imitate their Master. Why now did they go up to the temple? Did they still live as Jews? No, but for <sup>1</sup>ex-<sup>1</sup>χρησί-<sup>2</sup>μους expediency. A miraculous sign again takes place, which both confirms the converts, and draws over the rest; and such, as they were a sign for having wrought<sup>b</sup>. The disease was in the nature of the man, and baffled the art of medicine. He had been forty years lame, as the writer says afterwards, and <sup>ch. 4, 20.</sup> no one during all that time had cured him. And the most obstinate diseases are those which are born with men. It was a great calamity, insomuch that even to provide for himself his necessary sustenance was impossible for him. The man was conspicuous both from the place, and from his malady.

<sup>a</sup> Ecumen. has preserved the true reading: ἀφ' οὗ πάντες ἐκινήθησαν. Mss. and Cat. ἐκίνησαν. (N. in the margin, by a later hand, ἐνίκησε.) E. and Edd. δὲ πολλὰν εἶχε τὴν ἐκπληξιν

And Peter fastening his eyes upon him, with John, said, Look on us.* Yet, not even so were the man's thoughts elevated, but he persisted in his importunity. For such is poverty; upon a refusal, it compels people still to persist. Let this put us to shame who fall back in our prayers. But observe, I pray you, Peter's gentleness: for he said, Look on us. So truly did their very bearing, of itself, betoken their

Often He healed by word, often by an act, often also He stretched forth the hand, where men were somewhat weak in faith, that the cure might not appear to be spontaneous. And he took him by the right hand, and lifted him up. This act made manifest the Resurrection, for it was an image of the Resurrection. And immediately his
- v. 8. feet and ankle bones received strength. And he leaping up stood, and walked. Perhaps it was by way of trying himself that he put it thus to further proof, whether perchance the thing done might not be to no purpose. His feet were weak; it was not that he had lost them. Some say that he did not even know how to walk<sup>d</sup>. And entered with them into the temple. Of a truth it was marvellous. The Apostles do not urge him; but of his own accord he follows, by the act of following pointing out his benefactors. *And leaping and praising God; not admiring them, but God that wrought by them. [Now Peter and John went up together into the temple, Acts III. 2—8. etc.] You observe how they continued in prayer. The ninth hour: there they prayed together. [And a certain man, etc.] The man was in the act of being carried at that instant. [Whom they laid daily:] (his bearers carried him away :) [at the gate, etc.] just when people went into the temple. And that you may not suppose that they carried him for some other purpose, but that it was in order that he might receive alms, hear what the writer says: so that he might receive alms of those entering into the temple. And this is the reason why he also makes mention of the places, to give evidence of what he relates. 'And how was it,' you may ask, 'that they did not present him to Christ? Perhaps they were certain unbelieving men, that haunted the temple, as in fact neither did they present him to the Apostles, when they saw them entering, after having done such great miracles. He asked, it is written, to receive alms. Their bearing marked them as certain devout and righteous men. [And Peter fastening his eyes upon him, with John, said, etc.] / And observe how John is every where silent, while Peter makes excuse for him also: Silver and gold, he says, have I none. He does not say, I have none here, as we are wont to speak, but absolutely, I have none. 'What then?' he might say, 'do you take no notice of me, your suppliant?' Not so, but of what I have, receive thou. Do you remark how unassuming Peter is, how he makes no display even to the object of his beneficence? [In the name, etc. And he took him by the hand, etc.] And the mouth and the hand did all. Such sort of persons were the Jews; lame, and the right thing being to ask for health, these same ask for money, grovelling on the ground: for this it was that

In the old text the clause αὐτὸν βαστάζοντες ἀπ' ἡμεραν (which should be οἱ βαστ. αὐτὸν) seems meant to explain καθ' ἡμέραν: they bore him daily, and the same persons carried him away.

But the meaning seems rather to be: "See here an emblem of the Jews. Lame, and needing but, &c."

HOMIL. they beset the temple—to get money. What then does Peter?

VIII.

He did not despise him; he did not look about for some rich subject; he did not say, If the miracle is not done<sup>1</sup> to some great one, nothing great is done: he did not look for some honour from him, no, nor heal him in the presence of people; for the man was at the entrance, not where the multitude were, that is, within. But Peter sought no such object; nor upon entering did he proclaim the matter: no, it was by his bearing that he attracted the lame man to ask. And the wonder is, that he believed so readily. For those who are set free from diseases of long standing, hardly believe their very eye-sight. Once healed, he

v. 8. remains with the Apostles, giving thanks to God. And he entered, it is said, with them into the temple, walking, and [2.] leaping, and praising God. Observe how restless he is, in the eagerness of his delight, at the same time shutting the mouths of the Jews. Also, that he leaped, was to prevent the suspicion of hypocrisy; for after all, this was beyond the possibility of deception. For if previously he was totally unable to walk, even when hunger pressed hard, (and indeed he would not have chosen to share with his bearers the proceeds of his begging, if he had been able to manage for himself,) this holds still more in the present case. And how should he have feigned in behalf of those who had given him no alms? But the man was grateful, even after his recovery. And thus on either side his faith is shewn, both by his thankfulness, and by the recent event.

He was so<sup>2</sup> well known to all, that they recognised him.

v. 9. And all the people, it says, saw him walking and praising God; and they recognised<sup>3</sup> that it was he which sat for alms at the Beautiful gate of the temple. It is well said, they recognised, inasmuch as he was one unknown now by reason of what had happened: for we use this term with regard

him walking and leaping, they found it difficult to believe that it was he, and yet they could not doubt it. This is well denoted by ἐπεγίνωσκον: for we use this word, ἐπὶ τῶν μάλιστα γνωρίζομένων: strange as it was, they were satisfied that it was he, the man whom they all knew so well.

to objects, which we find a difficulty in recognising. <sup>Acts III. 8-12.</sup> [And they were filled with wonder and amazement at that which had happened unto him.] Needs must it be believed that <sup>b</sup> the name of Christ remits sins, seeing it produces even such effects as this. And as he held Peter and John, <sup>v. 11.</sup> all the people came together at the porch that is called Solomon's, greatly wondering. From his good feelings and love towards the Apostles, the lame man would not leave them; perhaps he was thanking them openly, and praising them. And all the people, it is said, ran together unto them. And when Peter saw them, he answered. Again <sup>v. 12.</sup> it is he who acts, and addresses the people.

And in the former instance, it was the circumstance of the tongues that aroused them to hearing, now it was this miracle; then, he took occasion to speak from their accusations; now, from their supposition. Let us then consider, in what this address differs from the former, and in what it agrees with that. The former was held in a house, before any one has come over, and before they themselves have wrought any thing; this, when all are wondering, and the healed man is standing by; when none doubt, as in the other case, where some said, These men <sup>Acts 2, 13.</sup> are full of new wine. At the one, he was surrounded by all the Apostles as he spoke; but at this, he has John alone; for by this time he is bold, and become more energetic. Such is the nature of virtue; once started, it advances, and never stops. Observe also how it was divinely ordered, that the miracle should take place in the temple, that others also might wax bold, while the Apostles work, not <sup>1</sup> in holes <sup>eis κα- ταδύσεις</sup> and corners, and in secret: though not in the interior of the temple either, where the greater number were. How then, I pray you, was it believed? The man himself who was healed proclaimed the benefit. For there was no reason why he should lie, nor why he should have joined a different set of people<sup>1</sup>. Either then it was because of the spaciousness ἄλλους τινὰς ἦλθεν. It is not clear who are the ἄλλοι τινὰς: and something is wanting. In fact, this part of the Homily is very defective. The next sentence seems to refer to the mention of the porch called Solomon's, but evidently supposes some-

HOMIL. VIII. of the place, that he there wrought the miracle, or because the spot was retired. And observe the event. They went up for one object, and they accomplished another. Thus also did Cornelius: he prayed and fasted<sup>1</sup> * * *. But hitherto they always call Him, "of Nazareth." In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, said Peter, walk. For in the first instance, the thing required was, that He should be believed in.

Let us not, I pray you, give over at the beginning of the story<sup>2</sup>: and if one has named some particular achievement of virtue, and then has dropt it for a while, let us begin over again. If we get into<sup>3</sup> the right mood, we shall soon arrive at the end, soon reach the summit. For earnestness, it is said, begets earnestness, and dulness begets dulness. He who has effected some little reformation, thereby receives encouragement to approach greater things, and thence again to go on something more than that; and just as it is with fire, the more wood it lays hold on, the more vehement it becomes, so likewise zeal, the more pious reflections it kindles, the more effectually is it armed against their opposites. As, for example: There are set in us, like so many thorns, perjury, falsehood, hypocrisy, deceit, dishonesty, abusiveness, scoffing, buffoonery, indecency, scurrility; again under another head, covetousness, rapacity, injustice, calumny, insidiousness: again, wicked lust, uncleanness, lewdness, fornication, adultery; again, envy, emulation, anger, wrath, rancour, revenge, blasphemy, and numberless others. If we effect a reformation in the first instances, not only in them will the success have been achieved, but through them in the following cases also. For reason has then gained more strength to overthrow those other vices. For instance, if he, who has frequently sworn, once extirpates that satanic habit, he has not only thing preceding: e. g. 'The miracle was performed at the Beautiful Gate, beside which was the Porch called Solomon's.'

ματος, can only mean, In the beginning of the narrative (of this miracle). It seems that the case of this man, who at first lies at the gate of the temple, unable to stir, and in the end, enters with the Apostles walking and leaping and praising God, furnished the theme for the ethical part of the discourse. 'There is the like cure for our souls: let us not give over for want of success in the first attempt, but begin again after every failure.'

gained this point, but a habit of piety in other respects will have been brought in. For no one, I suppose, averse to swearing would easily consent to do any other wicked act; he will feel a reverence for the virtue already acquired. Just as the man who wears a beautiful robe, will blush to roll himself in the mire; so is it also here. From this beginning he will come to learn not to be angry, not to strike, not to insult. For if once he has come right in little matters, he whole affair is done. Often, however, something of this sort takes place, that a person has once reformed, and then again through carelessness falls back into the old sins but too readily, so that the case becomes irremediable. For instance, we have made it a law to ourselves not to swear; we have got on well, for some three, or even four days; after that, being hard put to it, we scattered away the whole of our collected gain; we then fall into indolence and recklessness. Still it is not right to give over; one must set to work zealously again. For it is said, he that has built up a house, and then sees his building pulled down, will have less spirit for building again. Yes, but for all this, one must not be dispirited, but must once more set to work zealously.

Let us then lay down daily laws for ourselves. For a [3.] time let us begin with the easier. Let us retrench all that superfluity of oaths, and put a bridle on our tongues; let no one swear by God. Here is no outlay, here is no fatigue, here is no cost of time. It is sufficient to will, and all is done. It is a matter of habit. I beseech and entreat you, let us contribute thus much of zeal. Tell me, if I had bid you contribute your money, would not each one of you readily cast in according to his ability? If you saw me in extreme danger, would you not, if it had been possible, have cut off your own flesh to give me? Well, I am in danger now, and in great danger, such indeed that, were I withal confined to a dungeon, or had I received ten thousand stripes, or were a convict in the mines, I could not suffer more. Reach me then the hand. Consider how great is the danger, that I should not have been able to reform this which is least: I say 'least' in regard to the labour required. What shall I have to say hereafter, when thus called to account? 'Why did you not remonstrate? why did you not enjoin? why did you not lay HOMIL. the law before them? why did you not check the disobedient?

VIII.

It will not be enough for me to say, that I did admonish. It will be answered, 'You ought to have used more vehement rebuke; since Eli also admonished.' But God forbid I should compare you with Eli's sons. Indeed, he did admonish them, 1 Sam. 2, 24. and say, Nay, my sons, do not so; evil is the report that I hear of you. But subsequently the Scripture saith, that he did not admonish his sons: since he did not admonish them severely, or with threats. For is it not strange indeed, that in the synagogues of the Jews the laws are in such force, and whatever the teacher enjoins is performed; while here we are thus despised and rejected? It is not my own glory that I care for, (my glory is your good report,) but it is for your salvation. Every day we lift up our voice, and shout in your ears. But there is none to hear. Still we take no strong measures. I fear we shall have to give an account at the coming Day of this excessive and unseasonable leniency.

Wherefore, with a loud and clear voice, I proclaim to all and testify, that those who are notorious for this trans-Matt. 5, gression, who utter words which come of the evil one, (for 37. such is swearing,) shall not step over the threshold of the Church. Let this present month be the time allowed you for reforming in this matter. Talk not to me, 'Necessity of business compels me to use oaths, else people do not believe me.' To begin with this, retrench those oaths which come merely of habit. I know many will laugh, but it is better to be laughed at now, than wept for hereafter. They will laugh, who are mad. For who, I ask, in his right mind would laugh at the keeping of the commandment? But suppose they do; why, it will not be at us, but at Christ, that such men will laugh. You shudder at the word! I knew you would. Now if this law were of my making, at me would be the laughing; but if Another be the Lawgiver, the jeering passes over to Him. Yes, and Christ was once spit upon, and smitten with the palm, smitten upon the face. 1 Cor. 4, 13. Now also He bears with this, and it is no wonder! For this, hell is prepared; for this, the worm that dieth not. Behold, again I say and testify; let him laugh that will, let him scoff that listeth. Hereunto are we set, to be laughed at and mocked, to suffer all things. We are the offscouring of the world, as blessed Paul says. If any man refuse to conform to this order, that man I, by my word, as with a trumpet's blast, do prohibit to set foot over the Church's threshold, be he prince, be he even the crowned head. Either depose me from this station, or if I am to remain, expose me not to danger. I cannot bear to ascend this throne, without effecting some great reformation. For if this be impossible, it is better to stand below. Nothing more wretched than a ruler, who does his people no good. Do exert yourselves, and attend to this, I entreat you; and let us strive, and of a surety more will come of it. Fast, entreat God, (and we will do the same with you,) that this pernicious habit may be eradicated. It is no great matter<sup>1</sup>, to become teachers to the world; no small honour to have it said every where, that really in this city there is not a man that swears. If this come to pass, you will receive the reward not only of your own good works; indeed what I am to you, this you will become to the world. Assuredly others also will emulate you; assuredly you will be a candle set upon a candlestick.

And is this, you will say, the whole matter? No, this is not all, but this is a beginning of other virtues. He who swears not, will certainly attain unto piety in other respects, whether he will or not, by dint of self-respect and awe. But you will urge that most men do not keep to it, but fall away. Well, better one man that doeth the will of the Lord, than ten thousand transgressors. In fact, hereby is every thing subverted, every thing turned upside down, I mean, because after the fashion of the Theatre we desire numbers, not a select number. For what indeed will a multitude be able to profit? Would you learn, that it is the saints, not the numbers, which make the multitude? Lead out to war ten hundred thousand men, and one saint, and let us see who achieves the most? Joshua the son of Nun went out to war, and alone achieved all; the rest were of no use. <sup>1</sup>Wouldest

VIII. the will of God, is no better than a thing of nought? I wish indeed, and desire, and with pleasure would be torn in pieces, to adorn the Church with a multitude, yea, but a select multitude; yet if this be impossible, that the few should be select, is my desire. Do you not see, that it is better to possess one precious stone, than ten thousand farthing-pieces? Do you not see that it is better to have the eye sound, than to be loaded with flesh, and yet deprived of sight? Do you not see that it is better to have one healthy sheep, than ten thousand with the murrain; that fine children, though few, are better, than many children diseased withal; that in the Kingdom there will be few, but in hell many? What have I to do with a multitude? what profit therein? None. Rather they are a plague to the rest. It is as if one who had the option of ten healthy persons or ten thousand sick folks, should take to himself the latter in addition to the ten. The many who do nothing well, will avail us only for punishment hereafter, and disgrace for the time being. For no one will urge it as a point in our favour that we are many; we shall be blamed for being unprofitable. In fact, this is what men always tell us, when we say, We are many; 'aye, but bad,' they answer.

Behold again: I give warning, and proclaim with a loud voice, let no one think it a laughing matter: I will exclude and prohibit the disobedient; and as long as I sit on this throne, I will give up not one of its rights. If any one depose me from it, then I am no longer responsible; as long as I am responsible, I cannot disregard them; on account not of my own punishment, but of your salvation. For I do exceedingly long for your salvation. To advance it, I endure pain and vexation. But yield your obedience, that both here and hereafter you may receive a plentiful reward, and that we may in common reap eternal blessings; through the grace and mercy of the only-begotten Son of God; to Whom with the Father and the Holy Ghost be glory, power, and honour, now and ever, world without end. Amen.

HOMILY IX.

ACTS iii. 12.

And when Peter saw it, he answered unto the people, Ye men of Israel, why marvel ye at this, or why look ye so earnestly on us, as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk?

THERE is greater freedom of speech in this harangue, than in the former. Not that he was afraid on the former occasion, but the persons whom he addressed there, being jesters and scoffers, would not have borne it. Hence in the beginning of that address he also bespeaks their attention by his preamble; Be this known unto you, and ch. 2, 14. hearken to my words. But here there is no need of this management<sup>1</sup>. For his hearers were not in a state of indifference. The miracle had aroused them all; they were even full of fear and amazement. Wherefore also there was no need of beginning at that point, but rather with a different topic; by which, in fact, he powerfully conciliated them, namely, by rejecting the glory which was to be had from them. For nothing is so advantageous, and so likely to pacify the hearers, as to say nothing about oneself of an honourable nature, but, on the contrary, to obviate all surmise of wishing to do so. And, in truth, much more did they increase their glory by despising glory, and shewing that what had just taken place was no human act, but a Divine work; and that it was their part to join with the beholders in admiration, rather than to receive it from them. Do you see how clear of all ambition he is, and how he repels the honour paid to him? In the same manner also did the ancient

Homil. fathers; for instance, Daniel said, Not for any wisdom that 1 X. is in me. And again Joseph, Do not interpretations belong Dan. 2, to God? And David, When the lion and the bear came, in
 30. the name of the Lord I rent them with my hands. And so
 Gen. 11, 8. likewise here the Apostles, Why look ye so earnestly on us, 1 Sam. 17, 34. as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk? Nay, not even this*; for not by our own

v. 13. merit did we draw down the Divine influence. The God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob, the God of our fathers.

But at this point he proceeds to enlarge upon the outrage, and exalts the heinousness of the deed, no longer, as before, throwing a veil over it. This he does, wishing to work upon them more powerfully. For the more he proved them accountable, the better his purpose were effected. Hath glorified, he says, His Servant Jesus, Whom ye delivered up, and denied Him in the presence of Pilate, when he was determined to let Him go. The charge is twofold: Pilate was desirous to let
 v. 14. 15. Him go; you would not, when he was willing. But ye denied the Holy One and the Just, and desired a murderer to be granted unto you; and killed the Prince (or Author) of Life: Whom God hath raised from the dead; whereof we are witnesses. Ye desired a robber instead of Him. He shews the great aggravation of the act. As he has them under his hand, * 'Αλλ' οὐδὲ τοῦτο· οὐ γὰρ, κ. τ. λ. This seems to refer to εὐσεβεία: 'but not by our holiness any more than by our own power.' The modern text: Οὐδὲ τοῦτο ἡμετέρον, φησὶν οὐ γὰρ, κ. τ. λ. 'Not even this is our own, he says; for not, &c.'

<sup>b</sup> or, Child, τὸν παῖδα. Œcumen. seems to have considered this as a lowly title, for he says: 'And of Christ he speaks lowly, τῷ προσθεῖναι, τὸν παῖδα.' But to this remark he adds, 'For That which in Itself is glorified, can receive no addition of glory.'—Below, καθὼς ἐν τῇ προομιᾷ may refer to the prefatory matter (after the citation from Joel) of the sermon in ch. ii.: see below, in the Recapitulation, whence we might here supply, ἀνωτέρω ἔλεγεν, "Ἰησοῦν τὸν Ναζ. κ. τ. λ." 'As in the opening address [above, he said: "Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God, etc."]. Or, 'like as in the opening words of this discourse he speaks in lowly manner of themselves.' Œcumen. "He still keeps to lowlier matters, both as to themselves, and as to Christ. As to themselves, in saying that not by their own power they wrought the miracle. As to Christ, &c." he now strikes hard. The Prince of Life, he says. In these words he establishes the doctrine of the Resurrection. Whom <sup>III.</sup> <sub>12—19.</sub> God hath raised from the dead. 'Whence doth this appear?' He no longer refers to the Prophets, but to himself, inas- ch. 2, 26. much as now he has a right to be believed. Before, when he affirmed that He was risen, he adduced the testimony of David; now, having said it, he alleges the College of Apostles. Whereof we are witnesses, he says.

And His name, through faith in His name, hath made <sup>v. 16.</sup> this man strong, whom ye see and know: yea, the faith which is by Him hath given him this perfect soundness in the presence of you all. 'Seeking to declare the matter,' <sup>1</sup> he straightway brings forward the sign: In the presence, <sup>1</sup> he says, of you all. As he had borne hard upon them, and had shewn that He Whom they crucified had risen, again he relaxes, by giving them the power of repentance; And now, <sup>v. 17.</sup> brethren, I wot that through ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers. This is one ground of excuse. The second<sup>e</sup> is of a different kind. As Joseph speaks to his <sup>Gen. 45,</sup> brethren, God did send me before you; what in the former <sup>5.</sup> speech he had briefly said, in the words, Him, being de- <sup>ch. 2, 23.</sup> livered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken,—this he here enlarges upon: But <sup>v. 18.</sup> what God before had shewed by the mouth of all His Prophets, that His Christ should suffer, He hath so fulfilled. At the same time shewing, that it was not of their doing, if this be proved, that it took place after God's counsel. He alludes to those words with which they had reviled Him on the Cross, namely, Let Him deliver Him, if He <sup>Mat. 27,</sup> will have Him; for He said, I am the Son of God. <sup>42. 43.</sup> If <sup>d</sup> He trust in God, let Him now come down from the cross. O foolish men, were these idle words? It must needs so come to pass, and the prophets bear witness thereunto. Therefore if He descended not, it was for no weakness of His own that He did not come down, but for very power. And Peter puts this by way of apology for the Jews, hoping that they <sup>e</sup> ἡ δευτέρα εἰρεπα, A. B. C. (N. om. ἡ) Cat. Namely, the first, "Ye did it ignorantly, as did also your rulers." The second, "It was ordered by the counsel of God:" as below, "And he puts this by way of apology, &c." The Edd.

HOMIL. may also close with what he says. He hath so fulfilled, IX. he says. Do you see now how he refers every thing to
 v. 19. that source? Repent ye therefore, he says, and be converted. He does not add, 'from your sins;' but, that your sins may be blotted out, means the same thing. And then he adds the gain: So shall the times of refreshing come from the presence of the Lord. This betokens them in a sad state, brought low by many wars*. For it is to the case of one on fire, and craving comfort, that the expression applies. And see now how he advances. In his first sermon, he but slightly hinted at the resurrection, and Christ's sitting in heaven; but here he also speaks of His
 v. 20. 21. visible advent. And He shall send Jesus the Christ ordained' (for you), Whom the heaven must (i. e. must of necessity) receive, until the times of the restitution of all things. The reason why He does not now come is clear. Which God hath spoken, he continues, by the mouth of His holy prophets since the world began. For Moses truly said unto the fathers, A Prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you. Before, he had spoken of David, here he speaks of Moses. Of all things, he says, which He hath spoken. But he does not say, "which Christ," but, which God hath spoken<sup>b</sup> by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began.

* Πολέμοις attested by Cat. and Cc. but A. has πόνοις, E. and Edd. κακοίς. In the following sentence, Πρὸς γὰρ τὸν κλαυσόμενον καὶ παραμυθίαν ἐπιζητοῦντα οὗτος ἂν ἀρμόσειεν ὁ λόγος, B. and Cc. read κλαυσόμενον, C. F. D. N. κλαυσόμενον, ("to him that shall weep,") A. καυσόμενον, Cat. καυσόμενον, the true reading. The scribes did not perceive that Chr. is commenting on the word ἀναψύξεις, 'refrigeration,' as implying a condition of burning: hence the alteration, κλαυσόμενον, or in the 'Doric' form (Aristoph.) κλαυσόμενον. E. and Edd. Διὸ καὶ οὕτως εἶπεν εἰδὼς ὅτι πρὸς τὸν πάσχοντα καὶ παραμυθ. ζητοῦντα κ. τ. λ. 'Wherefore also he speaks thus, knowing that it is to the case of one who is suffering, &c.'—In the text here commented upon, ὅπως ἂν ἔλθωσι καιροὶ ἀναψ., E. V. makes ὅπως ἂν temporal, "When the times of refreshing, &c." But here and elsewhere in the N. T. Matt. 6, 5. Luke 2, 35. Acts 15, 17. Rom. 3, 4. the correct usage is observed, according to which, ὅπως ἂν is nearly equivalent to "so (shall)," i. e. 'that (ὅπως) they may come, as in the event of your repentance (ἂν), they certainly shall.' And so Chrys. took the passage: Εἰτα τὸ κέρδος ἐπάγει. "Ὅπως ἂν κ. τ. λ. 'Then he adds the gain: So shall the times, &c.' ἵ τὸν προκεχειρισμένον. Other Mss. of N. T. read προκεκηρυγμένον, whence Vulg. E. V. "which was before preached."

E. V. has "all," and so some Mss. πάντων, and St. Chrys. gives it a little further on.

<sup>b</sup> Instead of this clause, "by the mouth, &c." the Edd. have from E. 'Still by keeping the matter in the shade, drawing them on the more to faith by gentle degrees.'

Then he betakes him to the ground of credibility, saying, Acts that Prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people.

Yea, and all the prophets, from Samuel and those that follow after, as many as have spoken, have likewise foretold of these days. He has done well to set the distinction here.
 For whenever he says any thing great, he appeals to them of old. And he found a text which contained both truths; just as in the other discourse he said, Until He put His <sup>ch. 2, 35.</sup> the two things stand together; that is, subjection and disobedience, and the punishment. Like unto me, he says.

 Then why are ye alarmed? Ye are the children of the <sup>v. 25.</sup> prophets: so that to you they spake, and for your sakes have all these things come to pass. For as they deemed that through their outrage they had become alienated, (and indeed there is no parity of reason, that He Who now is crucified, should now cherish them as His own,) he proves to them that both the one and the other are in accordance with prophecy. Ye are the children, he says, of the Prophets, and of the covenant which God made with our fathers, say- ing unto Abraham, And in thy seed shall all the kindreds of the earth be blessed. Unto you first, he continues, God <sup>v. 26.</sup> having raised up His<sup>1</sup> Son, sent Him. To others indeed also, <sup>τῶν</sup> but to you first who crucified Him. To bless you, he adds, <sup>παῖδα</sup>
in turning away every one of you from his iniquities.

Now let us consider again more minutely what has <sup>Recapi-</sup> been read out. In the first place, he establishes the <sup>tulation.</sup> point that the miracle was performed by them<sup>1</sup>; saying,

<sup>1</sup> Τίως κατακινεῖται ὅτι αὐτοὶ ἐποίησαν τὸ θαῦμα. i. e. 'by saying, Why marvel ye? he makes this good at the very outset: You see that a miracle has been wrought, and by us (as the instrumenta), not by some other man (this is the force of the αὐτοὶ here). This he will not allow them to doubt for a moment: he forestalls their judgment on the matter: you see that it is done by us, and you are inclined to think it was by our own power or holiness, &c.' There is no need to insert the negative, ὅτι οὐκ αὐτοὶ: Erasm. and Ben. Lat.

HOMIL. saying, Why marvel ye? And he will not let the assertion
 v. 12. be disbelieved: and to give it more weight, he anticipates their judgment. Why look ye, he says, so earnestly on us, as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk? If this troubles and confounds you, learn Who was the Doer, and be not amazed. And observe how on all occasions when he refers to God, and says that all things are from Him, then he fearlessly chides them: as above ch. 2, 22. where he said, A man approved of God among you. And on all occasions he reminds them of the outrage they had committed, in order that the fact of the Resurrection may be established. But here he also subjoins something else; for
 v. 13. he no more says, “of Nazareth,” but what? The God of our fathers hath glorified His Son Jesus. Observe also the modesty. He reproached them not, neither did he say at once, ‘Believe then now: behold, a man that has been forty years lame, has been raised up through the name of Jesus Christ.’ This he did not say, for it would have excited opposition. On the contrary, he begins by commending them for admiring the deed, and again calls them after their ancestor: [Ye men of Israel.] Moreover, he does not say, It was Jesus that healed him: [but, The God of our fathers hath glorified, etc.] But then, lest they should say, How can this stand to reason—that God should glorify the transgressor? therefore he reminds them of the judgment before Pilate, shewing that, would they but consider, He was no transgressor; else Pilate had not wished to release Him.
 v. 13, 14. And he does not say, ‘when Pilate was desirous,’ but, was determined to let Him go. [But ye denied the Holy One, etc.] Him who had killed others, ye asked to be released; Him Who quickeneth them that are killed, ye did not wish to have! And that they might not ask again, How should it be that God now glorifies Him, when before He gave no assistance? he brings forward the prophets, testifying that so it behoved to be. [But those things which God before had shewed, etc.] Then, lest they should suppose that God’s dispensation was their own apology, first he reproves them. Moreover, that the denying Him to Pilate’s face, was no ordinary thing; seeing that he wished to release Him.
 And that ye cannot deny this, the man who was asked in

 v. 18.

preference to Him is witness against you. This also is part of a deep dispensation. Here it shews their shamelessness and effrontery; that a Gentile, one who saw Him for the first time, should have discharged Him, though he had heard nothing striking; while they who had been brought up among His miracles, have done the very opposite! For, as he has said, When he (Pilate) had determined to let Him go, that it may not be imagined that he did this of favour, we read, And he said, It is a custom with you to release one prisoner; will ye therefore that I release unto you this man? But ye denied the Holy One and the Just. He does not say, 'Ye delivered up;' but everywhere, Ye denied. For, said they, We have no king but Cæsar. And he does not say only, Ye did not beg off the innocent, and, Ye denied Him; but, Ye slew Him. While they were hardened, he refrained from such language; but when their minds are most moved, then he strikes home, now that they are in a condition to feel it. For just as when men are drunk we say nothing to them, but when they are sober, and are recovered from their intoxication, then we chide them; thus did Peter: when they were able to understand his words, then he also sharpened his tongue, alleging against them many charges; that, Whom God had glorified, they had delivered up; Whom Pilate would have acquitted, they denied to his face; that they preferred the robber before Him.

Observe again how he speaks covertly concerning Christ's [3.] power, shewing that He raised Himself: just as in his first discourse he had said, Because it was not possible that He should be holden of it, so here he says, And killed the Prince of Life. It follows, that the Life He had was not from another. The prince (or author) of evil would be he that first brought forth evil; the prince or author of murder, he who first originated murder; so also the Prince (or Author) of Life must be He Who has Life from Himself. Whom God raised up, he continues: and now that he has uttered this, he adds, And His name, upon faith in His name, hath made this man strong, whom ye see and know; yea, the faith which is by Him hath given Him this perfect soundness. [The faith which is by Him, ἡ δι' αὐτοῦ πίστις].

v. 16.

HOMIL. IX. And<sup>k</sup> yet it was ἡ εἰς αὐτὸν πίστις, 'the faith which is in Him' (as its object) that did all. For the Apostles did not say, 'By the name,' but, In the name, and it was in Him (εἰς αὐτὸν) that the man believed. But they did not yet make bold to use the expression, 'The faith which is in Him.' For, that the phrase By Him should not be too low, observe that [after saying, Upon the faith of His name,] he adds, His name hath made him strong, and then it is that he says, Yea, the faith which is by Him hath given him this perfect soundness. Observe how he implies, that in the 'former expression also, [Whom God raised up,] he did but condescend to their low attainments. For that Person needed not Another's help for His rising again, Whose Name raised up a lame man, being all one as dead. Mark how on all occasions he adduces their own testimony. Thus above, he <sup>ch. 2, 22.</sup> said, As ye yourselves also know; and, In the midst of you: and here again, Whom ye see and know: in the presence of you all. And yet that it was, In His name, they knew not: but they did know that the man was lame, that he stands there whole<sup>l</sup>. They that had wrought the deed themselves confessed, that it was not by their own power, but by that of Christ. And had this assertion been unfounded, had they not been truly persuaded themselves that Christ had risen again, they would not have sought to establish the honour of a dead man instead of their own, especially while the eyes of the multitude were upon them. Then, when their minds were alarmed, immediately he encourages them, by the appellation of Brethren, [And now, brethren, I wot, etc.] For in the former discourse he foretold<sup>m</sup> nothing, but only says concerning Christ, Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly: here he adds an admonition. There

<sup>k</sup> The meaning of the following passage is plain enough, but the innovator has so altered it as to make it unintelligible. Yet the Edd. adopt his reading (E.D.F.) without notice of the other and genuine reading. "And yet if it was ἡ εἰς αὐτὸν πίστις that did all, and that (ὅτι) it was εἰς αὐτὸν that the man believed, why did (Peter) say, not, Διὰ τοῦ ὀνόματος, but, Ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι? Because they did not yet, &c."

ᾤδεν instead of after τοῦτο ᾤδεν. So Commel. Erasmi. Ed. Par. Hence D. F. have it in both places, and so Morel. Ben. All these omit ὅτι before ἐν τῷ ὀν. "And yet in His name they knew not that he stands whole: but this they knew, that he was lame, (that he stands whole)." Savile alone has retained the genuine reading.

he waited till the people spoke: here, he knew how much they had already effected, and that the present assembly was better disposed toward them. [That through ignorance ye did it.] And yet the circumstances mentioned above were not to be put to the score of ignorance. To choose the robber, to reject Him Who had been adjudged to be acquitted, to desire even to destroy Him—how should this be referred to ignorance? Nevertheless, he gives them liberty to deny it, and to 'change' their mind about what had happened. 'Now this indeed, that you put to death the innocent, ye knew: but that you were killing "the Prince of Life," this, belike, ye did not know.' And he exculpated not them alone, but also the chief contrivers of the evil: [ye and your rulers:] for doubtless it would have roused their opposition, had he gone off into accusation. For the evil-doer, when you accuse him of some wickedness that he has done, in his endeavour to exonerate himself, grows more vehement. And he no longer says, 'Ye crucified,' 'Ye killed,' but, Ye did it; leading them to seek for pardon. If those rulers did it through ignorance, much more did these present. [But these things which God before had shewed, etc.] But it is remarkable, that both in the first and in the second discourse, speaking to the same effect, that is, in the former, By the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God; and in this, God before had shewed that Christ should suffer; in neither does he adduce any particular text in proof. The fact is, that each one of such passages is accompanied with many accusations, and with mention of the punishment in store for them; [as], I will deliver up, Is. 53, 9. says one, the wicked in requital for His grave, and the rich in return for His death. And again, * * * Those things, he says, which God before had shewed by the mouth of all His prophets, that Christ should suffer, He hath so fulfilled. It shews the greatness of that counsel<sup>a</sup>, in that all spoke of it, and not one only. It does not follow, because the event was through ignorance, that it took place irrespectively of God's ordinance. See how great is the Wisdom of God, when it

HOMIL. uses the wickednesses of others to bring about that which
IX. must be. He hath fulfilled, he says : that they may not

- imagine that any thing at all is wanting ; for whatsoever Christ must needs suffer, has been fulfilled. But do not think, that, because the Prophets said this, and because ye did it through ignorance, this sufficeth to your exculpation. However, he does not express himself thus, but in milder terms says, Repent ye therefore. 'Why? For' either it was through ignorance, or by the dispensation of God.' That your sins may be blotted out. I do not mean the crimes committed at the Crucifixion ; perhaps they were through ignorance ; but so that your other sins may be blotted out : this<sup>p</sup> only. So shall the times of refreshing come unto you. Here he speaks of the Resurrection, obscurely. For those are indeed times of refreshing, which 2 Cor. 5, Paul also looked for, when he said, We that are in this
 4. tabernacle do groan, being burthened. Then to prove that
 v. 20. Christ is the cause of the days of refreshing, he says, And He shall send Jesus Christ, which before was for you ordained. He said not, 'That your sin may be blotted out,' but, your sins ; for he hints at that sin also. He shall
 v. 21. send. And whence<sup>q</sup>? Whom the heaven must receive. Still [must] receive? And why not simply, Whom the heaven hath received? This, as if discoursing of old times : so, he says, * ἡ γὰρ κατὰ ἑγνοίαν, ἡ κατὰ οἰκονομίαν. Edd. omit this interlocution, Sav. notes it in the margin. "Repent ye therefore." Why repent? for either it was through ignorance, or it was predestinated. (Nevertheless, you must repent, to the blotting out of your sins, &c.)

<sup>p</sup> τοῦτο μόνον, B. C. N. 'this is all : i. e. no more than this : he does not impute that one great sin to them, in all its heinousness ; he only speaks of their sins in general. A. and the other Mss. omit these words.

<sup>q</sup> The modern text ; 'Saying this, he does not declare, Whence, but only adds, &c.'—Ἀκούην δεξασθαι. Ben. 'Utique suscipere.' Erasmi. 'adhuc accipere.' It means, Is this still to take place, that he should say ὅτι δεῖ δεξασθαι, as if the event were yet future? And the answer is, 'He speaks in reference to former times, i. e. from that point of view. (So Ecumen. in loc. τὸ δεῖ ἀπὸ τοῦ δεῖ.) And then as to the necessity ; this δεῖ is not meant in respect of Christ's Divine Nature, (for of that he forbears to speak,) but the meaning is, So it is ordered, &c.' The report, however, is very defective, especially in what follows. He is commenting upon the words, "Until the time of restitution (or making good) of all that God spake, &c." πάντων ὅτι ἐλάλησεν ὁ Θεός, which expression he compares with what is said of the Prophet like unto Moses, πάντων ὅσα ἔειπεν καλῶς. Christ is that Prophet : and what He spake, the Prophets, obscurely indeed, spake before. He adds, that St. Peter's mention of the yet future fulfilment of all that the Prophets have spoken is calculated also to alarm the hearers. See the further comment on these verses at the end of the recapitulation.

it is divinely ordered, so it is settled: not a word yet of His eternal subsistence.—For Moses indeed said unto the fathers, A Prophet shall the Lord raise up for you: [Him shall ye hear in all things that He shall speak unto you:] and having said, [All things which] God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy Prophets, now indeed he brings in Christ Himself. For, if He predicted many things, and it is necessary to hear Him, one would not be wrong in saying that the Prophets have spoken these things. But, besides, he wishes to shew that the Prophets did predict the same things. And, if any one will look closely into the matter, he will find these things spoken in the Old Testament, obscurely indeed, but nevertheless spoken. Who was purposely designed, says he: in Whom<sup>r</sup> there is nothing novel. Here he also alarms them, by the thought that much remains to be fulfilled. But if so, how says he, Hath fulfilled? The things which it was necessary that Christ should suffer, are fulfilled: the things which must come to pass, not yet. A Prophet shall the Lord God raise up for you from among your brethren, like unto me. This would most conciliate them. Do you observe the sprinkling of low matters and high, side by side,—that He Who was to go up into the heavens should be like unto Moses? And yet it was a great thing too. For in fact He was not simply like unto Moses<sup>s</sup>, if so be that every soul which will not hear shall be destroyed. And one might mention numberless other things which shew that He was not like unto Moses; so that it is a mighty text that he has handled. God shall raise Him up unto you, says Moses, from among your brethren, [etc.]: consequently * Οὐ οὐδὲν νεώτερον. Meaning perhaps, that as Christ was from the first designed for the Jews, the Gospel is no novelty, as if nothing had been heard of such a Saviour before. E. D. F. ὥστε οὐδὲν νεώτερον, which is placed before the citation τὸν προκεχ.—Below, A. B. C. N. Ἐπλήρωσεν ἃ εἶδει παθεῖν; Ἐπληρώθη ἃ δεῖ γενέσθαι ἐχρὴν οὐδέπω, which is manifestly corrupt. We restore it thus: Ἐπλήρωσεν; Ἄ εἶδει παθεῖν ἐπληρώθη, ἃ δεῖ γενέσθαι ἐχρὴν οὐδέπω. The modern text: Ἐπλήρωσεν ἃ εἶδει παθεῖν; Ἐπλήρωσεν, εἶπεν, οὐκ ἐπληρώθη· δεῖκνυς ὅτι ἃ μὲν ἐχρὴν παθεῖν, ἐπλήρωσεν ἃ δεῖ (δεῖσι add. F. D.) γενέσθαι λείπεται ἔτι, οὐδέπω.

* C. N. Οὐ γὰρ δὴ κατὰ Μωσέα ἦν, εἰ γὰρ πᾶς ὁ μὴ ἄκ. ἐξολοθρευθήσεται, μυρία δὲ εἶπεν τὰ δεκνύντα ὅτι οὐκ ἔστι κατὰ Μωσέα. B. omits οὐ γὰρ... ἦν, inadvertently passing from ἦν οὐ γὰρ to the subsequent ἦν εἰ γὰρ. A. omits the words μυρία... ὅτι, which disturb the sense of the passage. In the translation we have rejected the second γὰρ. For εἶπεν, Sav. marg. gives εἶποι τις ἄν, which we have adopted. The modern text substitutes τὸ, καὶ ἔσται for εἰ γὰρ, and inserts καὶ ἄλλα after μυρία δέ.

HOMIL. IX. Moses himself threatens those that should not hear. [Yea,

- and all the prophets*, etc.]: all this' is calculated to attract. Yea, and all the prophets, says the Apostle, from Samuel. He refrains from enumerating them singly, not to make his discourse too long; but having alleged that decisive testimony of Moses, he passes by the rest. Ye, he says, are the children of the Prophets, and of the covenant which God made. Children of the covenant; that is, heirs. For lest they should think that they received this offer from the favour of Peter, he shews, that of old it was due to them, in order that they may the rather believe that such also is the will of God. Unto you first, he continues, God having raised up His Son Jesus, sent Him. He does not say simply, 'Unto you He sent His Son,' but also, after the resurrection, and when He had been crucified. For that they may not suppose that he himself granted them this favour, and not the Father, he says, To bless you. For if He is your Brother, and blesses you, the affair is a promise. [Unto you first.] That is, so far are you from having no share in these blessings, that He would have you become moreover promoters and authors of them to others. For<sup>a</sup> you are not to feel like castaways. [Having raised up]: again, the Resurrection. In turning away, he says, every one of you from his iniquities. In this way He blesses you: not in a general way. And what kind of blessing is this? A great one. For of course not the turning a man away from his iniquities is itself sufficient to remit them also. And if it is not sufficient to remit, how should it be to confer a blessing? For it is not to be supposed that the transgressor becomes forthwith also blessed; he is simply released from his sins. But this', Like unto me, would no wise apply. Hear ye

<sup>a</sup> Ταῦτα δὲ ἐπαγορεύει is strangely rendered by Ben. "hæc omnia adjecta sunt." But this is the comment, not upon the threatening in v. 23. but upon the matters contained in the following verses, 24—26.

<sup>b</sup> Μὴ γὰρ ὡς ἀπερριμμένοι διακείσθε, B. N. οὐκοῦν μὴ γὰρ, A. πάλιν μὴ γὰρ, C. μὴ οὖν, F. D. καὶ γὰρ, Cat. οὐκοῦν μὴ, E. and Edd., which also add at the end of the sentence, ἢ ἀποβεβλημένοι, where the other Mss. have, πάλιν ἢ ἀνάστασις, as comment on ἀναστήσας.

<sup>c</sup> Τὸ δὲ, ὡς ἐμὲ, οὐδαμοῦ λόγον ἔχει. He had before said, that in the very description of 'the Prophet like unto Moses,' it is shewn that He is more than like Moses: for instance, "Every soul which will not hear, &c." would not apply to Moses. Having finished the description, he now adds, You see that the ὡς ἐμὲ nowhere holds as the whole account of the matter: to be raised up (from the dead) and sent to bless, and this by turning every one from his iniquities, is not to be simply Him, he says; and not this alone, but he adds, And it shall come to pass, that every soul, which will not hear that Prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people. When he has shewn them that they had sinned, and has imparted forgiveness to them, and promised good things, then indeed, then he says, "Moses also says the same thing." What sort of connexion is this: Until the times of the restitution; and then to introduce Moses, saying, that "all that Christ said shall come to pass? Then also, on the other hand, he says, as matter of encomium, (so that for this reason also ye ought to obey): Ye are the children of the prophets and of the covenant: i. e. heirs. Then why do you stand affected towards that which is your own, as if it were another's? True, you have done deeds worthy of condemnation; still you may yet obtain pardon. Having said this, with reason he is now able to say, Unto you God sent His Son Jesus to bless you. He says not, To save you, but what is greater; that the crucified Jesus blessed His crucifiers.

Let us then also imitate Him. Let us cast out that spirit of murder and enmity. It is not enough not to retaliate (for even in the Old Dispensation this was exemplified); but let us do all as we would for bosom-friends, as we would for ourselves, so for those who have injured us. We are followers of Him, we are His disciples, Who after being crucified, sets every thing in action in behalf of His murderers, and sends out His Apostles to this end. And yet we have often suffered justly; but those acted not only unjustly, but impiously; for He was their Benefactor, He had done no evil, and they crucified Him. And for what reason? For the sake of their reputation. But He Himself made them objects of reverence. The scribes and the pharisees sit in Moses' seat; all therefore whatsoever they bid you observe, that do ye, but after their works do ye not. And again in another place, Go thy way, shew thyself to the priest. Besides, when He might have destroyed them, He saves such as Moses. The modern text adds, "Unless it be taken in regard of the manner of legislation:" i. e. Christ is like unto Moses considered as Deliverer and Lawgiver, not in any other respect.

* E. and Edd. "that they shall hear all things which Christ shall say: and this not in a general way, but with a fearful menace? It is a powerful connexion, for it shews that for this reason also they ought to obey Him. What means it, Children of the Prophets, &c."

HOMIL. them. Let us then imitate Him, and let no one be an enemy, IX. no one a foe, except to the devil.

- [5.] Not a little does the habit of not swearing contribute to this end: I mean, to the not giving way to wrath*: and by not giving way to wrath, we shall not have an enemy either. Lop off the oaths of a man, and you have clipt the wings of his anger, you have smothered all his passion. Swearing, it is said, is as the wind to wrath. Lower the sails; no need of sails, when there is no wind. If then we do not clamour, and do not swear, we have cut the sinews of passion. And if you doubt this, just put it to experiment. Impose it as a law upon the passionate man that he shall never swear, and you will have no necessity of preaching moderation to him. So the whole business is finished. † For even though you do not forswear yourselves, [yet] by swearing at all, do you not know in what absurd consequences you involve yourselves—binding yourselves to an absolute necessity and as with a cord, and putting yourselves to all manner of shifts, as men studying how to rescue their soul from an evil which there is no escaping, or, failing of that, obliged [by that self-imposed necessity] to spend your life thenceforth in vex-

* λέγω δὲ τὸ μὴ ὀργίζεσθαι, as the explanation of εἰς τοῦτο. The other text confuses the meaning by substituting καὶ τὸ μὴ ὀργ. "Not to swear, and not to be angry, is a great help to this." Which increases the "intricacy" of which Ben. complains in the following passage, where oaths are first said to be the wings of wrath, and then are compared to the wind filling the sails. Here instead of, ὥστε ἔργον πνεῦμα τῆς ὀργῆς ὁ ὄρκος, φησὶν, ἐστὶ, (cited as an apophthegm,) the modern text gives, ὥστε ἔργον πν. ἡ ὀργὴ καὶ ὁ ὄρκος ἐστὶ. "For wrath and swearing is as a wind." The imagery is incongruous: oaths, the wings of wrath: oaths the wind, and wrath (apparently) the sails: but the alterations do not mend the sense.

† κἂν γὰρ μὴ ἐπιορκῆτε, ὁμνύντες ὅλως οὐκ ἴστε. The modern text, καὶ οὐτε ἐπιορκῆτε, οὐτε ὁμύσεσθε ὅλως. Οὐκ ἴστε. Which does not suit the context. "Make it a law with the passionate man, never to swear. . . . The whole affair is finished, and you will neither perjure yourselves, nor swear at all." He seems to be speaking of oaths and imprecations, by which a man in the heat of passion binds himself to do or suffer some dreadful thing. "Suppose you do not perjure yourself, yet think of the misery you entail upon yourself: you must either study all sorts of expedients to deliver your soul, or, since that cannot be without perjury, you must spend your life in misery, &c. and curse your wrath."—Ἀνάγκη τιγὶ καὶ δεσμῷ, with comma preceding: so Sav. but A. B. C. ἀνάγκη nom. preceded by a full stop: "For needs must you, binding yourselves as with a cord, &c.:" and so the modern text, with other alterations (adopted by Sav.) which are meant to simplify the construction, but do not affect the sense.—Below, Ἐπειδὴ γὰρ ἠκούσατε, καὶ τὸ πλέον ὑμῖν κατάρθωται. Ben. makes this a sentence by itself, Quia enim audistis, magna pars rei a vobis perfecta est. Savile connects it with the following, φέρε δὲ κ. τ. λ. See p. 116. where he alludes to some who laughed at him, perhaps even on the spot.

ation, in quarrels, and to curse your wrath? But all is in <sup>ACTS</sup> vain, and to no purpose. Threaten, be peremptory<sup>1</sup>, do all, <sup>III.</sup> <sup>12-28.</sup> whatever it be, without swearing: [so] it is in your power to <sup>1</sup>διόρिसαι <sup>2</sup>ἀναλῦσαι <sup>σαι</sup> reverse both what you have said and what you have done, if you have the mind. Thus on the present day I must needs speak more gently to you. For since ye have heard me, and the greater part of the reformation is achieved by you, now then let us see for what purpose the taking of oaths was introduced, and why allowed to be. In relating to you their first origin, and when they were conceived, and how, and by whom, we shall give you this account in requital for your obedience. For it is fit that he who has made his practice right, should be taught the philosophy of the matter, but he who is not yet doing the right, is not worthy to be told the history.

They made many covenants in Abraham's time, and slew victims, and offered sacrifices, and as yet oaths were not. Whence then did they come in? When evil increased, when all was confusion, upside down, when men had turned aside to idolatry: then it was, then, when men appeared no longer worthy to be believed, that they called God as witness, as if thereby giving an adequate surety for what they said. Such in fact is the Oath: it is a security where men's principles cannot be trusted*. So that in the indictment of the swearer the first charge is this,—that he is not to be trusted without a surety, and a great surety too: for such is the exceeding faithlessness, that they ask not man as surety, but will needs have God! Secondly, the same charge lies against him who receives the oath: that, in a question of compact, he must drag in God for warranty, and refuse to be satisfied unless he get Him. O the excessive stupidity, the insolence of such conduct! Thou, a worm, earth, and dust, and ashes, and vapour, to drag in thy Lord as thy surety, and to compel the other to drag Him in likewise! Tell me, if your servants were disputing with each other, and exchanging* assurances with each other, and the fellow-servant should declare that for his part he would not be satisfied till he had their common

IX. him without number, and be made to know that the master is for other purposes, and not to be put to any such use as this? Why do I speak of a fellow-servant<sup>b</sup>? For should he choose any respectable person, would not that person consider it an affront? But I do not wish to do this, say you. Well: then do not compel the other to do so either: since where men only are in question, this is done—if your party says, ‘I give such an one as my surety,’ you do not allow him. ‘What then,’ say you, ‘am I to lose what I have given?’ I am not speaking of this; but that you allow him to insult God. For which reason greater shall be the inevitable punishment to him who forces the oath upon another, than to him who takes it: the same holds with regard to him who gives an oath when no one asks him. And what makes it worse, is, that every one is ready to swear, for one farthing, for some petty item, for his own injustice. All this may be said, when there is no perjury; but if perjury follow in the train, both he that imposes and he that takes the oath have turned every thing upside down. ‘But there are some things,’ you will say, ‘which are unknown.’ Well, take these into account, and do nothing negligently; but, if you do act negligently, take the loss to yourself as your punishment. It is better to be the loser thus, than in a very different way. For tell me—you force a man to take an oath, with what expectation? That he will forswear himself? But this is utter insanity; and the judgment will fall upon your own head: better you should lose your money, than he be lost. Why act thus to your own detriment, and to the insulting of God? This is the spirit of a wild beast, and of an impious man. But you do this in the expectation that he will not forswear himself? Then trust him without the oath. ‘Nay, there are many,’ you reply, ‘who in the absence of an oath would presume to

<sup>c</sup> ‘Αλλ’ ἐγὼ οὐ βούλομαι, φησί. “I do not wish [so to insult God].—Then do not oblige the other to do so: [nay, do not suffer him:] just as, should he pretend to name as his surety some person with whom he has no right to take such a liberty, οὐδ’ οὐκ ἀνέχρ, you would not allow him.” That this is the meaning, is shewn by what follows: ὅτι τὸν Θεὸν ὀβρίσκει ἀνέχρ: “he insults God, and you suffer him to do it.”

defraud; but, once the oath taken, would refrain.' You <sup>Acts</sup> deceive yourself, man. A man having once learnt to steal, <sup>III.</sup> 12-26. and to wrong his neighbour, will presume full oft to trample upon his oath; if on the contrary he shrinks from swearing, he will much more shrink from injustice. 'But he is influenced against his will.' Well then, he deserves pardon.

But why am I speaking of this kind of oaths, while I pass over those in the market-place? For as regards these last, you can urge none of these pleas. For ten farthings you there have swearing and forswearing. In fact, because the thunder-bolt does not actually fall from heaven, because all things are not overthrown, you stand holding God in your bonds: to get a few vegetables, a pair of shoes, for a little matter of money, calling Him to witness. What is the meaning of this? Do not let us imagine, that because we are not punished, therefore we do not sin: this comes of God's mercy; not of our merit. Let your oath be an imprecation upon your own child, upon your own self: say, 'Else let the hangman lash my ribs.' But you dare not. Is God less valuable than thy ribs? is He less precious than thy pate? Say, 'Else let me be struck blind.' But no. Christ so spares us, that He will not let us swear even by our own head: and yet we so little spare the honour of God, that on all occasions we must drag Him in! Ye know not what God is, and with what sort of lips He behoves to be invoked. Why, when we speak of any man of eminent worth, we say, 'First wash your mouth, and then make mention of him:' and yet, that precious Name which is above every name, the Name which is marvellous in all the earth, the Name which devils hear and tremble, we haul about as we list! Oh! the force of [6.] habit! thereby has that Name become cheap. No doubt, if you impose on any one the necessity of coming into the sacred edifice to take his oath there, you feel that you have made the oath an awful one. And yet how is it that it seems awful in this way, but because we have been in the habit of using that at random, but not this? For ought not a shudder of awe to be felt when God is but named? But now, whereas among the Jews His Name was held to be so reverend, that it was written upon plates, and none was allowed to wear the characters except the high-priest

HOMIL. alone: we bandy about His Name like any ordinary word.

IX.

If simply to name God was not allowed to all; to call Him to witness, what audacity is it! nay, what madness! For, if need were (rather than this) to fling away all that you have, ought you not readily to part with all? Behold, I solemnly declare and testify; reform these oaths of the forum, these superfluous oaths<sup>d</sup>, and bring to me all those who wish to take them. Behold, in the presence of this assembly, I charge those who are set apart for the tending of the Houses of Prayer, I exhort and issue this order to them, that no person be allowed to take such oaths at his own discretion; or rather, that none be allowed to swear in any other way, but that the person be brought to me, whosoever he be, since even for these matters less will not serve but they must needs come before us, just as if one had to do with little children. May there be no occasion! It is a shame in some things still to need to be taught. Do you dare to touch the Holy Table, being a person unbaptized? No, but what is still worse, you the baptized dare to lay your hand upon the Holy Table, which not even all ordained persons are allowed to touch, and so to take your oath. Now you would not go and lay your hand upon the head of your child<sup>e</sup>; and yet do you touch the Table, and not shudder, not feel afraid?

<sup>d</sup> Τοὺς περισσούς, καὶ πάντας ἑμὸι ἐκδέχερε. E. and Edd. for τοὺς περισσούς καὶ have τοὺς δὲ μὴ περιουμένους. The following passage relates to a practice of swearing by touching the Sacred Volume on the Holy Table. Against this custom he inveighs in one of his Sermons ad Pop. Antioch. xv. §. 5. (t. ii. 158. E.) "What art thou doing, O man? On the Holy Table, and where Christ lies sacrificed, there sacrificest thou thy brother P....sacrificest him in the midst of the Church, and that, with the death to come, the death which dieth not? Was the Church made for this, that we should come there to take oaths? No, but that we should pray there. Does the Table stand there, that we should make men swear thereby? No, it stands there that we may loose sins, not that we may bind them. But do thou, if nothing else, at least reverence the very Volume which thou holdest forth to the other to swear by: the very Gospel which thou, taking in thine hands, biddest the other make oath thereby,—open it, read what Christ there saith concerning oaths, and shudder, and desist."—Here, he forbids the sacristans to admit persons for any such purpose. 'Let such be brought to me, since I must needs be the person to be troubled with these things, as if you were little children, needing to be taught such a simple matter as this.'

Bring these men to me ; I will judge, and send them away rejoicing, both the one and the other'. Do what you choose; I lay it down as a law that there be no swearing at all. What hope of salvation, while we thus make all to have been done in vain? Is this the end of your bills, and your bonds, that you should sacrifice your own soul? What gain do you get so great as the loss? Has he forsworn himself? You have undone both him and yourself. But has he not? even so still you have undone (both), by forcing him to transgress the commandment<sup>s</sup>. Let us cast out this disease from the soul: at any rate let us drive it out of the forum, out of our shops, out of our other work-places; our profits will but be the greater. Do not imagine that the success of your worldly plans is to be ensured by transgressions of the Divine laws. 'But he refuses to trust me,' say you; and in fact I have sometimes heard this said by some: 'Unless I swear oaths without number, the man will not trust me.' Yes, and for this you may thank yourself, because you are so off-hand with your oaths. For were it not so, but on the contrary were it clear to all men that you do not swear, take my word for it, you would be more readily believed upon your mere nod, than those are who swallow oaths by thousands. For look now: which do you more readily believe? me, who do not swear, or those that do swear? 'Yes,' say you: 'but then you are ruler and bishop.' Then suppose I prove to you that it is not only for that reason? Answer me with truth, I beseech you: were I in the habit of perpetually swearing, would my office stand me in that stead? Not a whit. Do you see that it is not for this reason? And what do you gain at all? Answer me that. Paul endured hunger; do you then also choose to hunger rather than to transgress one of the commandments of God. Why are you so unbelieving? Here are you, ready to do and suffer all things for the sake of not swearing: and shall not He reward you? Shall He, Who sustains day by day both takers and

HOMIL. breakers of oaths, give you over to hunger, when you have IX. obeyed Him? Let all men see, that of those who assemble in this Church, not one is a swearer. By this also let us become manifest, and not by our creed alone; let us have this mark also to distinguish us both from the Gentiles and from all men. Let us receive it as a seal from heaven, that we may everywhere be seen to be the King's own flock. By our mouth and tongue let us be known, in the first place, just as the barbarians are by theirs: even as those who speak Greek are distinguished from barbarians, so let us be known. Answer me: the birds which are said to be parrots, how are they known to be parrots? is it not by speaking like men? Let us then be known by speaking like the Apostles, by speaking like the Angels. If any one bid you swear, tell him, 'Christ has spoken, and I do not swear.' This is enough to make a way for all virtue to come in. It is a gate to religion, a high road leading to the philosophy of piety<sup>h</sup>; a kind of training-school. These things let us observe, that we may obtain also the future blessings, through the grace and mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ, to Whom with the Father and the Holy Ghost together be glory, power, and honour, now and ever, world without end. Amen.

ACTS iv. 1.

And as they spake unto the people, there came upon them the priests, and the captain of the temple.

ERE yet they had time to take breath after their first trials, straightway they enter into others. And observe how the events are disposed. First, they were all mocked together; this was no small trial: secondly, they enter into dangers. And these two things do not take place in immediate succession; but when first the Apostles have won admiration by their two discourses, and after that have performed a notable miracle, thereupon it is that, after they are waxen bold, through God's disposal, they enter the lists. But I wish you to consider, how those same persons, who in the case of Christ must needs look out for one to deliver Him up to them, now with their own hands arrest the Apostles, having become more audacious and more impudent since the Crucifixion. In truth, sin, while it is yet struggling to the birth, is attended with some sense of shame; but when once fully born, it makes those more shameless who practise it. And the captain of the temple, it is said. The object again was to attach a public criminality to what was doing, and not to prosecute it as the act of private individuals: such in fact was constantly their plan of proceeding.

Being grieved that they taught the people. Not merely v. 2. because they taught, but because they declared, not alone that Christ Himself was risen from the dead, but moreover, that we through Him do rise again. Because they taught

- HOMIL. X. the people, and preached through Jesus the resurrection of the dead. So mighty was His Resurrection, that to others also He
- v. 3. is the cause of a resurrection. And they laid hands on them, and put them in hold unto the next day; for it was now eventide. What impudence! They* feared not the multitude; for this also the captain of the temple was with them: they had their hands still reeking with the blood of the former victim. For it was now eventide, it is said. It was with the wish to abate their spirit that those men did this, and guarded them; but the delay only served to make the Apostles more intrepid. And consider who these are who are arrested. They are the chiefs of the Apostles, who are now become a pattern to the rest, that they should no longer crave each
- v. 4. other's support, nor want to be together. Howbeit, many having heard the word, believed; and the number of the men was about five thousand. How was this? Did they see them in honour? Did they not behold them put in bonds? How then did they believe? Do you see the evident efficacy? And yet even those that believed already might well have become weaker. But no, it is no longer so: for Peter's sermon had laid the seed deep into them, and had taken a hold upon their understandings. Therefore were [their enemies] incensed, that they did not fear them, that they made no account of their present troubles. For, say they, if He that was crucified effects such great things, and makes the lame to walk, we fear not these men either<sup>b</sup>. This again is of God's ordering. For those who now believe were more numerous than the former.

* So A. C. N. Cat. but B. omits οὐκ. Edd. "They had their hands still reeking with the blood of their former victim, and they were not chilled (ἐνδράκων), but again laid them upon others, to fill them with fresh blood. Or perhaps also they feared them as having now become a multitude, and for this reason the captain, &c." But the statement, οὐκ ἔδεισαν τὸ πλῆθος is explained in the Recapitulation: they led Christ to trial immediately, for fear of the multitude; but not so here.

μεθα· τὸν χωλὸν ἀνέστησε, and so Cat. which however has ἔστησαν. The meaning is obscure, especially the emphatic οὐδὲ τούτους: but perhaps it may be explained: "He was crucified; they did their worst to Him, to how little purpose! therefore neither need we fear these men, what they can do to us." But the report is otherwise so defective and confused, that perhaps what Chrys. actually said here was meant of the priests: "We were able to crucify the Master, therefore we do not fear these common men, His followers, though, as they say, it is He that does these works, that made the lame man walk."

Therefore it was that in their presence they bound the Apostles, to make them also more fearful. But the reverse took place. And they examine them not before the people, but privately, that the hearers may not profit by their boldness.

And it came to pass on the morrow, that their rulers, and elders, and scribes, and Ananias the High Priest, and Caiaphas, and John, and Alexander, and as many as were of the kindred of the High Priest, were gathered together at Jerusalem. For now along with the other evils (of the times<sup>c</sup>), the Law was no longer observed. And again they set off the business with the form of a tribunal, to constitute them guilty by their iniquitous sentence. And when they had set them in the midst, they asked, By what power, or by what name, have ye done this? And yet they knew it well; for it was because they were grieved that they preached through Jesus the resurrection that they arrested them. Then for what purpose do they question them? They expected the numbers present would make them recant, and thought by this means to have put all right again. Observe then what they say: And by what name have ye done this? Then Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, said unto them. And now, I pray you, call to mind Christ's saying: When they deliver you up unto the synagogues, take ye no thought how or what thing ye shall speak; for it is the Spirit of your Father which speaketh in you. So that it was a mighty Power they enjoyed. What then says Peter? Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel. Mark the Christian wisdom of the man; how full of confidence it is: he utters not a word of insult, but says with respect, Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel, if we be this day called to account of the good deed done to the impotent man. He takes them in hand right valiantly; by the opening of his speech he exposes<sup>d</sup> them, and reminds them of the former things;

<sup>d</sup> ἀπὸ τοῦ προοιμίου διεκωμώδησεν, i. e. "You, the rulers of the people, and elders of Israel,—to make it a crime, &c." For this, which is the reading of the other Mss. and the Catena, E. alone has καὶ διεκωδόνισεν, μᾶλλον δὲ αὐτοὺς καὶ ἀνέμνησεν κ. τ. λ. 'And he rung them, nay, rather also reminded them, &c.' Διακωδωνί(ζειν is a word elsewhere used by St. Chrys., and would suit the passage very well, either as "he put their unsoundness to the proof, (like false metal, or cracked earthenware,)" or "he sounded an alarm in their ears:" but the other is

- HOMIL. that it is for a work of beneficence they are calling them to X. account. As if he had said, "In all fairness we ought to have been crowned for this deed, and proclaimed benefactors; but since we are even put upon our trial for a good deed done to an impotent man, not a rich man, not powerful, not noble—and yet who would feel envy in a case like this?" It is a most forcible<sup>1</sup> way of putting the case: and he shews that they are piercing their own selves:—By what means this man is made whole: be it known unto you all, and to all the people Israel; that by the Name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth:— [2.] this is what would vex them most. For this was that which
v. 10. Mat. 10, Christ had told the disciples, What ye hear in the ear, that 27. preach ye upon the house-tops.—That in the Name of Jesus Christ, he says, of Nazareth, Whom ye crucified, Whom God raised from the dead, even by Him doth this man stand here before you whole. Think not, he says, that we conceal the country, or the nature of the death. Whom ye crucified, Whom God raised from the dead, even by Him doth this man stand before you whole. Again the death, again the
v. 11. resurrection. This is the stone, he says, which was set at nought of you builders, which is become the head of the corner. He reminds them also of a saying which was Mat. 21, enough to frighten them. For it had been said, Whosoever 44. shall fall on this stone, shall be broken; but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder.—Neither is there
v. 12. salvation in any other, Peter says. What wounds, think you, must these words inflict on them! For there is none other name, he continues, under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved. Here he utters also lofty words. For when* the object is, not to carry some point successfully, but only to shew boldness, he does not spare; for he was not afraid of striking too deep. Nor does he say simply, "By another;" but, Neither is there salvation in any other: that is, He is able to save us. In this way he subdued their threatening.

Now when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men, they <sup>Acts</sup> <sup>IV.</sup> <sup>10-21.</sup> marvelled; and they took knowledge of them, that they had <sup>v. 13.</sup> been with Jesus. The two unlearned men beat down with their rhetoric them and the chief priests. For it was not they that spake, but the grace of the Spirit. And be- <sup>v. 14.</sup> holding the man which was healed standing with them, they could say nothing against it. Great was the boldness of the man; that even in the judgment-hall he has not left them. For had they said that the fact was not so, there was he to refute them. But when they had commanded them to go aside <sup>v. 15.</sup> out of the council, they conferred among themselves, saying, What are we to do to these men? See the difficulty they are in, and how the fear of men again does every thing. As in the case of Christ, they were not able (as the saying is) to undo what is done<sup>1</sup>, nor to cast it into the shade, but for all their hindering, the Faith did but gain ground the more; so was it now. [What shall we do?] O the folly! to suppose that those who had tasted of the conflict, would now take fright at it: to expect, impotent as their efforts had proved in the beginning, to effect something new, after such a specimen of oratory as had been exhibited! The more they wished to hinder, the more the business grew upon their hands. But what say they? For that indeed a notable miracle hath been <sup>v. 16-18.</sup> done by them is manifest to all them that dwell in Jerusalem; and we cannot deny it. But that it spread no further among the people, let us straitly threaten them, that they speak henceforth to no man in this name. And they called them, and commanded them not to speak at all, nor teach, in the name of Jesus. See what effrontery is shewn by these, and what greatness of mind by the Apostles. But <sup>v. 19-21.</sup> Peter and John answered, and said unto them, Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye. For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard. So when they had further threatened them, they let them go, finding nothing how they might punish them, because of the people. The miracles shut their ch. 5, 28. murder, as they said subsequently, Do ye wish to bring this man's blood on us? O the folly! Persuaded that He was risen, and having received this proof of it<sup>t</sup>, they expected that He Whom death could not hold, could be cast into the shade by their machinations! What can match the folly of this<sup>1</sup>! Such is the nature of wickedness: it has no eyes for anything, but on all occasions it is thrown into perturbation. Finding themselves overborne, they felt like persons who have been outwitted: as is the case with people who have been forestalled and made a sport of in some matter. And yet<sup>t</sup> they every where affirmed that it was God that raised Him: but<sup>1</sup> it was in the Name of Jesus that they spake; shewing that Jesus was risen. puerile doctrine, indeed, but still they held it. Why this alone, was it not sufficient to induce them to do nothing to them— ACTS

I mean, that the disciples with such boldness bore themselves in the way they did? Say, wherefore, O Jew, dost thou disbelieve? Thou oughtest to have attended to the sign done, and to the words, not to the evil disposition of the many. [By their teaching the people<sup>1</sup>.] For already they were in ill repute with them by reason of what they had done to Christ; so that they were rather increasing their own obloquy. [And they laid hands on them, and put them in v. 3. hold until the morrow; for it was now eventide.] In the case of Christ, however, they did not so; but having taken Him at midnight, they immediately led Him away, and made no delay, being exceedingly in fear of the multitude: whereas in the case of the Apostles here, they were bold. And they no more take them to Pilate, being ashamed and blushing at the thought of the former affair, lest they should also be taken to task for that.

[And it came to pass on the morrow, that their rulers, v. 5. and elders, and scribes, were gathered together at Jerusalem.] Again in Jerusalem: and there it is that men's blood [3.] is poured out: no reverence for their city either! [And v. 6. Annas, and Caiaphas, etc.] And Annas, it says, and Caiaphas. His maid-servant it was that questioned Peter, and he could not bear it: in his house it was that Peter denied, when Another was in bonds there: but now, when he has come into the midst of them all, see how he speaks! By what name have ye done this? Why dost thou not speak it, what it is, but keepest that out of sight? By what v. 7. name have ye done this? And yet he affirmed, It was not we that did it. [Ye rulers of the people, etc.] Observe v. 8. his wisdom: he does not say outright, 'In the Name of Jesus we did it,' but how? *In His Name this man—*He does not say, 'was made whole by us;' but—doth stand here before you whole. And again, If we be examined v. 9. concerning the good deed done to the impotent man. He hits them hard, that they are always making a crime of

- HOMIL. such acts, finding fault with works of beneficence done to X. men : and he reminds them of their former doings, that they run to do murder, and not only so, but make a crime of doing good deeds. Do you observe too, (in point of rhetoric,) with what dignity they express themselves? Even in the use of words they were becoming expert by practice, and henceforth they were not to be beaten down. [Be it known unto you all, etc.] Whereby he shews them that they rather do, in spite of themselves, preach Christ; themselves extol the doctrine, by their examining and questioning. O exceeding boldness—Whom ye crucified! Whom God raised up—this is bolder still! Think not that we hide what there is to be ashamed of.
 He says this all but tauntingly : and not merely says it, but dwells upon the matter. This, says he, is the Stone which was set at nought by you builders; and then he goes on to teach them, saying in addition, Which is made the head of the corner; that is to say, that the Stone is indeed approved!
 Great was the boldness they now had, in consequence of the miracle. And when there was need to teach, observe how they speak and allege many prophecies; but when the point was to use boldness of speech, then they only speak peremptorily.
 Thus, Neither, says he, is there any other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved. It is manifest to all, he says, because not to us alone was that Name given;
 he cites even themselves as witnesses. For, since they asked,
In what name did ye it? ‘In Christ’s,’ says he: ‘there is none other name. How is it that ye ask? On all hands this is palpable. For there exists not another name under heaven, whereby we must be saved.’ This is the language of a soul which has <sup>1</sup>renounced this present life. His exceeding outspokenness proves here, that when he speaks in lowly terms of Christ, he does it not of fear, but of <sup>2</sup>wise forbearance:
 but now that it was the fitting time, he speaks not in lowly terms: by this very thing intending to strike dismay into them.
 Behold another miracle not less than the former. [And beholding the boldness of Peter and John, etc.] And they took knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus.
 Not without a meaning has the Evangelist set down this

[Not only by their words,] but by their gesture also, and their look and voice, and, in short, by everything about them, they manifested the boldness with which they confronted the people. From the things they uttered, they marvelled, perhaps: that they were unlearned and common men: for one may be unlearned, yet not a common or private man, and a common man, yet not unlearned. Having perceived, it says. Our other Mss. have, οὐ γὰρ τοῖς ῥήμασι μόνον ἐδείκνυντο ἀφροντιστοῦντες π. τ. κρινόμενοι: which is only an attempt to make the passage grammatical. The comment is on the word θεωροῦντες: they beheld the boldness, for not words only, their gestures also, declared it.—Below, τὴν παῤῥησίαν ἐνέφανον τὴν κατὰ τοῦ λαοῦ. 'Acrius in eos egissent,' Ben. Here and in what follows we have endeavoured to restore the proper order. In the Mss. in consequence, as it seems, of a confusion between the two clauses, οὐ δυνάμεθα ἀρνήσασθαι, and οὐ δυνάμεθα γὰρ . . . μὴ λαλεῖν, the order of the comments is deranged: viz. "So that they would—been with them." "And they recognised—stopped their mouths:" "Whether it be right—judge ye. When the terror—mere bravery. Whether it be right, he says, and, We cannot deny it. So that they would—better to let them go. Whether it be right—more than unto God. Here by God—His Resurrection."

Already these as martyrs have borne testimony : set in the battle against all, they said, We cannot but speak the things we have seen and heard. If the things we speak be false, reprehend them : if true, why hinderest thou ? Such is philosophy ! Those, in perplexity, these in gladness : those covered with exceeding shame, these doing all with boldness : those in fear, these in confidence. For who, I would ask, were the frightened ? those who said, That it spread no further among the people, or these who said, we cannot but speak the things we have seen and heard ? And these had a delight, a freedom of speech, a joy surpassing all ; those a despondency, a shame, a fear ; for they feared the people. But these were not afraid of those : on the contrary, while these spoke what they would, those did not what they would. Which were in chains and dangers ? was it not these last ?

Let us then hold fast to virtue ; let not these words end only in delight, and in a certain elevation of the spirits. This is not the theatre, for <sup>1</sup>singers, and tragedians, and <sup>2</sup>musicians, where the fruit consists only in the enjoyment and where the enjoyment itself passes with the passing day. Nay, would that it were enjoyment alone, and not mischief also with the enjoyment ! But so it is : each man carries home with him much of what he has witnessed there, sticking to him like the infection of a plague : and one indeed, of the younger sort, having culled such snatches of song here and there of those satanic plays *, as he could fix in his memory, goes singing them about the house : while another, a senior, and forsooth too staid for such levity, does not this indeed, but what is there spoken, both the preachments and the very words, he remembers it all ; and another again, some filthy and absurd ditty. From this place you depart, taking nothing

HOMIL. with you.—We have laid down a law—nay, not we: God
 X.
 Mat. 23, forbid! for it is said, Call no man your master upon the earth;
 8. Christ has laid down a law that none should swear. Now say, what has been done with regard to this law? For I will 2 Cor. not cease speaking of it; lest, as the Apostle saith, if I come 13, 2. again, I must not spare. I ask then, have you laid the matter to heart? have you thought of it seriously? have you been in earnest about it, or must we again take up the same subject? Nay rather, whether you have or not, we will resume it, that you may think seriously about it, or, if you have laid it to heart, may again do this the more surely, and exhort others also. With what then, I pray you, with what shall we begin? Shall it be with the Old Testament?
 For indeed this also is to our shame, that the precepts of the Law, which we ought to surpass, we do not even thus observe! For we ought not to be hearing such matters as these: these are precepts adapted to 'the poor Jewish level':
 we ought to be hearing those counsels of perfection; 'Cast away thy property, stand courageously, and give up thy life in behalf of the Gospel, scorn all the goods of earth, have nothing in common with this present life; if any wrong thee, do him good; if any defraud thee, bless him; if any revile thee, shew him honour; be above every thing.' These and such as these are what we ought to be hearing. But here are we discoursing about swearing: and our case is just the same as if, when a person ought to be a philosopher, one should take him away from the great masters, and set him to spell syllables letter by letter! Just think now what a disgrace it would be for a man having a flowing beard, and with staff in hand, and cope on shoulders<sup>1</sup>, to go to school with children, and be set the same tasks with them: would it not be above measure ridiculous? And yet the ridicule which belongs to us is even greater. For not as the difference between philosophy and the spelling-lesson, so is that between the Jewish polity and ours: no indeed, but as the difference between angels and men. Say now, if one could fetch down an angel from heaven, and should bid him

stand here and listen to our preaching, as one whose duty it is to conform himself thereto, would it not be shameful and preposterous? But if to be yet, like children, under teaching about these things be ridiculous; what must it be, not even to attend to these things: how great the condemnation, how great the shame! To be Christians still, and to have to learn that it is not right to swear! However, let us put up with that, lest we incur even worse ridicule.

Well then, let us speak to you to-day from the Old Testament. What does it tell us? Accustom not thy mouth to swearing; neither use thyself to the naming of the Holy One. And why? For as a servant that is continually beaten shall not be without a blue mark, so he that sweareth. See the discernment of this wise man. He did not say, Accustom not to swearing thy mind, but thy mouth; because being altogether an affair of the mouth, thus it is easily remedied. For at last it becomes a habit without intention; as, for instance, there are many who entering the public baths, as soon as they have passed the threshold, cross themselves. This the hand has got to do, without any one's bidding, by force of habit. Again, at the lighting of a candle, often when the mind is intent on something else, the hand makes the sign. In the same way also the mouth, without concurrence of the mind, articulates the word, from mere habit, and the whole affair is in the tongue. Neither use thyself, he says, to the naming of the Holy One. For as a servant that is continually beaten shall not be without a blue mark, so he that sweareth. He speaks not here of false oaths, but he cuts down all oaths, and to them also assigns their punishment. Why then, swearing is a sin. For such in truth is the soul; full of all these ulcers, all these scars. But you do not see them? Yes, this is the mischief of it; and yet you might see, if you wished; for God has given you eyes. With eyes of this kind did the Prophet see, when he said, My wounds stink, and are corrupt, because of my foolishness. We have despised God, we have hated that good Name, we have trodden Christ under foot, we have lost all

HOMIL. reverence, none names the Name of God with honour. Yet X. if you love any one, even at his name you start to your feet ; but God you thus continually invoke, and make nothing of it. Call upon Him for the benefit of your enemy ; call upon Him for the salvation of your own soul ; then He will be present, then you will delight Him ; whereas now you provoke Him to anger. Call upon Him, as Stephen did ;
ch.7, 59. Lord, he said, lay not this sin to their charge. Call upon 1Sam.1, Him, as did the wife of Elkanah, with tears, and sobs, and 10. prayers. I prevent you not, rather I earnestly exhort you to it. Call upon Him, as Moses called upon Him, yea, cried, interceding for those * who had driven him into banishment. For you to make mention at random of any person of consideration, is taken as an insult : and do you bandy God about in your talk, in season, out of season ? I do not want to hinder you from keeping God always in your mind : nay, this I even desire and pray for, only that you should do this, so as to honour Him. Great good would this have done us, if we had called upon God only when we ought, and for what we ought. And why, I would ask, were such miracles wrought in the Apostles' times, and not in ours ? And yet it is the same God, the same Name. But no, the case is not the same. For then they called upon Him only for those objects which I have mentioned ; whereas we call upon Him not for these, but quite other purposes.—If a man refuse to believe you, and that is why you swear, say to him, “ Believe me : ” however, if you will needs make oath, swear by yourself. I say this, not to set up a law against Christ's Matt. 5, law ; God forbid ; for it is said, Let your yea be yea, and 37. your nay, nay : but by way of coming down to your present level, that I may more easily lead you to the practice of this commandment, and divert you from this tyrannical habit. How many who have done well in other respects, have been undone by these practices ! Shall I tell you why it was per-

* ὑπὲρ τῶν φυγαδευσάντων αὐτόν. When the “ intercession ” of Moses is spoken of, it is natural to suppose that the reference is to Exod. xxxii. 11 ff. But Sav. and Ben. refer this to Numb. xii. 13. perhaps because of ἐβόα (LXX. ἐβόησε). But the addition, “ for those who had driven him into banishment,” does not suit the latter and less memoorable occasion : for Miriam and Aaron did but “ speak against Moses,” not attempt to banish or expel him. More fully expressed, the meaning may be, “ For a people who began by making him a fugitive, Ex. ii. 15. Acts vii. 29. and now had put the finishing stroke to their ingratitude.” Comp. Ex. xvii. 4. Num. xiv. 10, 13, &c.

mitted the ancients to take oaths? (for to take false oaths, <sup>Acts</sup> was not permitted to them either.) Because they swore by <sup>IV.</sup> idols. But are you not ashamed to rest in laws, by which <sup>1—22.</sup> they in their infirmity were led on to something better? It is true, when I take a Gentile in hand, I do not immediately lay this injunction upon him, but in the first place I exhort him to know Christ; but if the believer, who has both learnt Him and heard Him, must needs crave the same forbearance with the Gentile, what is the use, what the gain (of his Christianity)?—But the habit is strong, and you cannot detach yourself from it? Well then, since the tyranny of habit is so great, transfer it into another channel. And how is this to be done? you will ask. What I have said often, I say also now; let there be many 'monitors, let there be many examiners and censors. Say; if you chance to put on your 'mantle inside out, you allow your servant to correct your mistake, and are not ashamed to learn of him, although there is much to be ashamed of in this; and here when you are getting hurt to your soul, are you ashamed to be taught better by another? You suffer your menial to put your dress in order, and to fasten your shoes, and will you not endure him that would put your soul in order? Let even your menial, your child, your wife, your friend, your kinsman, your neighbour, be your teachers on this point. For as when a wild beast is hunted down from all sides, it is impossible for it to escape; so he that has so many to watch him, so many to reprove him, who is liable to be struck at from all sides, cannot help being on his guard. The first day he will find it hard to put up with, and the second, and the third; but after that it will come easier, and, the fourth passed, there will not even be any thing to do. Make the experiment, if you doubt me; take it into consideration, I beseech you. It is not a trifling matter to be wrong in, nor yet to come right in; on both sides it is great, for evil, and for good. May the good be effected, through the grace and loving-mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ, to Whom with the Father and the Holy Ghost be glory, power, and honour, now and ever, world without end. Amen.

And being let go, they went to their own company, and reported all that the chief priests and elders had said unto them.

NOT for their own glory did they tell the tale—how should such be their motive?—but what they displayed was the proofs therein exhibited of the grace of Christ. All that their adversaries had said, this they told; their own part, it is likely, they omitted: this made the hearers all the more courageous. What then? These again flee to the true Succour, to the Alliance invincible, and again, with one accord. And when they heard that, it is said, with one accord they lifted up their voice to God, and said: and with great earnestness, for it is no prayer made at random. Observe with what exquisite propriety their prayers are framed: thus, when they besought to be shewn who was meet for the

v. 24. Apostleship, they said, Thou, Lord, which knowest the heart of all men, shew: for it was a subject for Prescience there: but here, where the thing needed was that the mouths of their adversaries should be stopped, they speak of lordship; wherefore they begin thus: <sup>v. 24-26</sup> <sup>1 Δείκτοτα</sup> 'Lord, the God that madest heaven and earth, and the sea, and all that in them is: Who', by the Holy Ghost, through the mouth of Thy servant David our father, didst say, Why did the heathen rage, and the people imagine vain things? The kings of the earth

stood up, and the rulers were gathered together against the Lord, and against His Christ. It is to sue God, as one may say, upon His own covenants, that they thus produce this prophecy: and at the same time to comfort themselves with the thought, that in vain are all the imaginations of their foes. This then is what they say: Bring those words into accomplishment, and shew that they imagine vain things.—

For of a truth, they proceed, there were gathered together in this city, against Thy holy Child<sup>1</sup> Jesus, Whom Thou hast<sup>1</sup> anointed, both Herod, and Pontius Pilate, together with the Gentiles and the people of Israel, for to do whatsoever Thy hand and Thy counsel determined before to be done. And now, Lord, behold their threatenings. Observe their<sup>2</sup> largeness of mind. These are not words of imprecation. In saying, their threatenings, they do not mean this or that thing specifically threatened, but only in general, the fact of their threatening, perhaps, as being formidable. In fact, the writer is concise in his narrative. And observe, they do not say, 'Crush them, cast them down;' but what? And grant unto Thy servants, that with all boldness they may speak Thy word. Let us also learn thus to pray. And yet how full of wrath one would be, when fallen among men intent upon killing him, and making threats to that effect? how full of animosity? But not so these saints. By stretching forth Thine hand to heal, and that signs and wonders may be done by the Name of Thy holy Child Jesus. If in that Name the mighty deeds are wrought, great will be the boldness.

And when they had prayed, the place was shaken where they were assembled together. This was the proof that they were heard, and of His visitation. And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost. What means, They were filled? It means, They were inflamed; and the Gift burned up within them. And they spake the word of God with boldness. And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul. Do you see that together with the grace of God they also contributed their part? For everywhere it ought to be well observed, that together with the grace of God they do their part likewise. Just as Peter said above, Silver and gold have I none; and again, that they

XI. that they were heard, the sacred writer proceeds to speak also of them, what virtue they shewed. Moreover, he is just about to enter upon the narrative of Sapphira and Ananias, and with a view to shew the detestable conduct of that pair, he first discourses of the noble behaviour of the rest. Now say, did their love beget their poverty, or the poverty the love? In my opinion, the love beget the poverty, and then the poverty drew tight the cords of love. For observe what he says: They were all of one heart and of one soul. Behold<sup>c</sup>, heart and soul are what make the “together.” Neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common. And with great power the Apostles<sup>1</sup> rendered their testimony of the resurrection. The phrase betokens them to be as persons put in trust with a deposit: he speaks of it as a debt or obligation: that is, their testimony they with boldness did render, or pay off, to all. And great grace was upon them all. Neither was there any among them that lacked. Their feeling was just as if they were under the paternal roof, all for a while<sup>d</sup> sharing alike. It is not to be said, that though indeed they maintained the rest, yet they did it with the feeling that the means whereof they maintained them were still their own. No, the admirable circumstance is this, that they first alienated their property, and so maintained the rest, on purpose that the maintenance might not come as of their own private means,
v. 33. but as of the common property. For as many as were v. 34. possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the price of the things that were sold, and laid them down at the Apostles’ feet; and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need. A great mark of honour who by the Apostles was surnamed Barnabas, (which is, <sup>Acts</sup> being interpreted, The son of consolation.) I do not think <sup>IV. 23-37.</sup> that this is the same with the companion of Matthias; for that person was also called Justus and [Barsabas, but this, Joses and] Barnabas, [son of consolation]. I suppose he also received the name from his virtue, as being qualified and suited for this duty. [A Levite, and of the country of Cyprus by birth.] Observe on all occasions how the writer indicates [2.] the breaking up of the Law. But how was he also a Cyprian by birth? Because they then even removed to other countries, and still were called Levites. Having land, sold it, and brought the price, and laid it at the Apostles' feet *.

Let us now look over again what has been said. [And <sup>Recapitulation. v. 23.</sup> being let go, they went to their own company, and reported all that the chief priests and elders had said unto them.] See the unostentatious conduct of the Apostles, and their largeness of mind. They did not go about boasting, and say, 'How we<sup>1</sup> served the priests!' nor were they ambitious of<sup>1</sup> <sup>ἀπε- χρησά- μεθα.</sup> honour: but, we read, they came unto their own company. Observe how they do not cast themselves upon temptations, but when the temptations present themselves, with courage endure them. Had it been some other of the disciples, perhaps, emboldened by the countenance of the multitude, he might have insulted, might have vented ever so many harsh expressions. But not so these true philosophers; they do all with mildness and with gentleness. And when they <sup>v. 24.</sup> heard that, we read, with one accord they lifted up their voice to God. That shout proceeded from delight and great emotion. Such indeed are the prayers which do their work, prayers replete with true philosophy, prayers offered up for such objects, by such persons, on such occasions, in such a manner; whereas all others are abominable and profane. [Lord, Thou the God that madest heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is.] Observe how they

 v. 28. didst serve Thee of Thine enemies for Thine own pleasure. [For to do whatever Thy hand, etc.] Here they discourse of His exceeding Skill and Wisdom and Power. So then, as enemies they came together, and with murderous purpose, and as opposing themselves, but they did what things Thou wouldest: For to do, as it is said, whatsoever Thy hand and Thy purpose determined before to be done. What means, Thy hand? Here he seems to me to denote<sup>i</sup>

<sup>f</sup> Against the Arians, who from such texts as Matt. 12, 28. inferred the inferiority of the Son, Chrys. says, "Observe, the Father Himself is here said to speak by the Holy Ghost." This is lost in the modern text, which substitutes Σωτήρ for Πατήρ. The text is given in our Mss. with these variations. Comp. note a. A. "Observe how they say nothing idle, but speak of His power only: or rather, just as Christ said to the Jews, If I by the Spirit of God do speak, so these also say, By the Holy Ghost. Behold, the Saviour also speaks by the Spirit. And hear what it is that they say. Lord, the God Who by the mouth of David, &c."

ment on v. 29: viz. before the sentence which (in the old text) also begins with ὅρα πῶς. It is certainly misplaced there. See note k.—Διαιροῦσι τὸ πάθος seems to refer to the mention of Herod and Pontius Pilate.

<sup>h</sup> δ ἐπιτρέψας, δ καὶ ἐγκαλῶν καὶ εἰς πέρας ἀγαγόν. The meaning seems to be, that though permitting, He calls to account, and though holding men responsible, yet brought it to pass. The modern text omits δ καὶ ἐγκαλῶν, and adds εἰργάσω at the end.

<sup>i</sup> τὸ αὐτὸ λέγειν τὴν δύναμιν καὶ βουλήν. i. e. "hand" means "power," and "hand" (or, power) and "purpose," or, "will" here make one notion, 'Thy will which is also power,' for to Thee to will is to prevail: not two notions, for we do not say that power determines, but only the will.—The Edd. however adopt from E. τὴν χεῖρα for τὸ αὐτὸ, which 'spoils the sense. "By the hand he means the power and the purpose."—Below, B. C. have ὅτι τῇ χεὶρὶ διέταρτεν (A. omits the clause), we retain from E. F. D. διέταρτεν.—

one and the same thing by power and purpose, meaning that for Thee it is enough but to will: for it is not by power that one determines. [Whatsoever Thy hand, etc.] i.e. Whatsoever Thou didst ordain: either this is the meaning, or, that by by His hand He did effect. [And now, Lord, regard their threatenings.] As at that time, it is said, they imagined vain things, so now, grant that their imaginations may be in vain: i. e. let not their threatenings come into accomplishment. And this they said not because they would themselves deprecate any hardship, but for the preaching's sake. For they do not say, 'and deliver us out of dangers;' but what? And grant unto Thy servants, that with all boldness they may speak Thy word. Thou Who didst bring to pass the former designs, bring these also to accomplishment. Observe<sup>1</sup>, how they affirm God to be the Author of their confidence: and how they ask all for God's sake, nothing for their own glory or ambition. They promise for their own part, that they will not be dismayed; but they pray that signs may be wrought: by stretching forth Thy hand to heal, v. 30. and that signs and wonders may be done: for without these, however great the zeal they shewed, they would be striving to no purpose. God assented to their prayer, and manifested this, by shaking the place. For when they had prayed, it v. 31. is said, the place was shaken. And wherefore this was done, hear from the prophet, when he says, He looketh on the earth, and maketh it to tremble. For by this He made it manifest that He is present to their prayers. And again, another prophet saith, The earth was shaken, and did tremble at the presence of the Lord. And God did this, both to make it more awful, and to lead them on to a courageous trust. [And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spake the word of God with boldness.] They<sup>1</sup> gained increased boldness. As it was the beginning

 XI. their<sup>1</sup> persuasion—but after this we nowhere find the like

 received. In fact, they had no means of proving that He

 λείαν only their own<sup>2</sup> assurance that they sought; but that they might not be put to shame, but that they might speak with boldness. The place was shaken, and that made them all the more unshaken. For this is sometimes a token of wrath, sometimes of favour and providence, but on the present occasion, of wrath. For<sup>3</sup> in those times it took place in an unusual manner. Thus, at the Crucifixion, the earth was Mat. 24, shaken: and the Lord Himself says, Then there shall be
 7. famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes in divers places.
 But then the wrath of which it was a sign was against the adversaries: as for the disciples, it filled them with the Spirit. Observe, even the Apostles, after the prayer, are
 v. 32. filled with the Holy Ghost. [And<sup>4</sup> the multitude of them that believed, etc.] Great, you perceive, is the virtue of this thing, seeing there was need of this (grace) even in that company. For this is the foundation of all that is good, this of which he now for the second time makes mention, exhorting all men to the contempt of riches: Neither<sup>5</sup> said any of them that ought of the things he possessed was his

 in consequence not merely of the miraculous signs, but of

Then, "For since it was the beginning (of their work), they besought also a sensible sign in order that they might be believed (πρὸς τὸ πιστευθῆναι αὐτοὺς, but after this, &c.) Great was the encouragement they thus received from their prayer. And with good reason they crave the grace of signs, for they had no other means, &c."

E. has, "to the intent the power of Him that was crucified should everywhere be known, and that the Sufferer was God, and not simply man. But further: although it was a token of wrath, yet was it of His wrath against the adversaries, &c." but Edd. follow the old text here.

<sup>3</sup> The innovator, mistaking the meaning of τὸ δεύτερον (viz. the reference to ch. 2, 44.), has, "Saying above (v. 32.) Neither said any of them, etc." and here (v. 34.) "Neither was there any among them that lacked." So Edd.

their own purpose, is manifest by the case of Sapphira and Ananias. [And with great power gave the Apostles witness, <sup>Acts IV. 23-37.</sup> etc.] Not in word, but with power the Apostles exhibited <sup>v. 33.</sup> their testimony of the Resurrection: just as Paul saith, <sup>1 Cor. 2, 4.</sup> And my preaching was not with persuasive words of human wisdom, but with manifestation of the Spirit and of power. And it is not merely, With power, but, With great power. And great grace, it says, was upon them all; for neither <sup>v. 34.</sup> was there any among them that lacked. This is why the grace (was upon them all,) for that there was none that lacked: that is, from the exceeding ardour of the givers, none was in want. For they did not give in part, and in part reserve: nor yet in giving all, give it as their own. And they lived moreover in great abundance: they removed all inequality from among them, and made a goodly order. [For as many as were possessors, etc.] And with great respect they did this: for they did not presume to give into their hands, nor did they ostentatiously present, but brought to the Apostles' feet. To them they left it to be the dispensers, made them the owners, that thenceforth all should be defrayed as from common, not from private, property. This was also a help to them against vain-glory. If this were done now, we should live more pleasant lives, both rich and poor, nor would it be more pleasant to the poor than to the rich themselves. And if you please, let us now for a while depict it in words, and derive at least this pleasure from it, since you have no mind for it in your actions. For at any rate this is evident, even from the facts which took place then, that by selling their possessions they did not come to be in need, but made them rich that were in need. However, let us now depict this state of things in words, and let all sell their possessions, and bring them into the common stock—in words, I mean: let none be excited, rich or poor. How much gold think you would be collected? For my part, I conjecture—for of course it is not possible to speak exactly—that supposing all here, men and women, to empty out their whole property, lands, possessions, houses,—for I will not speak of slaves, since at that time there was no such thing, but doubtless such as were slaves they set at liberty,—perhaps ten hundred thousand pounds weight of gold would be the amount collected: nay, HOMIL. twice or thrice as much. For consider; at what number of XI. juga<sup>p</sup> (yokes) is our city rated? How many (of the population) shall we say are Christians? shall we say an hundred thousand, and the rest Greeks and Jews? Then what thousands (of pounds) of gold would be collected! And what is the number of poor? I do not think more than fifty thousand. Then to feed that number daily, what abundance there would be! And yet if the food were received in common, all taking their meals together, it would require no such great outlay after all. But, you will ask, what should we do after the money was spent? And do you think it ever could be spent? Would not the grace of God be ten thousand fold greater? Would not the grace of God be indeed richly poured out? Nay, should we not make it a heaven upon earth? If, where the numbers were three thousand and five thousand, the doing of this thing had such splendid success, and none of them complained of poverty, how much more glorious would this be in so vast a multitude? And even of those that are without, who would not contribute?—But, to shew that it is the living separately that is expensive and causes poverty, let there be a house in which are ten children: and the wife and the man, let the one work at her wool, the other bring his earnings from his outdoor occupation: now tell me, in which way would these spend most? by taking their meals together and occupying one house, or by living separately? Of course, by living separately. For if the ten children must live apart, they would need ten several rooms, ten tables, ten attendants, and the income otherwise in proportion. Is it not for this very reason, that where there is a great number of servants, they have all one

<sup>p</sup> εἰς πόσον λόγων ἀριθμὸν συντελεῖ; The word here used perplexed the scribes of later times when it had become obsolete, and N. has λούλων, B. λούγγων, C. έγγων (sic), only A. ex corr. λόγων. The innovator substitutes μυγδων and συντελεῖ. The meaning is, At what number of juga is our city assessed to the imperial tributes? Justinian, Novell. xvii. c. 8. prescribes that the imperial πρόκτορες, exactores, shall be compelled to insert in their returns (ἀποχαί) the exact quantity "of zygocephala or juga or jugalía or whatever else be the term used in different localities:" τὸ πόσον τῶν (ζυγοκεφάλων ἢ λόγων ἢ जुगालίων, ἢ ὅπως ἄλλοτε ἂν αὐτὰ κατὰ χώραν καλοῖεν. See Du Fresnoe Gloss. s. vv. It seems that each holding of land was rated or assessed at so many juga or yokes of oxen; moreover the term jugum is equivalent to a measure of land, as Varro remarks that land is measured in some places by juga, in others by jugera.

table, that the expense may not be so great? For so it is, Acts IV. 23-37. division always makes diminution, concord and agreement make increase. The dwellers in the monasteries live just as the faithful did then: now did ever any of these die of hunger? was ever any of them not provided for with plenty of every thing? Now, it seems, people are more afraid of this than of falling into a boundless and bottomless deep. But if we had made actual trial of this<sup>a</sup>, then indeed we should boldly venture upon<sup>1</sup> this plan. What grace too,<sup>1</sup> τοῦ πράγματος. think you, would there not be! For if at that time, when there was no believer but only the three thousand and the five thousand: when all, throughout the world, were enemies, when they could nowhere look for comfort, they yet boldly entered upon this plan with such success; how much more would this be the case now, when by the grace of God there are believers everywhere throughout the world? What Gentile would be left? For my part, I think there would not be one; we should so attract all, and draw them to us! But yet if we do but make 'fair progress, I trust in God that even this shall be realized. Only do as I say, and let us successfully achieve things in their regular order; if God grant life, I trust that we shall soon bring you over to this way of life.

In the first place, as regards that law about swearing: accomplish that; establish it firmly: and let him that has kept it make known him that has not, and call him to account withal, and rebuke him sternly. For the 'appointed time is at hand,<sup>2</sup> ἡ προθεσμία, supra, Hom. viii. and I am holding inquisition in the matter, and him that is found guilty I will banish and exclude. But God forbid that any such should be found among us; rather may it appear, that all have strictly kept this spiritual watch-word. And as in war it is by the watch-word that friends and strangers are shewn, so let it be now; for indeed now

<sup>a</sup> i. e. People now are more afraid of this (the cenobitical) way of life, than they are of launching into the sea of this world's temptations: whereas if we had made trial of this, we should boldly venture upon the practice so happily adopted by the first Christians. (τοῦ πράγματος as above, p. 160. note n.)

necessarily inserts ταύτην, which Ben. adopts. 'Si hac via progrediamur.' Ὅδῳ προβαίνειν (or δὲ βὰδ(ι)εῖν) is a common phrase in S. Chrys. Applied to persons, it means 'to be fairly started and getting on:' to things, 'to be in train,' as in Hom. i. δὲ καὶ τὰ ἄλλα προῦβαιναν, "the rest would follow in course."

XI. brethren that are properly such. For what a good thing it is that we should have this to be our cognizance both here and in a foreign land! What a weapon this, against the very head of the devil! A mouth that cannot swear will soon both engage God in prayers, and smite the devil a deadly blow. A mouth that cannot swear will also be incapable of using insulting language. Cast out this fire from your tongue, as you would from a house: this fire, drag it out. Give your tongue a little rest: make the sore less virulent. Yea, I beseech you, do this, that I may go on to set you another lesson: for as long as this is not rightly done, I dare not pass on to any other. Let this lesson be got perfectly, and you shall have a consciousness of the achievement, and then I will introduce you to other laws, or rather not I, but Christ. Implant in your soul this good thing, and by little and little ye shall be a paradise of God, far better than that paradise of old. No serpent among you, no deadly tree, nor any such thing. Fix this habit deep. If this be done, not ye only that are present shall be benefited, but all that are in all the world; and not they alone, but those that are to succeed hereafter. For a good habit having once entered, and being kept by all, will be handed on to long ages, and no circumstances shall be able to erase it. If he that gathered sticks on the sabbath was stoned,—the man that is doing a far more heinous work than that gathering, the man that is amassing a load of sins, for such is the multitude of oaths, what shall he undergo? what shall he not have to endure? You will receive great assistance from God, if this be well achieved by you. If I were to say, Be not abusive, immediately you will plead to me your indignation; should I say, Be not envious, you will urge some other excuse. But in this case you have nothing of the kind to say. On which account I began with the easy precepts, which indeed is also the uniform practice in all arts. And thus one comes to the higher duties, by learning first those which are easier far. How easy it is you will see, when by the grace of God having succeeded in this, you shall receive another precept.

Put it in my power to speak out boldly, in the presence

both of Gentiles and of Jews, and, above all, of God. Yea, <sup>Acts</sup> I entreat you by the love, by the pangs wherewith I have <sup>IV.</sup> 23—37. travailed for your birth, my little children. I will not add what follows, of whom I travail in birth again; nor will <sup>Gal. 4,</sup> I say, until Christ be formed in you. For I am persuaded, <sup>19.</sup> that Christ has been formed in you. Other language I will use towards you; My brethren, dearly beloved and longed <sup>Phil. 4,</sup> for, my joy and my crown. Believe me that I shall use no <sup>1.</sup> other language. If at this moment there were placed upon my head ten thousand richly-jewelled royal crowns, they could not give me the joy which I feel at your growth in holiness; or rather, I do not think the monarch himself has such a joy, as that wherewith I joy over you. Let him have come home, victorious over all the nations at war with him, let him have won many other crowns besides the crown of his right; and receive other diadems as tokens of his victory: I do not think he would joy over his trophies, as I joy over your souls' progress. For I exult, as if I had a thousand crowns on my head; and well may I rejoice. For if by the grace of God you achieve this good habit, you will have gained a thousand battles far more difficult than his; by wrestling and fighting with malicious demons, and fiendish spirits, with the tongue, not with sword, but by the will. For consider how much is gained, if so be that you do succeed! You have eradicated, first, a heinous habit; secondly, an evil conceit, the source of all evil, namely, the opinion that the thing is indifferent and can do no hurt; thirdly, wrath; fourthly, covetousness; for all these are the offspring of swearing. Nay, hence you will acquire a sure footing in the way to all other virtues. For as when children learn their letters, they learn not them alone, but by means of them are gradually taught to read; so shall it be with you. That evil conceit will no longer deceive you, you will not say, This is indifferent; you will no longer speak by mere habit, but will manfully stand against all, so that having perfected in all parts that virtue which is after God, you may reap eternal blessings, through the grace and loving-kindness of His Only-Begotten Son, to Whom with the Father and the Holy Ghost be glory, power, and honour, now and ever, world without end. Amen.

HOMILY XII.

ACTS iv. 36, 37.

And Joses, who by the Apostles was surnamed Barnabas, (which is, being interpreted, The son of consolation,) a Levite, and of the country of Cyprus, having land, sold it, and brought the money, and laid it at the Apostles' feet.

THE writer is now about to relate the affair of Ananias and Sapphira, and in order to shew that the man's sin was of the worst description, he first mentions him who performed the virtuous deed; that, there being so great a multitude all doing the same, so great grace, so great miracles, he, taught by none of these, but blinded by covetousness, brought destruction upon his own head. Having land,—meaning that this was all he possessed,—sold it, and brought the money, and laid it at the Apostles'
ch. 5, 1. feet. But a certain man named Ananias, with Sapphira
2. his wife, sold a possession, and kept back part of the price, his wife also being privy to it, and brought a certain part, and laid it at the Apostles' feet. The aggravating circumstance was, that the sin was concerted, and none other saw what was done. How came it into the mind of this hapless
v. 3. wretch to commit this crime? But Peter said, Ananias, why hath Satan filled thine heart to lie to the Holy Ghost, and to keep back part of the price of the land? Observe even in this, a great miracle performed, greater far than the
v. 4. former. Whiles it remained, says he, was it not thine own? and after it was sold, was it not in thine own power? That is, 'Was there any obligation and force? do we
v. 5. constrain you against your will?' Why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart? thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God. And Ananias hearing these words fell down, <sup>Acts</sup> and gave up the ghost. This miracle is greater than that <sup>IV. 36.</sup> of the lame man, in respect of the death inflicted, and the <sup>to V. 15.</sup> knowing what was in the thought of the heart, even what was done in secret. And great fear came on all them that heard these things. And the young men arose, and wound <sup>v. 6—8.</sup> him up, and carried him out, and buried him. And it was about the space of three hours after, when his wife, not knowing what was done, came in. And Peter answered unto her, Tell me whether ye sold the land for so much? The woman he would fain save, for the man had been the author of the sin: therefore he gives her time to clear herself, and opportunity for repentance, saying, Tell me whether ye sold the land for so much? And she said, Yea, for so much. Then Peter said unto her, How is it <sup>v. 9—11.</sup> that ye have agreed together to tempt the Holy Ghost? Behold, the feet of them which have buried thy husband are at the door, and shall carry thee out. Then she fell down straightway at his feet, and yielded up the ghost; and the young men came in, and found her dead, and, carrying her forth, buried her by her husband. And great fear came upon all the Church, and upon as many as heard these things.

After this fear had come upon them, he wrought more miracles; both Peter and the rest: And by the hands of the <sup>v. 12-15.</sup> Apostles were many signs and wonders wrought among the people; and they were all with one accord in Solomon's porch. And of the rest durst no man join himself to them, i. e. to the Apostles; but the people magnified them, i. e. the Jewish people. If<sup>a</sup> no man durst join himself unto them, the Apostles, [there were, however, the more added unto the Lord, believers, multitudes both of men and of women,

<sup>a</sup> Εἰ οὐδὲς ἐτόλμα κολλᾶσθαι αὐτοῖς τ. ἀποστ. For εἰ, which is the reading of A, and seems to be the true reading, B. C. N. have ἡ. The passage is corrupt, but the sense may be restored by inserting the words of the sacred text as above: i. e. To them, the Apostles, none durst join himself, but believers were the more added to the Lord, &c. Then ὁ γὰρ Πέτρος κ. τ. λ. falls into its natural place as the comment on Πέτρον καὶ ἡ σκία. But with the other reading, ἡ, the sense may be completed as below, p. 171. viz. "or, no man durst, &c." [so that they were allowed to remain undisturbed in Solomon's porch.] The modern text, after "the people magnified them," substitutes: Εἰκότως καὶ γὰρ ὁ Π. κ. τ. λ. "With reason. For indeed Peter was henceforth terrible, inflicting punishment, exposing even the thoughts of the mind: to whom also they gave more heed by reason of the miracle, &c."

HOMIL. insomuch that they brought out into the streets their im- XII. potent folk, and laid them upon couches and beds, that at the least the shadow of Peter passing by might overshadow some of them.] For Peter was the wonderful one, and he to whom they more gave heed, both because of his public harangue, the first and the second and the third, and because of the miracle; for he it was that wrought the miracle, the first, the second, the third: for the present miracle was two- next the inflicting of death at his word of command. That at the least the shadow of Peter passing by, etc. This had not occurred in the history of Christ; but see here what He John 14, had told them actually coming to pass, that "they which 12. believe on Me, the works that I do shall they do also; and

 v. 16. greater works than these shall they do." There came also a multitude out of the cities round about unto Jerusalem, bringing sick folks, and them that were vexed with unclean spirits; and they were healed every one.

And now I would have you observe the way in which their whole life is interwoven. First, there was despondency on account of Christ taken from them, and then came joy because of the Spirit descending upon them; again, dejection because of the scoffers, and then joy in the result of their own apology. And here again we find both dejection and gladness. In that they were become conspicuous, and that God made revelations to them, there was gladness: in that they had cut off some of their own company, there was sadness. Once more: again there is gladness upon their success, and again sadness by reason of the High Priest. And so it will be seen to be the case throughout. And the same will be found to hold in the case of the ancient saints likewise.—But let us look over again what has been said.

Recapi- They sold them, it is written, and brought the prices, and certain man named Ananias, etc.] This history touches Acts V. 1—16. Bishops too, and very forcibly. And the wife of Ananias was privy to the thing done: therefore he examines her. But perhaps some one will say that he dealt very harshly with her. What do you mean? What harshness? If for gathering sticks a man is to be stoned, much rather ought he for sacrilege; for this money was become sacred. He that has chosen to sell his goods and distribute them, and then withdraws them, is guilty of sacrilege. But if he is sacrilegious, who resumes from his own, much more he who takes from what is not his own. And do not think that because the consequence is not now the same, the crime will go unpunished. Do you see that this is the charge brought against Ananias, that having made the money sacred, he afterwards secreted it? Couldst thou not, said Peter, after selling thy land, use the proceeds as thine own? Wast thou forbidden? Wherefore after thou hadst promised it? See how at the very beginning, the devil made his attack; in the very midst of such signs and wonders, how this man was hardened! Something of the same kind had happened upon a time in the Old Testament. The son of Charmi coveted Josh. 7, 2; 20, 22. the devoted thing: for observe there also what vengeance ensues upon the sin. Sacrilege, beloved, is a most grievous crime, insulting, and full of contempt. We neither obliged thee to sell, the Apostle says, nor to give thy money when thou hadst sold; of thine own free choice thou didst it; why hast thou then stolen from the sacred treasury? Why, he says, v. 3. hath Satan filled thine heart? Well, if Satan did the thing, why is the man made guilty of it? For admitting the influence of the devil, and being filled with it. You will say, they ought to have corrected him. But he would not have received correction; for he that has seen such things as he had seen, and is none the better, would certainly be none the better for any thing else that could be done; the matter was not one to be simply passed over: like a gangrene, it must be cut out, that it might not infect the rest of the body. As it is, both the man himself is benefited in regard that he is not left to advance further in wickedness, and the rest, in that they are made more earnest; otherwise the contrary would have ensued. In the next place, Peter proves him

- HOMIL. guilty, and shews that the deed was not hidden from him, and XII. then pronounces the sentence. But wherefore, upon what purpose hast thou done this? Didst thou wish to keep it? Thou oughtest to have kept it all along, and never to have professed to give it. The sacrilege, beloved, is a grievous one. For another, it may be, coveted what was not his own: but it was at thy discretion to keep what was thine own. Why then didst thou first make it sacred, and then take it? Out of excessive contempt hast thou done this. The deed does not admit of pardon, it is past pleading for.— Therefore let it be no stumbling-block to any, if at present also there are sacrilegious persons. If there were such persons then, much more now, when evils are many. But

And yet, signs had been wrought before: true, but there was not such a sense of fear. So true is that saying, The Lord is known

- 2 Sam. 6, 7. the case of the Ark: Uzzah was punished, and fear came upon the rest. But in that instance the king through fear removed from him the Ark; but here the disciples became
- v. 7. more earnestly heedful. [And it was about the space of three hours after, when his wife, not knowing what was done, came in, etc.] But observe how Peter, instead of sending for her, waited till she entered; and how none of the others durst carry out the intelligence. Such the teacher's awfulness, such the disciples' reverence, such the obedience! An interval of three hours—and yet the woman did not hear of it, and none of those present reported it, although there was time enough for it to be noised abroad; but they were afraid. This circumstance the Evangelist relates with wonder even, when he says, Not knowing what was done, came in.
- v. 8. [And Peter answered unto her, etc.] And yet she might have perceived even from this that Peter knew the secret. For why, having questioned none other, does he question you? Was it not clear that he asked because he knew?

But so great was her hardness, it would not let her attempt to evade the guilt; and with great confidence she replied; for she thought she was speaking only to a man. The aggravation of the sin was, that they committed it as with one soul, just as upon a settled compact between them. How is it that ye have agreed together, he said, to tempt the Spirit of the Lord? behold, the feet of them which have buried thy husband are at the door. First he makes her learn the sin, and then shews that she will justly suffer the same punishment with her husband, since she has committed the same wickedness: And they shall carry thee out. And she fell down straightway at his feet, for she was standing near him, and yielded up the ghost. So entirely by their own act had they invited upon themselves the vengeance! Who after that would not be struck with awe? who would not fear the Apostle? who would not marvel? who not be afraid? And they were with one accord, all of them in Solomon's porch—no longer in a house, but having occupied the very Temple, they there passed their time! No longer they guarded themselves against touching the unclean; nay, without scruple they handled the dead. And observe how, while to their own people they are severe, against the aliens they do not exercise their power. But the people, he says, magnified them. And as he had mentioned their being in Solomon's porch, that you may not wonder how the multitude allowed this, he tells us that they did not dare even to approach them: for no man, he says, durst join himself unto them. [But believers were the more added unto the Lord, multitudes both of men and women: insomuch that they brought forth the sick into the streets, and laid them on beds and couches, that at the least the shadow of Peter passing by might overshadow some of them.] Great faith, surpassing what had been shewn in the case of Christ. How comes this? Because Christ declared: [And greater works than these shall he do, because I go unto My Father.] And these things the people do, while the Apostles remain there, and are not moving about from place to place: also from other places they were all bringing [their sick] on beds and

XII. tribute of wonder; from them that believed, from them that were healed, from him that was punished; from their boldness of speech towards those (their adversaries), from the virtuous behaviour of the believers: for certainly the effect produced was not owing to the miracles only. For though the Apostles themselves modestly ascribe it all to this cause, declaring that they did these things in the name of Christ, yet at the same time the life and noble conduct of the men helped to produce this effect. [And believers were more added unto the Lord, multitudes both of men and women.] Observe, how he now no longer tells the number of them that believed: at such a rate was the faith making way even to an immense multitude, and so widely was the Resurrection proclaimed. So then the people magnified them: but they were now no longer lightly to be despised as once they were: for in a little moment, at a single turn of the scale, such have been the effects produced by the fisherman and by the publican! Earth was become a heaven, for manner of life, for boldness of speech, for wonders, for all besides; like Angels were they looked upon with wonder: all unconcerned for ridicule, for threats, for perils: compassionate<sup>d</sup> were they, and beneficent: some of them they succoured with money, and some with words, and some with healing of their bodies and of their souls; <sup>1</sup>no kind of healing but they accomplished.

Peter all but pleads for himself, when at the point to inflict the punishment, and at the same time gives a lesson to the rest. For because the act would seem exceeding stern, therefore it is that he does so much<sup>e</sup> in the case. In respect of the woman also the process of judgment was terrible. But<sup>f</sup> see how many evils grow out of the sacrilege: covetousness, contempt of God, impiety; and upon these too he pleaded for himself before the assembly, in that he did not immediately proceed to punishment, but first exposed the sin. None groaned, none lamented, all were terrified. For <sup>Acts</sup> as their faith increased, the signs also were multiplied, and <sup>V. 1—16.</sup> great was the fear among their own company: for the <sup>πολε-</sup> things which are from without do not so <sup>μεν.</sup> militate against our peace, as do the acts of our own people. If we be firmly joined together, no<sup>s</sup> warfare will be hard: but the mischief would be the being divided and broken up. Now they went about in the public place: with boldness they attacked even the market, and in the midst of enemies they <sup>Ps. 110,</sup> prevailed, and that saying was fulfilled, Be Thou Ruler in<sup>2</sup> the midst among Thine enemies. This was a greater miracle, that they, arrested, cast into prison, should do such acts as these!

If those for lying suffered such things, what shall not the perjured suffer? Because she simply affirmed, Yea, for so much, ye see what she suffered. Bethink you then; they that swear and forswear themselves, of what should they be worthy? It<sup>h</sup> comes in opportunely to-day even from the Old <sup>Zech. 5,</sup> Testament to shew you the heinousness of perjury. There<sup>2</sup> was, it says, a flying sickle, ten cubits in breadth. The flying betokens the swift advent of the vengeance which pursues oaths; that it is many cubits in length and breadth, signifies the force and magnitude of the woes; that it comes flying from heaven, is to shew that the vengeance comes from the judgment-seat on high: that it is in the form of a sickle, denotes the inevitableness of the doom: for ε Edd. "There will be none to war upon us: just as, if we be put asunder one from another, on the contrary all will set upon us. Hence it was that they henceforth were of good courage, and with boldness attacked, &c."

h Εβκαρον καὶ ἀπὸ τῆς Παλαιᾶς δεῖξαι τὸ χαλεπὸν τῆς ἐπιορκίας τῆς ἡμέρας. Meaning perhaps that this had occurred in one of the Scripture Lessons for the day. Below, Καθάπερ γὰρ δρέπανον ὅπου περ ἂν ἐμπεσῇ οὐκ ἂν καθ' αὐτὸ ἀνελκυσθεῖν μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀποτεμνομένης τῆς κεφαλῆς. So A. B. N. Savil. and C, which last however has ἀπὸ for ἀποτεμνομένης. Hales ap. Sav. suggests, that ἀποτεμν. τῆς κεφ. ought to be rejected: it is better however to supply εἰς τὴν τράχηλον before ἐμπεσῇ as in the translation. The meaning is explained in Sermon. ad Pop. Antioch. xv. t. ii. 168.

D. "A flying sword, one might manage to escape from, δρεπάνῃ δὲ εἰς τὸν τράχηλον ἐμπεσοῦσαν καὶ ἀντὶ σχοινίου γενομένην, οὐδεὶς ἂν διαφύγοι, but from a sickle darted round the neck and catching it as a halter would, there can be no escape." Hence it appears that the innovator has quite mistaken the Author's meaning. He reads, Καθάπερ γὰρ δρέπανον εἰς τράχηλον ἐμπεσὼν οὐκ ἂν καθ' αὐτὸ ἀνελκυσθεῖν, μένει δὲ πῶς ἔτι καὶ ἀποτεμνομένης τῆς κεφαλῆς: i. e. 'having cut off one head, it still remains, that it may cut off more:' which is irrelevant to the matter in hand, viz. how τὸ δρεπανοειδὲς denotes τὸ ἄφυκτον τῆς τιμωρίας. Of the Edd. Savile alone retains the old and genuine reading. Montf. strangely remarks, 'Savilianam lectionem esse Morellianam quam sequimur obscuriorem.'

HOMIL. just as the sickle, where it comes and has hooked the XII. neck, is not drawn back with nothing but itself, but with the head reaped off, even so the vengeance which comes upon the swearers is severe, and will not desist until it have completed its work. But if we swear and escape, let us not be confident; this is but to our woe. For what think ye? How many, since Ananias and Sapphira, have dared the same with them? How is it then, say you, that they have not met with the same fate? Not because it was allowed in them, but because they are reserved for a greater punishment. For those who often sin and are not punished, have greater reason to fear and dread than if they were punished. For the vengeance is increased for them by their present impunity and the long-suffering of God. Then let us not look to this, that we are not punished; but let us consider whether we have not sinned: if sinning we are not punished, we have the more reason to tremble. Say, if you have a slave, and you only threaten him, and do not beat him; when is he most in fear, when most inclined to run away? Is it not when you only threaten him? And hence we advise each other not to be continually using threats, thereby choosing rather to agitate the mind by the terror, and lacerating it worse than with blows. For in the one instance the punishment is momentary, but in the other it is perpetual. If then no one feels the stroke of the sickle, do not look to this, but rather let each consider whether he commits such sins. Many like things are done now as were done before the Flood, yet no flood has been sent: because there is a hell threatened, and vengeance. Many sin as the people did in Sodom, yet no rain of fire has been poured down: because a river of fire is prepared. Many go the lengths of Pharaoh; yet they have not fared like Pharaoh, they have not been drowned in a Red Sea: for the sea that awaits them, is the sea of the bottomless pit, where the punishment is not accompanied with insensibility, where there is no suffocation to end all, but in ever lengthened torture, in burning, in strangling, they are consumed there. Many have offended like the Israelites, but no serpents have devoured them: there awaits them the worm that never dieth. Many have been like Gehazi, yet they have not been struck with leprosy: for instead of leprosy, it remains for them to be cut asunder, and numbered among the hypocrites. Many have both sworn and forsworn; but if they have indeed escaped, let us not be confident: the gnashing of teeth awaits them. Yea, here too they will suffer many grievous woes, though, it may be, not immediately, but after further transgressions, that the vengeance may be the greater; for even we often set out at first with small sins, and then through great offences lose all. Therefore when you see any thing happening to you, call to mind that particular sin of yours. The sons of Jacob are an example of this. Remember Joseph's brothers; they had sold their brother, they had even attempted to slay him; nay, they had slain him, as far as inclination went; they had deceived and grieved the old man: they suffered nothing. After many years they are brought into extreme peril, and now they are put in remembrance of this their sin. Exceeding wisely is this circumstance brought in. Hear what they say; We are verily guilty concerning our brother. In this manner then do thou also, when any thing happens, say, We are verily guilty, because we have not obeyed Christ; because we have sworn; my much swearing, and my false swearing, has fallen upon my own head. Confess thou; since they also confessed, and were saved. For what though the punishment follow not immediately? Since Ahab also did not immediately after his sin in the matter of Naboth suffer that vengeance which he yet at last suffered. And what is the reason of this? God sets thee a time, in which to wash thyself clean; but if thou persist, at last He will send down the vengeance. You have seen the fate of liars. Consider what is the fate of false swearers; consider, and desist. It is impossible a swearer should not forswear himself, whether he will or not; and no perjurer can be saved. One false oath sufficeth to finish all, to draw down upon us the whole measure of vengeance. Let us then take heed to ourselves, that we may escape the punishment due to this offence, and be deemed worthy of the lovingkindness of God, through the grace and mercies of His only-begotten Son, with Whom to the Father and the Holy Ghost be glory, power, and honour, now and ever, and world without end. Amen.

morning, and taught.] This was done both for the encouragement of the disciples, and for the benefit and instruction of the others. And observe how the proceeding in the present instance is just the same as in what Christ Himself did. Namely, in His miracles though He does not let men see them in the act of being wrought, He furnishes the means whereby they may be apprised of the things wrought: thus, in His Resurrection, He did not let them see how He rose: in the water made wine, the guests do not see it done, for they had been drinking much, and the discernment He leaves to others. Just so in the present case, they do not see them in the act of being brought forth, but the proofs from which they might gather what had been done, they do see. And it was by night that the Angel put them forth. Why was this? Because<sup>b</sup> in this way they were more believed than they would have been in the other: so, people would not even have had occasion to put the question: they would

If it be meant that the Apostles were more believed because the miracle itself was not seen, than they would have been if the Angel had brought them out in open day, this may be understood in a sense which St. Chrys. expresses elsewhere, viz. with reference to the nature of faith: "in the latter case there could have been no room for doubt; people would have been forced to acknowledge the claims of the Apostles." Thus Hom. vi. in 1 Cor. "Put the case that Christ should come this moment with all the Angels, reveal Himself as God, and all be subject unto Him: would not the heathen believe? But will this be counted unto the heathen for faith? No: this were no faith; for a compulsory power from without—the visible appearance—would have effected this. There is no free choice in the matter: οὐκ ἐστι τὸ πρῶτον προαιρέσεως." But then the next sentence ought to be, 'Ἐκείνως γὰρ οὐδ' ἂν ἐπὶ τὸ ἐρ. ἦλθον: εἰ δὲ οὐχ οὕτως, οὐκ ἂν ἐτέρως ἐπ., or to that effect.—Perhaps, however, the meaning is rather: "It was so plain to common sense that a miracle must have been wrought, that had the Angel brought them out in the sight of all men (οὕτω), they could not have been more believed than they had a right to be as the case was (ἐκείνως). Had the miracle been performed openly (οὕτω), people would have had no occasion even to ask, How is this? And they who, as it was, were not brought to ask such a question, would certainly not have believed under any other circumstances. So in the Old Testament, Nebuciradnezzar, when he sees the Holy Men praising God in the furnace, is brought to ask in amazement, Did we not cast three men, &c.: but these priests are so hardened, that instead of asking as they ought to have done, How came ye out? they only ask, as if nothing had happened, Did we not straitly charge you, &c. And observe, they have no excuse for their wilful apathy: for they have had a full report of the circumstances from the officers: the prison shut, the guards at their posts." If this be the meaning, we must replace οὐκ ἂν or οὐδ' ἂν in the sentence ὅτι οὕτω μᾶλλον κ.τ.λ. But the text is too corrupt to be restored by any simple emendation.—Edd. "Because in this way, &c. especially as they would not have been brought to ask the question, nor yet in another case would they themselves have believed;" ἄλλως τε καὶ ὅτι οὐκ ἂν, and οὕτε μὴν ἐτέρως ἂν καὶ αὐτοὶ ἐπίστευσαν.

<sup>2</sup> E. and Edd. "Having brought them forth. He does not himself bring them away, but lets them go; that in this way also their intrepidity might be known; which also they shewed, in that by night they entered into the temple and taught." In the following sentence perhaps the purport of what St. Chrys. said was, that 'if, as the priests supposed, the guards had let them out, the guards themselves would have absconded, and the Apostles would not have stood in the temple, but would have escaped.' Ει γε περιστέτες may have been said of the guards, "if they had been bribed or otherwise induced to let them out;" but all the Mss. have ει γε π. ἐξῆλθον, in the sense, "supposing, which is not likely, that the Apostles had been induced to come forth at the request of the guards." Savile gives this clause to the latter part, beginning as E. and Edd. with μᾶλλον δε ει ἐξέβ. for καλ ει ἐξέβ. "Supposing they had been induced to come out, or rather, if those had put them out:" Ben. refers it to what precedes; "they would have fled, if they had come out at their request: nay, if those had put them out, &c."

out, as those thought, they would have fled, that is, supposing they had been induced to come out: and if those had put them forth, they would not have stood in the temple, but would have absconded. No one is so void of sense, as not at once to see this. Did we not straitly charge you? Well, if they undertook to obey you, ye do well to call them to account: but if even at the very time they told you they would not obey, what account have you to call them to, what defence is there for them to make? [And behold ye have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine, and intend to bring this man's blood upon us.] Mark the inconsistency of the accusations, and the exceeding folly. They want to make it appear now, that the dispositions of the Jews<sup>h</sup> are sanguinary, as if they were doing these things not for the truth's sake, but in the wish to be revenged. And for this reason too the Apostles do not answer them with<sup>1</sup> defiance: for they<sup>1</sup> ῥαστέως were teachers. And yet where is the man, who, with a whole city to back him, and endowed with so great grace, would not have spoken and uttered something big? But not so did these: for they were not angered; no, they pitied these men, and wept over them, and marked in what way they might free them from their error and wrath. And they no longer say to them, Judge ye: but they simply affirm, ch. 4, saying, 'Whom God raised up, Him do we preach: it is by<sup>19.</sup> the will of God that these things are done.' They said not, Did not we tell you even then, that we cannot but speak ih. 20. the things which we have seen and heard? for they are not contentious for glory; but they repeat again the same story,—the Cross, the Resurrection. And they tell not, wherefore He was crucified—that it was for our sakes: but they hint at this indeed, but not openly as yet, wishing to terrify them awhile. And yet what sort of rhetoric is here? None at all<sup>i</sup>, but everywhere it is still the Passion, and the Resur-

<sup>h</sup> φορικὰς λοιπὸν βούλονται δεῖξαι τὰς προαιρέσεις τῶν Ἰουδαίων. As the latter part of the sentence, ὡς οὐ δὲ ἀλήθειαν ταῦτα ποιούντων ἀλλ' ἀμύνασθαι βουλόμενων, seems inapplicable to the Jews, and to be meant for the Apostles, it may be conjectured that the true reading is τῶν Ἀποστόλων: "that the Apostles were bent upon having blood."

But all the Mss. have τῶν Ἰουδαίων, and the sense so far is satisfactory: viz. They want to make it appear now indeed what bloodminded men the Jews are: now, not when Christ was crucified.

 sins, O wretched man, and that God doth not demand punishment, and dost thou wish to slay them? What wickedness was this! And yet, either they ought to have convicted them of lying, or if they could not do that, to have believed: but if they did not choose to believe, yet they ought not to slay them. For what was there deserving of death? Such was their intoxication, they did not even see what had taken place. Observe, how everywhere the Apostles, when they have made mention of the crime, add the mention of forgiveness; shewing, that while what had been done was worthy of death, that which was given was proffered to them as to benefactors! In what other way could any one have persuaded them?

[Then stood up the high-priest, etc.] As<sup>k</sup> men in high repute, these (the Apostles) were about to take their place

<sup>k</sup> Here begins a second recapitulation or rather gleaning, partly of matter not touched upon before, partly of further remarks on what has been said.—Ὅς εὐδοκίμοι ἔγγυς τῶν προφητῶν ἔμελλον ἰστασθαι: this relates to vv. 13—16. as the reason why they were

"filled with indignation." The innovator, (E. F. D. Edd.) not perceiving this, alters ὅς εὐδοκίμοι to ἡ εὐδοκίμοι, which he joins to the former sentence, "How else could any one have persuaded them than (by treating them) as persons in high repute?" and adds, "And mark their malignity: they set on them the Sadducees who were most sore on the subject of the Resurrection: but they got nothing by their wickedness. But perchance, &c."

most sore on the subject of the Resurrection. But perchance some one will say: Why, what man, endowed with such gifts as the Apostles were, would not have been great? But consider<sup>1</sup>, I pray you, how, before that they were endowed with the grace, they were continuing stedfastly with one accord in prayer, and depending on the aid from above. And dost thou, my beloved, hope for the kingdom of heaven, yet endurest nought? And hast thou received the Spirit, yet sufferest not such things, nor encounterest perils? But they, before they had breathing-time from their former dangers, were again led into others. And even this too, that there is no arrogance, no conceit, how great a good it is! To converse with mildness, what a gain it is! For not all that they did was the immediate work of grace, but there are many marks of their own zeal as well. That the gifts of grace shine forth in them, this was from their own diligence. See, for instance, from the very beginning, how careful Peter is; how sober and vigilant: how they that believed cast away their riches, had no private property, continued in prayer, shewed that they were of one mind, passed their time in fastings. What grace, I ask, (alone) did all this? Therefore it is that He brings the evidence home to them through their own officers. Just as in the case of Christ, it was their officers who said, Never man spake as this Man speaketh. These<sup>2</sup> (proofs) are more apt to be believed than the Resurrection.—Observe also the moderation shewn by (the rulers)

John 7,

<sup>1</sup> St. Chrysostom frequently contends against the common excuse, "We cannot attain to the holiness of the first Christians, because there are no miracles now." Thus, he urges, Hom. in Matt. xlv. that it was not their miracles that made the saints, both of the Old and of the New Testament, great and admirable, but their virtues: without which, no miracles would have availed for themselves or others: that if they wrought miracles, it was after they, by their noble qualities and admirable lives, had attracted the Divine grace: for miracles proceed from a holy life, and this is also their goal: only he that lives a holy life receives this grace; and he that receives it, receives it only that he may amend the life of others. . . Let no man therefore wait for miracles. It afflicts the evil spirit when he is expelled from the body, much more when he sees the soul set free from sin: for in this lies Satan's great power, and to destroy this, Christ died. In expelling this from thyself, thou hast performed a miracle greater than all miracles. This is not my doctrine; it is the doctrine of the Apostle Paul. 1 Cor. xii. 31. the more excellent way is not miracles, but Charity, the root of all good. If we practise this, we need no miracles; and if we practise it not, from miracles we shall get no good."

HOMIL. themselves, and how they give way. [The high-priest asked XIII. them, saying, etc.]: here he reasons with them, forsooth, in
 v. 27. a moderate tone; for he was frightened: indeed to hinder was what he desired rather than to kill, since that he cannot do :
 and with the view to rouse them all, and shew them the extreme danger they are in, ‘ And intend, says he (to the Apostles,) to bring this man’s blood upon us. Dost thou still take Him to be but man? He wants to make it appear that the injunction was necessary for their own safety. But
 v. 31. mark what (Peter) says: Him hath God exalted with His right hand to be a Prince and a Saviour, for to give repent- ance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins. Here he forbears to mention the Gentiles, not to give them a handle against
 v. 33. him. And they desired, it says, to slay them. See again these in perplexity, these in pain: but those in quiet and cheerfulness and delight. It is not merely, They were grieved, but, They were cut (to the heart). Truly this makes good that proverb, “ Evil do, evil fare:” as we may see in this case. Here were these men in bonds, set at the bar of judgment, and the men that sit in judgment upon them were in distress and helpless perplexity. For as he who strikes a blow upon the adamant, gets the shock of the blow himself, so it was with these men. But they saw that not only was their boldness of speech not stopped, but rather their preaching increased the more, and that they discoursed without a thought of fear, and afforded them no handles against them.

Let us imitate these, my beloved: let us be undaunted in all our dangers. There is nothing dreadful to him that fears God; but all that is dreadful is for others. For when a man is delivered from his passions, and regards all present things as a shadow, say, from whom shall he suffer any thing dreadful? whom shall he have to fear? whom shall he need plead to? Let us flee to this Rock which cannot be shaken. If any one were to build for us a city, and throw up a wall around it, and remove us to a land uninhabited, where there were none to disturb us, and there supply us with abundance of every thing, and not suffer us to have aught to trouble us with anybody, he would not set us in such perfect safety, as Christ hath done now. Be it a city made of brass, if you will, surrounded on all sides with a wall, lofty and impregnable, let there be no enemy near it; let it have land plentiful and rich, let there be added abundance of other things, let the citizens too be mild and gentle, and no evil-doer there, neither robber, nor thief, no informer, no court of justice, but merely<sup>1</sup> agreements; and let us dwell in this city: not even thus would it be possible to live in security. Wherefore? Because there could not but be differences with servants, with wives, with children, to be a groundwork of much discomfort. But here was nothing of the kind; for here was nothing at all to pain them or cause any discomfort. Nay, what is more wonderful to say, the very things which are thought to cause discomfort, became matter of all joy and gladness. For tell me, what was there for them to be annoyed at? what to take amiss? Shall we cite a particular case for comparison with them? Well, let there be one of consular dignity, let him be possessed of much wealth, let him dwell in the imperial city, let him have no troublesome business with anybody, but only live in delight, and have nothing else but this to do, seated at the very summit of wealth and honour and power: and let us set against him a Peter, in bonds if you will, in evils without number: and we shall find that he is the man that lives the most delightfully. For when there is such excess of joy, as to be delighted when in bonds, think what must be the greatness of that joy! For like as those who are high in office, whatsoever evils may happen, are not sensible of them, but continue in enjoyment: so did these the more rejoice on account of these very evils. For it is impossible, impossible in words to express how great pleasure falls to their lot, who suffer for Christ's sake: for they rejoice in their sufferings, rather than in their good things. Whoso loves Christ, knows what I say.—But what as regards safety? And who, I ask, if he were ever so rich, could have escaped so many perils, going about among so many different nations, for the sole purpose<sup>2</sup> of bringing about a reformation in their manner of life? For it was just as if by royal mandate that they carried all before them, nay, far more easily, for never mandate could have and spontaneously, yea, and with hearts above measure thankful. What royal edict, I ask, would ever have persuaded men to part with all their property and their lives; to despise home, country, kindred, yea, even self-preservation? Yet the voices of fishermen and tent-makers availed for this. So that they were both happy, and more powerful and strong than all others. 'Yes,' say you, 'those of course were, for they wrought miracles.' But I ask, what miracles did those who believed work, the three thousand, and the five thousand; and yet these, we read, passed their time in gladness? And well they might: for that which is the groundwork of all discomforts, the possession of riches, was done away with. For that, that, I say, was ever the cause both of wars and fighting, and grief, and discomfort, and all evils: the thing which makes life full of labour and troubles, it is that. And indeed it would be found that many more rich than poor have reasons to be sad. If any think this is not true, their notion is derived not from the nature of the things, but from their own fancy. And if the rich do enjoy some sort of pleasure, this is not to be wondered at: for even those who are covered all over with the itch, have a good deal of pleasure. For that the rich are for all the world like these, and their mind affected in the same sort, is plain from this circumstance. Their cares annoy them, and they choose to be engrossed with them for the sake of the momentary pleasure: while those who are free from these affections, are in health [4.] and without discomfort. Whether is more pleasant, I ask, whether of the two more safe? To have to take thought only for a single loaf of bread and suit of clothes, or for an immense family, both slaves and freemen, not having care about himself (only)? For as this man has his fears for himself, so have you for those who depend on your own person. Why, I pray you, does poverty seem a thing to be shunned? Just in the same way as other good things are, in the judgment of many, things to be deprecated.

° Edd. 'And why,' you will ask, 'is poverty thought a thing to be fled from?' Why, because other good things are, in the judgment of many, things to be fled from, not because they are to be deprecated, but because hard of attainment.

'Yes,' say you, 'but it is not that those good things are subjects for deprecation, but that they are hard of attainment.' Well, so is poverty, not a thing to be deprecated, but hard of attainment: so that if one could bear it, there would be no reason to deprecate it. For how is it that the Apostles did not deprecate it? how is it that many even choose it, and so far from deprecating, even run to it? For that which is really a thing to be deprecated, cannot be an object of choice save to madmen. But if it be the men of philosophic and elevated minds that betake themselves to this, as to a safe and salubrious retreat, no wonder if to the rest it wears a different appearance. For, in truth, the rich man seems to me to be just like a city, unwall'd, situated in a plain, inviting assailants from all sides: but poverty, a secure fortress, strong as brass can make it, and the way up to it difficult. 'And yet,' say you, 'the fact is just the reverse: for these are they, who are often dragged into courts of law, these are they who are overborne and ill-treated.' No: not the poor, as poor, but those who being poor want to be rich. But I am not speaking of them, but of such as make it their study to live in poverty. For say, how comes it that nobody ever drags the brethren of the hills into courts of law? and yet if to be poor is to be a mark for oppression, those ought most of all to be dragged thither, since they are poorer than all others. How comes it that nobody drags the common mendicants into the law-courts? Because they are come to the extreme of poverty. How is it that none does violence to them, none lays vexatious informations against them? Because they abide in a stronghold too safe for that. How many think it a condition hard to struggle against, poverty, I mean, and begging! What then, I ask, is it a good thing to beg? 'It is good, if there be comfort,' say you; 'if there be one to give: it is a life so free from trouble and reverses, as every one knows.' But I do not mean to commend this; God forbid! what I advise is the not aiming at riches.

For say, whom would you rather call blessed? those<sup>1</sup> who find themselves at home with virtue, or those who stand aloof? Of course, those who are near. Say then, which of the two is the man to learn any thing that is profitable, and to shine in the true wisdom? the former, or the latter? The wretches there: let him be a cripple, lame, maimed: and then produce some other person, comely of aspect, strong in body, full of life and vigour in every part, overflowing with riches: let him be of illustrious birth, and possessed of great power. Then let us bring both these into the school of philosophy: which of them, I ask, is more likely to receive the things taught? The first precept, at the outset, "Be lowly and moderate:" (for this is Christ's command:) which will be

Matt. 5, most able to fulfil it, this one or the other? Blessed are 4. they that mourn: which will most receive this saying?
 "Blessed are the lowly:" which will most listen to this?

ib. 8. 6. Blessed are the pure in heart. Blessed are they which do 10. hunger and thirst after righteousness. Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake. Which will with ease receive these sayings? And, if you will, let us apply to all of them these rules, and see how they will fit. Is not the one inflamed and swollen all over, while the other is ever lowly-minded and subdued in his whole bearing? It is quite plain. Yes, and there is a saying to that effect among those that are without: "(I was) a slave", Epictetus by name, a cripple in body, for poverty a very Irus, and a friend of the Immortals." For how, I would ask, can it be otherwise, but that the soul of the rich must teem with evils; folly, vainglory, numberless lusts, anger and passion, covetousness, iniquity, and what not? So that even for philosophy, the former is more<sup>1</sup> congenially disposed than the latter. By all means seek to ascertain which is the more pleasant: for this I see is the point everywhere discussed, whether such an one has the more enjoyable way of life. And yet even as regards this, we need not be in doubt: for to be near to health, is also to have much enjoyment. But
 δειος now in hand, that which we will needs carry into accomplishment—our law, I mean—the poor man or the rich? Whether

This man has not even need of oaths, should he wish, but always lives free from cares of business: nay, more, it is often seen that he who is disciplined to swear not at all, will also despise riches; and one shall see in his whole behaviour his ways all branching off from this one good habit, and leading to meekness, to contempt of riches, to piety, to subduedness of soul, to compunction of heart. Then let us not be indolent, my beloved, but let us again shew great earnestness: they who have succeeded, that they may keep the success achieved, that they be not easily caught by the receding wave, nor the reflux tide carry them back again: [they<sup>a</sup> too who are yet behindhand, that they may be raised up again, and strive to make up that which is wanting. For it is indeed a<sup>1</sup> <sup>ἀνεμο-σπας.</sup> haven of safety, to swear not at all: whatever storms burst upon us, to be in no danger of sinking there: be it anger, be it insult, be it passion, be it what it may, the soul is stayed securely; yea, though one have vented some chance <sup>Supra, Hom. ix. §. 5. ad Pop. ### ACTS v. 34.

Then stood there up one in the council, a Pharisee, named Gamaliel, a doctor of the law, had in reputation among all the people, and commanded the men to be put forth a little space.

THIS Gamaliel was Paul's teacher. And one may well wonder, how, being so right-minded in his judgment, and withal learned in the law, he did not yet believe. But it cannot be that he should have continued in unbelief to the end*. Indeed it appears plainly from the words he here speaks. He commanded, it says, to put the men forth a little space: [and said unto them.] Observe how judiciously he frames his speech, and how he immediately at the very outset puts them in fear. And that he may not be suspected of taking their part, he addresses them as if he and they were of the same opinion, and does not use much vehemence, but as speaking to men intoxicated through passion, he thus expresses himself: Ye men of Israel, take v. 35. heed to yourselves what ye intend to do as touching these men. Do not, he would say, go to work rashly and in a hurry. For before these days rose up Theudas, boasting v. 36. himself to be somebody; to whom a number of men, about four hundred, joined themselves: who was slain; and all, as many as obeyed him, were scattered, and brought to

* In the Clementine Recogn. i. 65. Gamaliel is spoken of as having been early a Christian in secret. Lucian the Presbyter A.D. 415. writes an account of the discovery in consequence of a vision in which Gamaliel himself appeared to him, of the reliques of St. Stephen, together with those of Nicodemus and Gamaliel. See note on St.

Augustine Comm. on St. John, p. 1048. Photius, Cod. 171. p. 199. read in a work of Eustratius how Gamaliel was baptized by St. Peter and St. John. (According to the Jewish tradition, Wolf. Bibl. Hebr. ii. 882. he died President of the Sanhedrim, eighteen years after the fall of Jerusalem.)

- HOMIL. XIV. nought. By examples he teaches them prudence; and, by way of encouragement, mentions last the man who seduced the greatest number. Now before he gives the examples, he says, Take heed to yourselves; but when he has cited them, v. 37-39. then he declares his opinion, and says, Refrain from these men. For, says he, there rose up Judas of Galilee in the days of the taxing, and drew away much people after him: he also perished; and all, even as many as obeyed him, were dispersed. And now I say unto you, Refrain from these men, and let them alone: for if this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to nought. But if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow<sup>1</sup> them. Then<sup>b</sup> what is there, he would say, to hinder you to be overthrown? For, says he, (take heed,) lest haply ye be found even to fight against God. He would dissuade them both by the consideration that the thing is impossible, and because it is not for their good. And he does not say by whom these people were destroyed, but that there they were scattered, and their confederacy fell away to nothing. For if, says he, it be of man, what needs any ado on your part? but if it be of God, for all your ado you will not be able to overcome it. The argument is unanswerable.
- v. 40. And they were persuaded by him. How were they persuaded? So as not to slay them, but merely to scourge. For, it says, And when they had called the Apostles, and beaten them, they commanded that they should not speak in the name of Jesus, and let them go. See after what great works they are scourged! And again their teaching became more extended: for they taught at home and in the temple,

And daily in the temple, and in every house,* ch. 6, 1. they ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ. And in those days, when the number of the disciples was multiplied, there arose a murmuring of the Hellenists against the Hebrews, because their widows were neglected in the daily ministration. Not absolutely in those immediate days; for it is the custom of Scripture to speak of things next about to

There is no need to adopt this reading: the comment seems to belong to the words, against the Hebrews: viz. * Omitted in the old text: supplied by E.—Below, E. omits, "for, saith the Scripture, in the mouth of two witnesses:" and amplifies the rest, adding, "even a third, superabundantly: both shewing how well he himself speaks, and leading them away from their sanguinary purpose."

- HOMIL. of Israel take heed to yourselves.] See here, I pray you,
XIV. how mildly Gamaliel reasons, and how he says but a few words to them, and does not recount ancient histories, although he might have done so, but more recent instances, which are most powerful to produce belief. With this view he throws
- v. 36. out a hint himself, saying, For before these days: meaning, not many days before. Now had he at once said, "Let these men go," both himself would have fallen into suspicion, and his speech would not have been so effective: but after the examples, it acquired its own proper force. And he mentions
- Mat. 18, 16. not one instance, but a second also: for, saith the Scripture, in the mouth of two witnesses: and yet he had it in his power
- v. 38. to mention even three. Refrain from these men. See how mild his manner is, and his speech not long, but concise, and his mention even of those (impostors) how free from passion: And all, as many as obeyed him, were scattered. And<sup>1</sup> for all this, he does not blaspheme Christ. They heard him, all these unbelievers, heard him, these Jews. [For if this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to nought.] Well then, since it did not come to nought, it is not of men.
- v. 39. [But if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it.] Once more he checks them by the impossibility and the inexpediency of the thing, saying, Lest haply ye be found even to fight against God. And he does not say, If Christ be God; but the work (itself) declares (this). He does not pronounce upon it, either that it is of men, or that it is of God, but he leaves
- v. 40. the proof to the future. They were persuaded [by him]. Then why, it may be asked, do ye scourge them? Such was the incontrovertible justness of his speech, they could not look it in the face; nevertheless, they sated their own animosity; and again they expected to terrify them in this way. By the fact also of his saying these things not in the presence of the Apostles, he gained a hearing more than he would otherwise have done: and then the suavity of his

<sup>1</sup> Edd. from E. "Saying this, he speaks nothing blasphemous against Christ, but what he most wishes, he effects. If, says he, it be of men, it will come to nought. Here he seems to me to put it to them by way of syllogism, and to say: Consequently, since it has not come to nought, it is not of man. Lest haply ye be found even to fight against God. This he said to check them, &c."—Below, ἀλλὰ τὸ ἔργον τοῦτο θελοῖ, might be rendered, 'but he is declaring this work' (viz. "if this work be of men, &c."): the modern text, τὸ γὰρ ἔργον τοῦτο ἐθέλου.

discourse and the justness of what was said, helped to persuade them. In fact, this man all but preached the Gospel. "Ye were persuaded," one may say, "that ye had not strength to overthrow it. Wherefore did ye not believe?" Such is the witness borne even by enemies. There it is four hundred, there, four thousand: and here the first movers were twelve. Let not the number which added itself affright you. He might also have mentioned another instance, that of the Egyptian, but what he has spoken is fully sufficient. And he closes his speech with an alarming topic: [Lest haply, etc.] And he does not pronounce upon it, lest he should seem to be pleading their cause; but he reasons by way of syllogism from the issue of the matter. And he does not venture to pronounce that it is not of men, nor yet that it is of God; for had he said that it was of God, they would have gainsaid him: but had he said that it was of men, they would again have taken prompt measures. Therefore he bids them wait for the end, saying, Refrain. But they once more threaten, knowing indeed that they avail nothing, but doing after their manner. Such is the nature of wickedness: it attempts even impossibilities.—[And after this man rose up Judas, etc.] These things Josephus relates in detail. But what a great thing it was that he ventured to affirm: that it was of God, when in the sequel it received its proof from the events! Great boldness of speech, great freedom from all respect of persons! <sup>a</sup> And he does not say, "But if ye do not overthrow it, it is of God;" but, "If it be of God, it will not be overthrown." [And to him they agreed.] They revered the high character of the man. And they departed from the presence of the council, rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for the name the third instance which "he might have cited." Accordingly the modern text substitutes, "There four hundred stood up, and after this a great multitude."

<sup>b</sup> E. and Edd. omit the following sentence, substituting the first two clauses of v. 40. and after "the character of the man," add, "wherefore also they desist from their purpose of killing the Apostles, and having only scourged they dismiss them."

- HOMIL. of Christ. What miracles so wonderful as this? Nowhere XIV. is the like of this recorded of the old saints: for Jeremiah indeed was scourged for the word of God, and they threatened Elijah, and the rest: but in this case, even by this very thing, and not only by their miracles, these shewed forth the power of God. He does not say, that they were not pained, but that though pained they rejoiced. How does this appear? From their boldness afterwards: they were so instant still, even after their beatings, in preaching the word. But in the temple, it says, and in every house, they ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ.
- v. 42. And in those days—when these things were done, when there were scourgings, when there were threatenings, when the disciples were multiplying—also, it says, there arose a murmuring. And this comes of the multitude: for it is impossible to have strict order in a multitude. [There arose a murmuring, etc. to,] And<sup>1</sup> a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith.—There arose a murmuring against the Hebrews—for that description of people seemed to be more honourable—because their widows were neglected in the daily ministration. So then there was a daily ministration for the widows. And observe how he calls it a διακονία, ministration, and not directly alms: extolling by this at once the doers, and those to whom it was done. [Were neglected.] This did not arise from malice, but perhaps from the carelessness of the multitude. And therefore he brought it forward openly, for this was no small evil. Observe, how even in the beginning the evils came not only from without, but also from within. For you must not look to this only, that it was set to rights, but observe that it was a great evil
- v. 1—7. that it existed. [Then the twelve, etc.] Do you observe<sup>2</sup>

how outward concerns succeed to inward? They do not act at their own discretion, but plead for themselves to the congregation. So ought it to be done now. It is not reason, says he, that we should leave the word of God, and serve tables. First he puts to them the unreasonableness of the thing; that it is not possible for both things to be done with the same attention: just as when they were about to ordain Matthias, they first shew the necessity of the thing, that one was deficient, and there must needs be twelve. And so here they shewed the necessity: and they did it not sooner, but waited till the murmuring arose; nor, on the other hand, did they suffer this to spread far. And, lo! they leave the decision to them: those who pleased all, those who of all were honestly reputed, them they present: 'not now twelve, but seven, full of the Spirit and of wisdom: well reported of for their conversation. Now when Matthias was to be presented, it was said, Therefore must one of these men which have accompanied with us all the time: but not so here: for the case was not alike. And they do not now put it to the lot; they might indeed themselves have made the election, as moved by the Spirit: but nevertheless, they desire the testimony of the people. The fixing the number, and the ordaining them, and for this kind of business, rested with them: but the choice of the men they make over to the people, that they might not seem to act from favour: just as God also leaves it to Moses to choose as elders those whom he knew. [And of wisdom.] For indeed there needs much wisdom in such ministrations. For think not, because he hath not the word committed unto him, that such an one has no need of wisdom: he does need it, and much too. But we, saith he, will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word. Again they plead for themselves, beginning and ending with this, Will give ourselves continually, he saith. For so it behoved, not just to do the mere acts, or in any chance way, but to be continually doing them. And the saying, we are told, pleased the whole

HOMIL. XIV. multitude. This too was worthy of their wisdom. All approved of what was said, so sensible was it. And they<sup>1</sup> chose, it says, (again it is<sup>1</sup> the people that choose,) Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, and Philip, and Prochorus, and Nicanor, and Timon, and Parmenas, and Nicollus a proselyte of Antioch: whom they set before the Apostles: and when they had prayed, they laid their hands on them. They separated them from the multitude, and it is<sup>1</sup> the people that draw them, not the Apostles that lead them. Observe how he avoids all that is superfluous: he does not tell in what way it was done, but that they were<sup>2</sup> ordained with prayer: for this is the meaning of χειροτονία, (i. e. 'putting forth the hand,') or ordination: the hand of the man is laid upon (the person), but the whole work is of God, and it is His hand which toucheth the head of the one ordained, if he be duly ordained. And the word of God, it says, increased: and the number of the disciples multiplied. It is not for nothing that he says this: it shews how great is the virtue of alms and good order. And as he<sup>3</sup> is about in the sequel<sup>3</sup> to enlarge upon the affair of Stephen, he puts first the causes which led to it. And many, he says, of the priests were obedient to the faith. For<sup>4</sup> since they perceived such to be the mind of their ruler and teacher, they put the matter to the test of facts.—It is also a subject for wonder, how it was that the multitude was not divided in its choice of the men, and how it was that the Apostles were not rejected by them. But what sort of rank these bore, and what sort of office they received, this is what we need to learn. Was it that of Deacons? And yet this is not the case in the Churches. But<sup>5</sup> is it to <sup>1</sup> Ἐπειδὴ γὰρ εἶδον τὸν ἄρχοντα καὶ διδάσκαλον τοιαῦτα ἀποφηνάμενον, ἀπὸ τῶν ἔργων λοιπὸν τὴν πείραν ἐλάμβανον. Meaning, perhaps, that these priests, acting upon the counsel of Gamaliel, put the question to the test of facts and experience, and learned that it was of God.—In the next sentence, a covert censure seems to be implied: q. d. "Would it be so now? Would there not be parties and factions in the choosing of the men? Would not the Bishop's overture be rejected, were he to propose a plan for ridding himself of the like distracting demands upon his time?"

the Presbyters that the management belongs? And yet at present there was no Bishop, but the Apostles only. Whence I think it clearly and manifestly follows, that neither Deacons nor Presbyters is their designation: but it was for this particular purpose that they were ordained. And this business was not simply handed over to them without further ceremony, but the Apostles prayed over them, that power might be given to them. But observe, I pray you, if there were need of seven men for this, great in proportion must to facts. Therefore we take it interrogatively: the answer, not expressed, being, 'No: it belongs to the Bishops.' Perhaps, however, the passage may be restored thus; 'Ἀλλὰ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων; Ἀλλὰ τῶν ἐπισκόπων (or Οὐδὲ τῶν πρεσβ.) ἐστὶν ἡ οἰκ. Καίτοι κ. τ. λ. "Well, was it that of presbyters? Nay, this stewardship belongs to Bishops. (Or, No, neither does it belong to presbyters.) And yet, &c."—The following sentence, "Ὅθεν οὐτε διακόνων οὐτε πρεσβυτέρων οἶμαι (Cat. om.) τὸ ὄνομα εἶναι δῆλον καὶ φανερόν, as the text stands, might seem to mean, "Whence I think that neither of deacons nor of presbyters is the name clearly and manifestly expressed:" i. e. 'there is no express and clear mention in this narrative either of deacons or of presbyters: and I account for this circumstance by the fact, that there were no Bishops.' Ben. 'Unde puto nec diaconorum nec presbyterorum tunc fuisse nomen admissum nec manifestum.' But transposing οἶμαι and εἶναι, or indeed even as the words stand, we get the sense expressed in the translation, which is more suitable. So Erasmus: 'Unde neque diaconorum, neque presbyterorum nomen esse opinor, quod clarum ac manifestum.' St. Chrys. says, "Their appellation and office is neither deacons nor presbyters: they were ordained upon a special emergency."—It seems to have been commonly held in earlier times, that Acts vi. 1-6. is the history of the first institution of the Diaconate. Thus the Council of Neocæsarea ordains (A.D. 314.) that in each city, however large, the number of deacons according to the Canon ought to be seven, and for proof appeals to this history, πεισθήσῃ δὲ ἀπὸ τῆς βίβλου τῶν πράξεων. In the third century, Cornelius Ep. ad Fab. ap. Eus. H. E. vi. 43. states, that the clergy of Rome consisted of one Bishop, forty-six presbyters, seven deacons, &c. (Accordingly St. Jerome, Ep. 146. al. 101. ad Evang. remarks: "Diaconos paucitas honorabilis facit." Comp. Sozomen. vii. 19.) But the rule which assigned to each Bishop seven deacons, neither more nor less, was not always followed in large cities, as appears even from the Canon above cited: how greatly that number was exceeded in later times, may be seen in the Novellæ of Justinian, when it is enacted (iii. c. 1.) that the number of deacons in the metropolitan Church at Constantinople should be a hundred. The Council or Councils commonly called the fifth and sixth General, (Conc. Quinisextum, or Trullanum,) held under the same Emperor A. D. 692. sanctioned this departure from the earlier rule, in the following Canon (xvi). "Whereas the Book of Acts relates that seven deacons were appointed by the Apostles, and the Council of Neocæsarea in its Canons determines that "The number of deacons in each city, &c." (as above): we, having applied the sense of the Fathers to the Apostolic text, find, that the said history relates not to the deacons who minister in the mysteries, but to the service of tables, &c.: the history in the Acts being as follows, And in those days, &c. (Acts 6, 1-6.) The doctor of the Church, John Chrysostom, expounding the same, thus speaks: "It is a subject for wonder . . . . neither deacons nor presbyters is their designation," (as above.) Hereupon therefore do we also publish, that the aforesaid seven deacons be not taken to mean those which minister in the mysteries, as in the doctrine above rehearsed: but that these are they which were charged with the service of the common need of the people then gathered together: albeit herein these be unto us a pattern of humane and diligent attendance on them that be in necessity."

HOMIL. have been the sums of money that flowed in, great in proportion also the number of widows. So then the prayers were not made in an off-hand way, but with much deliberate attention: and this office*, as well as preaching, was thus brought to good effect; for what they did, they effected mostly by the means of these (their prayers). Thus they were enabled to give their attention to things spiritual; thus were they also free to undertake long journeys; thus were these put in trust with the word. But the writer does not say this, nor extol them, but that it was not reason that they should leave the work given to them. Thus they had been taught by Moses's example not to undertake the management of every thing by themselves. Only, it is said, that we should remember the poor. And† how did they bring these forward? They fasted. [Look you out seven men, etc.] It is not simply, spiritual men, but, full of the Spirit and of wisdom, for it needed very great<sup>1</sup> superiority of mind to bear the complainings of widows. For what profits it, that the dispenser of alms steal not, if nevertheless he waste all, or be harsh and easily provoked? [And they chose Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost.] And in this

Τὰ γὰρ πλείω ταύταις ἤνυστο the more time the Apostles had for prayer, the better for the Church: so much depended on their prayers. Therefore the plan was every way beneficial: οὕτω τὰ πνευματικὰ ἐπελέγοντο, (Erasm. 'adnumerantur,' Ben. 'præferantur,' but the meaning is, 'they chose to themselves,') οὕτω καὶ ἀποδημίας ἐστέλλοντο, οὕτως ἐνεχειρίσθησαν οὗτοι τὸν λόγον: "by this arrangement, the Apostles were free to give their undivided attention to spiritual matters; to leave Jerusalem, if need were, on journeys to distant places: by this arrangement, in short, the Word was their proper charge—not secular matters, such as Bishops are now burthened with, in addition to their proper duties." Comp. note m. He adds: The writer, indeed, does not say all this, nor extol the devotion with which the Apostles gave themselves up to their work, and how beneficial the arrangement proved: but it is said, It is not reason, &c. Moses had set the example in this regard: and in token of their concern for the poor, observe the charge which they afterwards gave to Paul and Barnabas, to "remember the poor."

† Πᾶς δὲ προήγαγε τοὺτους; Ἐν ἁσθενος. Edd. from E., "But how they also brought these forward, learn thou. They fasted, they continued in prayer. This ought also to be done now."—As there is no mention of fasting in Acts vi. 1—6, perhaps this refers to the history xiii. 2, 3. of the mission of Paul and Barnabas, to which he has just alluded.—Below, καὶ ταύτην δὲ θάνατον μαρτύρην ἦν ὁ Φ. The clause to which this refers is misplaced in the old text, viz. before the sentence, "In Jerusalem, &c." where E. and Edd. restore the proper clause of v. 7. καὶ ἐπιληθύνοντο, κ.τ.λ. The connexion is: "The Apostles desired seven men full of the Holy Ghost and of wisdom:" and such was Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost: such doubtless were the others likewise; (supra, p. 193.) certainly Philip was eminent in this regard, for [besides the history of his preaching at Samaria, ch. viii.] he is afterwards conspicuous in the history as Philip the Evangelist."

regard Philip also was admirable: for it is of him that the Acts writer says: And we entered into the house of Philip the <sup>VI.</sup> Evangelist, which was one of the seven; and abode with <sup>1-7.</sup> <sub>ch.21,8.</sub> him.—Dost thou mark how matters are ordered quite otherwise than after the manner of men? [And the number <sup>v. 7.</sup> of disciples was multiplied in Jerusalem.] In Jerusalem the multitude increased. Wonderful, where Christ was slain, there the preaching increased! And not only was it not the case that some were offended then in the matter of Ananias, but the awe became even greater: while these are scourged, those threatening, those tempting the Spirit, those murmuring. But I would have thee remark under what circumstances the multitude increased: after these trials, then it was that the multitude increased, and not before. Mark also how great the mercy of God. Of those <sup>7</sup> chief-priests, of the very men who had indignation and sore displeasure, and so cried out and said, He saved others, <sup>X</sup> <sub>Mat. 27,</sub> Himself He cannot save; of these same, Many, it says, were <sup>42.</sup> obedient unto the faith.

HIM therefore let us also imitate. He received them, and [4.] did not cast them out. So let us requite those our enemies, who have wrought us even numberless ills. Whatever good thing we may have, let us impart to them: let us not pass them by, in our acts of beneficence. For if we ought, by suffering ill, to sate their rage, much more, by doing them good: for this is a less thing than the other. For it is not all alike, to do good to an enemy, and to be willing to suffer greater wrongs than he wishes (to inflict)<sup>a</sup>: from the one we shall come on to the other. This is the dignity of Christ's disciples. Those crucified Him, when He had come for the <sup>7</sup> very purpose of doing them good; His disciples they scourged; and after all this, He admits them to the same honour with His disciples, making them equally partakers of His gifts. ) I beseech you, let us be imitators of Christ: in this regard it is possible to imitate Him: this makes a man like unto <sup>a</sup> καὶ μείζονα θελήσαι παθεῖν ἢ βούλεσθαι: so all our Mss. Erasm. 'Et majora voluisse pati, vel velle.' Ben. 'Et majora velle pati.' But the meaning is, 'To be ready to suffer greater wrongs than an enemy chooses to inflict:' alluding to Matt. 5, 39—41.

Comp. Hom. xviii. in Matt. p. 238. D. τὸ καὶ παρασχεῖν ἑαυτὸν εἰς τὸ παθεῖν κακῶς . . . τὸ καὶ πλέον παρασχεῖν ἢ ἐκεῖνος βούλεται ὁ ποιήσας. If for βούλεσθαι we read βούλεται, the sense is clearer: ἢ βούλεσθαι, 'than that he should wish it,' is somewhat abrupt.

HOMIL. XIV. God: this is more than human. Let us hold fast to Mercy: she is the school-mistress and teacher of that higher Wisdom. He that has learnt to shew mercy to the distressed, will learn also not to resent injuries; he that has learnt this, will be able to do good even to his enemies. Let us learn to feel for the ills our neighbours suffer, and we shall learn to endure the ills they inflict. Let us ask the person himself who ill-treats us, whether he does not condemn himself? would he not be glad<sup>1</sup> to shew a nobler spirit? must he not own that his behaviour is nothing but passion, that it is little-minded, pitiful? would he not like to be of those who are wronged and are silent, and not of those who do wrong, and are beside themselves with passion? can he go away not admiring the patient sufferer? Do not imagine that this makes men despicable. Nothing makes men so despicable, as insolent and injurious behaviour: nothing makes men so respectable, as endurance under insolence and injury. For the one is a ruffian, the other a philosopher; the one is less than man, the other is equal to angels. For though he be inferior to the wrong-doer, yet, for all that, he has the power, if he had the mind, to be revenged. And besides, the one is pitied by all, the other hated. What then? The former will be much the better of the two: for everybody will treat the one as a madman, the other as a man of sense. He<sup>c</sup> cannot speak of him in evil sort: yea, thou fearest, says one, lest perchance he be not such (as thou wouldest represent). Best that thou speak not evil in thy thought even; next, that thou speak it not to another. Pray not thou to God against this man: if thou hear him evil-spoken of, take his

But in this sentence the text appears to be corrupt, and the Mes. lend no real assistance, for the reading adopted by Edd. from E. F. D. is only meant for restoration: viz. "Therefore, when any would compel thee to speak evil of some person, (κατηγορήσαι τινα, Sav. marg. ἀρεχθῶς πρὸς τινα ἔχειν,) say to him, 'I cannot speak evil of him: for I fear lest perchance he were not (ᾔν, Sav. εἴη) such.'"—A. as usual in cases of difficulty, omits the passage as unintelligible. Whether φησὶν denotes a citation or an interlocution, and whether ᾔν is the first or the third person, must be left doubtful: but the words might be rendered, "Lest perchance I, says he, (i. e. the person attacked,) be not such." part: say, It was passion that spoke such words, not the man; say, It was anger, not my friend: his madness, not his heart. Thus let us account of each offence. Wait not for the fire to be kindled, but check it before it comes to that: do not exasperate the savage beast, rather do not suffer it to become exasperated: for thou wilt no longer be able to check it, if once the flame be kindled. For what has the man called thee? "Thou fool and simpleton." And which then is liable to the name? the called, or the caller? For the one, be he ever so wise, gets the character of being a fool: but the other, even if he be a simpleton, gets credit for being wise, and of philosophic temper. Say, which is the simpleton? he who alleges against another what is untrue, or he who even under such treatment is unmoved? For if it be the mark of true philosophy to be unmoved however moved; to fall into a passion when none moves to anger—what folly is it! I say not yet, how sore a manner of punishment is in store for those who utter such reproaches and revilings against their neighbour. But how? has he called thee "a low fellow and low-born, a sorry creature and of sorry extraction?" Again he has turned the taunt against himself. For the other will appear worthy and respectable, but he a sorry creature indeed: for to cast up such things, that is to say, meanness of birth, as a disgrace, is little-minded indeed: while the other will be thought a great and admirable character, because he thinks nothing of such a taunt, and is no more affected by it than if he were told* that he had about him any other ordinary and quite indifferent circumstance. But does he call thee "adulterer," and such like? At this thou mayest even laugh: for, when the conscience is not-smitten, there can be no occasion for wrath. * * For when one has considered what bad and disgraceful disclosures he makes, still for all that, there is no need to grieve. He has but laid bare now, what everybody must be apprised of by and bye:

* ὅτι ἔχει τι τῶν ἄλλων τῶν ἀδιαφόρων. E. D. F. Edd. διαφέρον "something about him, better than other men." Below, for ἐννοήσαντα γὰρ "for when one has considered," Edd. have ἐννοήσαντας δὲ καί, "but when you consider also:" i. e. "but if the case be not so, &c." In fact something is wanting: for the case here supposed is that the charge is true: the person has been guilty of some immorality, which the other publicly exposes.

HOMIL. meanwhile, as regards himself, he has shewn all men that he XIV. is not to be trusted, for that he knows not how to screen his neighbour's faults: he has disgraced himself more than he has the other; has stopped up against himself every harbour: has made terrible to himself the bar at which he must hereafter be tried. For not the person (whose secrets are betrayed) will be the object of every body's aversion, but he, who where he ought not to have raised the veil, has stripped off the clothes. But speak thou nothing of the secrets thou knowest: hold thou thy peace if thou wouldest bear off the good fame. For not only wilt thou overthrow what has been spoken, and hide it: but thou wilt also bring about another capital result: thou wilt stop sentence being given against thyself. Does somebody speak evil of thee? Say thou: 'Had he known all, he would not have spoken only thus much.'—So you admire what has been said, and are delighted with it? Aye, but you must follow it. For when we tell you all<sup>1</sup> these maxims of the heathen moralists, it is not because Scripture does not contain hundreds of such sayings, but because these are of more force to put you to the blush. As in fact Scripture itself is wont to use this appeal to our sense of shame; for instance, when it says, Do ye even as the Jer. 35, heathen. And the prophet Jeremiah brought forward into 3. public view the children of Rechab, how they would not consent to violate the command of their father.—Miriam and Numb. her company spake evil of Moses, and he immediately begged ch. xii. them off from their punishment; nay, would not so much as let it be known that his cause was avenged. But not so we: on the contrary, this is what we most desire; to have all men know that they have not passed unpunished. How long shall we breathe of the earth?—One party cannot make a fight. Pluck the madmen from both sides, you will exasperate them the more: but pluck from right or from left, and you have quenched the passion. The striker, if he has to do with one who will not put up with blows, is the more set on: but if with one who yields, he is the sooner unnerved, and his blow is spent upon himself. For no practised pugilist so unnerves the strength of his antagonist, as does a man who being injuriously treated makes no return. For the other only goes off ashamed, and condemned, first by his own conscience, and secondly by all the lookers on. And there is a proverb too, which says, that 'to honour another, is to honour oneself:' therefore also to abuse another is to abuse oneself. / None, I repeat, will be able to harm us, unless we harm ourselves; nor will any make me poor, unless I make myself such. For come, let us look at it in this way. Suppose that I have a beggarly soul, and let all lavish all their substance upon me, what of that? So long as the soul is not changed, it is all in vain. Suppose I have a noble soul, and let all men take from me my substance: what of that? So long as you do not make the soul beggarly, no harm is done. Suppose my life be impure, and let all men say just the contrary of me: what of that? For though they say it, yet they do not judge thus of me in their heart. Again, suppose my life be pure, and let all say of me just the reverse: and what of that? For in their own conscience they will condemn themselves: since they are not persuaded of what they say. Just as we ought not to admit the praise, so neither the criminations. And why say I these things? None will ever be able to plot against us, nor lay us under any evil charge, if we choose (that they shall not). For how now, I ask you? Let him drag me into a court of justice, let him lay vexatious informations, let him, if you will, have the very soul out of me: and what of that? for a little while, undeservedly to suffer these things, what does it signify? "Well", but this," say you, "is of itself an evil." Well, but of itself this is a good, to suffer undeservedly. What? would you have the suffering to be deserved? Let me mention

rather it were justly?" But Xenophon, in Apol. relates a similar answer made to Apollodorus, "a simple-minded but affectionate disciple of Socrates. This, said he, O Socrates, is what hurts me most, that I see thee unjustly put to death. And he, stroking the head of his disciple, replied: And wouldst thou, my friend, rather see me justly than unjustly put to death?" Down. ap. Sav.

HOMIL. again a piece of philosophy, from one of the sages. A XIV. certain person, says the story, had been put to death. And Socrates one of the sage's disciples said to him, 'Woe is me, that he ap. Diog. should have suffered unjustly !' The other turned upon him, Laert. 'Why, how now ?' said he, 'would you have had him justly and suffer?' John also, was not he unjustly put to death ? Which Xen. then do you rather pity : them that justly suffer death, or Mem. [him' ? Do you not count them miserable, while] him you Socr. even admire ? Then what is a man injured, when from death itself he has got great gain, not merely no hurt ? If indeed the man had been immortal, and this made him mortal, no doubt it would be a hurt : but if he be mortal, and in the course of nature must expect death a little later, and his enemy has but expedited his death, and glory with it, what is the harm ? Let us but have our soul in good order, and there will be no harm from without. But thou art not in a condition of glory ? And what of that ? 'That which is true of wealth, the same holds for glory : if I be 'magnanimous, I shall need none ; if vain-glorious, the more I get, the more I shall want. In this way shall I most become illustrious, and obtain greater glory ; namely, if I despise glory. Knowing these things, let us be thankful to Him Who hath freely given us such a life, and let us ensue it unto His glory ; for to Him belongs the glory, for ever.
 Amen.

ACTS vi. 8.

And Stephen, full of faith and power, did great wonders and miracles among the people.

SEE how even among the seven one was preeminent, and won the first prize. For though the ordination was common to him and them, yet he drew upon himself greater grace. And observe, how he wrought no (signs and wonders) before this time, but only when he became publicly known; to shew that grace alone is not sufficient, but there must be ordination also: so that there was a further access of the Spirit. For if they were full of the Spirit, it was of that which is from the Laver of Baptism. Then there arose certain of them of the v. 9. synagogue. Again he uses the phrase of 'rising up', to <sup>ἀνδ-στασιν,</sup> denote their exasperation and wrath. Here we have <sup>a</sup> supra, great multitude. And observe the difference in the form of <sup>Hom.</sup> accusation: for since Gamaliel had stopped them from <sup>xiii. p.</sup> finding fault on the former plea, they bring in another charge. And there rose up, it says, certain of them of the v. 9—11. synagogue <sup>of those who are called Libertines, and of the</sup> <sup>τῶν λεγομένων.</sup> Cyrenians and Alexandrians, and of them of Cilicia and <sup>Edd. τῆς</sup> Asia, disputing with Stephen. And they were not able to <sup>λεγομένης.</sup> resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake. Then they suborned men, which said, We have heard him speak blasphemous words against Moses, and against God. That they may establish the charge, the phrase is, "he speaks against God, and against Moses." And with this object too they disputed, that they might force him to say somewhat. But he now discoursed more openly, and perhaps spoke of the cessation of the Divine Law: or, spoke it not, but hinted as much: since had he spoken plainly, there had HOMIL. been no need of suborned men, nor yet of false-witnesses.

- XV. The synagogues were diverse: [to wit, Of the Libertines,] of the Cyrenians, i. e. those in the parts beyond Alexandria: [of the Alexandrians, etc.] There also they seem to have had synagogues according to their different nations; for many stayed behind there, that they might not be obliged to be continually travelling. The Libertines perhaps were freed-men of the Romans. As there were many foreigners dwelling there, so they had their synagogues, where the Law was to be read. [Disputing with Stephen.] Observe him, not taking upon him to teach, but forced to do so. The miracles once more brought him into ill-will; but when he overcame in argument, it was intolerable to them. [They could not resist, etc.: then they suborned men.] Everywhere false-witness! For they did not wish to kill out of hand, but by means of a sentence, that they might hurt their reputation also: and leaving those (the Apostles), they attack these (the disciples), thinking in this way to terrify those also. They say not, "he speaketh," but, he ceaseth
- v. 12, 13. not to speak. And they stirred up the people, and the elders, and the scribes, and came upon him, and caught him, and brought him to the council, and set up false witnesses, which said, This man ceaseth not to speak blasphemous words against this holy place, and the law. Ceaseth not, say they, as if he made this his business.
- v. 14. For we have heard him say, that this Jesus of Nazareth shall destroy this place, and shall change the customs which Moses delivered us. Jesus, they say, the Nazarene, as a term of reproach, shall destroy this place, and shall change the customs. This is also what they said about Christ.
- Mat. 27, 40. Thou that destroyest this Temple. For great was their veneration for the Temple, (as indeed they had chosen<sup>1</sup> to leave their own country in order to be near it,) and for the name of Moses. The charge is twofold. If<sup>a</sup> He shall change the customs, He will also introduce others instead: observe how the charge is a bitter one, and fraught with
- v. 15. perils. And all that sat in the council, looking stedfastly

And not only two-fold, but bitter, &c." So Edd. but Savil. adds, "and shall introduce others instead."

on him, saw his face as it had been the face of an angel. ACTS VII. 1-3. So possible is it even for one in a lower degree to shine. For what, I ask, had this man less than the Apostles? He lacked not miracles, and great was the boldness he exhibited<sup>b</sup>.—They saw his face, it is said, as it had been the face of an angel. For this was his grace, this was the glory of<sup>30</sup> Moses. God made him thus gracious<sup>1</sup> of visage, now that<sup>1</sup> ἐπὶ ἔχῃ he was about to say somewhat, thus at once by his very<sup>πρ</sup> look to awe them. For there are, yes, there are faces full-fraught with spiritual grace, lovely to them that love, awful to haters and enemies. It mentions also the reason, why they suffered his oration.—Then, it proceeds, said the high-priest, Are these things so? Observe, the question is put with mildness, that he may effect some great mischief. For this reason Stephen too begins his speech in a tone of gentleness, and says, Men, brethren, and fathers, hearken; The God of glory appeared unto our father Abraham, when he was in Mesopotamia, before he dwelt in Charran. Immediately at the outset he overthrows their conceit, and makes it appear by what he says, that the temple is nothing, that the customs are nothing either, without their suspecting his drift: also that they shall not overcome the preaching; and that from<sup>2</sup> powerless things God evermore contrives<sup>3</sup> ἀμυνχδ. Him<sup>3</sup> powerful instruments. Mark then how these threads<sup>πρ</sup> εὐμῆ. make the texture of the whole speech: and moreover that<sup>χαρα</sup> having evermore enjoyed exceeding goodness, they still requited their Benefactor with the opposite conduct, and that they are now attempting impossibilities. The God of glory appeared unto our father Abraham, when he was in Mesopotamia, before he came into Charran. Both the temple was not, and sacrifice was not, and yet a vision of God was vouchsafed to Abraham, and yet had he Persians<sup>c</sup> for his ancestors, and was in a strange land. And he does well at the beginning of his speech to call Him, the God of glory: seeing that He hath made them that are without

- HOMIL. honour to be glorious. 'Because' (says he) 'it was He that
 XV. made them glorious, He will make us also.' Observe how he leads them away from things of the body, from the place, in the first instance, as the place was in question. The God of glory, says he: implying again, that He needs not the glory which comes from us, which comes by the Temple: for Himself is the Fountain thereof. Think not, he would say, in this way to glorify Him. [And from thy kindred.] How<sup>d</sup> Gen. 11, then saith the Scripture, that Abraham's father was willing 31. to go out? Hence we learn, that it was in consequence of Abraham's vision, that his father was moved to join in the migration. v. 3. And said unto him, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and come into a land which I shall shew thee. It shews how far these men are from being children of Abraham, how obedient he was. And<sup>d</sup> from thy kindred. <sup>1</sup>φορτικὰ <sup>1</sup>Uncomfortable reflexions, both, that he endured the labours, while ye reap the fruits, and that all your ancestors v. 4. 5. were in evil case. Then came he out of the land of the Chaldeans, and dwelt in Charran: and from thence, when his father was dead, He removed him into this land, wherein ye now dwell. And He gave him none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on. See how he raises their thoughts away from (their possession of) the land. 'For if He said, (that) He will give: clearly, [all came from him,] and nothing from themselves. For he came, having left both kindred and country. Wherefore then did He not give it to him? Truly it was a figure of another land. And He promised to give it to him. Do you perceive, that he does not οὐκ ἔδωκε, ὁ ἄλλος δὲ τὰ παρ' ἐκείνων, καὶ οὐδὲν παρ' αὐτῶν. So E. D. F. Edd. except that for ὁ ἄλλος δὲ τὰ these have δὴλόν δὲ πάντα. The meaning seems to be: "They boasted of their possession of the land, as the token of God's favour to themselves. See how Stephen will not allow them to rest in this conceit. Abraham was 'the friend of God,' yet to him He gave none inheritance, &c. True, He promised to give it: but if God said (that) He will give it, (spoke of giving it at some future time,) this very circumstance shews that the Jews had it from Abraham, in consequence of God's favour to him; not as deserved by themselves."

merely resume the thread of his discourse? He gave him not, says he; and He promised; and to his seed after him, when as yet he had no child. Again, what God can do: that out of impossibilities, He doeth all! For here is a man in Persia, so far away, and this man God saith He will make lord of Palestine. But let us look back to what was said before.

ACTS
8-15.

Whence, I pray you, did that grace bloom upon the countenance of Stephen? The writer gives him this report above, that he was full of faith. For it is possible to have a grace ch. 6, 8. that does not consist in works of healing: For to one is given the grace of the Spirit, in<sup>1</sup> such and such wise. But here, <sup>12, 8. 9.</sup> it seems to me, it says that he was also gracious to look at: <sup>1</sup> They saw his face as it had been the face of an angel. v. 15. [Full of faith and of power]: which is also the character given of Barnabas: [he was a good man, full of faith and of the Holy Ghost.] ch. 11, 24. Whence we learn that the sincere and innocent are, above all others, the<sup>e</sup> men to be saved, and that these same are also more gracious. Then they suborned men, v. 11. which said, We have heard him speak blasphemous words. In the case of the Apostles they were annoyed that they preached ch. 4, 2. the Resurrection, and that much people flowed unto them: but in this case, that they were getting their diseases healed. The things for which they ought to give thanks, they made matter of blame: O, the madness! The men who overcame them by works, they expected to overcome by words! It is just what they did in the case of Christ, and always they forced them to words. For they were ashamed to seize them without more ado, having nothing to charge them with. And observe, not the persons themselves who bring them to judgment bear witness against them; for they would have been refuted: but they simply hire others, that it may not seem to be an act of mere violence. It is all of a piece with their proceeding in the case of Christ. And observe the power of the preaching, that, though they are not only place and the law, and with an addition, [the customs] which <sup>Acts VII. 1-6.</sup> Moses delivered to us; Moses, not God. ) Upon the supposition of a design to overturn their 'manner of life, they accused <sup>v. 14.</sup> him of impiety also. But to shew that it was not in the <sup>[3.]</sup> nature of such a man to speak such things, and harshly, <sup>πολι-τείας.</sup> [Then all, it says, which were in the council, looking sted- <sup>v. 15.</sup> fastly upon him, saw his face, as it had been the face of an angel:] so mild was he even in countenance. For, in cases where persons were not falsely accused, Scripture mentions nothing of this kind: but as in this case it was all false accusation, with reason does God rectify it by the very look of the man. For the Apostles indeed were not falsely accused, but were forbidden: but this man is falsely accused: and therefore before all else his countenance pleads for him. This abashed even the priest. [And he said, etc.] <sup>ch. 7, 1.</sup> He shews here, that the promise was made before the Place, before Circumcision, before Sacrifice, before the Temple, and that it was not of their merit that these received either Circumcision or Law, but that the land was the reward of obedience alone. Moreover, that neither on the giving of circumcision does the promise receive its fulfilment. Also, that these were figures, and (so was) both the leaving his country at God's command—not<sup>t</sup> against the law, (for home and country is where God shall lead:) Then came he out, <sup>v. 4.</sup> it says, of the land of the Chaldeans:—and that if one look closely into the matter, the Jews are of Persian origin: and that, without miracles, one must do as God bids, whatever hardships be the consequence; since the Patriarch left both the grave of his father and all that he had, in obedience to God's command. But if Abraham's father was not allowed to take part with him in the privilege of migrating to Palestine, because he was unworthy: much more shall the children (be excluded at last), for all that they may have gone a good distance on the way. And He promised, it says, to give it <sup>v. 5.</sup> to him, and to his seed after him. Herein is shewn the greatness both of God's goodness and of Abraham's faith. For the expression, when as yet he had no child, does shew

HOMIL. his obedience and faith. [Promised to give it to him and XV. to his seed.] And yet the events shewed the contrary:
 namely, after he came, he had not so much as to set his foot on, had not a child; which very things were contrary to his faith.

These things having seen, let us likewise, whatever God shall promise, receive the same, however contrary may be the events. And yet in our case, they are not contrary, but very suitable. For where the promises are, there, when the contraries turn out, they are really contrary; but in our case it is just the reverse: for He has told us that we should have tribulation here, but our rest there. Why do we confound the times? Why do we turn things upside down?
 Say, art thou afflicted, and livest in poverty, and in dejection? Be not troubled: for it were worth being troubled at, wert thou destined to be afflicted in that world: as for John 11, this present affliction, it is the cause of rest. This sickness,
 4. saith He, is not unto death. That affliction is punishment:
this, schooling and correction. It is a contest, this life present: if so, to fight is our business now: it is war and battle. In war one does not seek to have rest, in war one does not seek to have dainty living, one is not anxious about riches, one's care is not about a wife then: one thing only he looks at, how he may overcome his foes. Be this our care likewise: if we overcome, and return with the victory, God will give us all things. Be this alone our study, how we may overcome the devil: though after all it is not our own study that does it, but God's grace does the whole business. Be it our one study, how we may attract His grace, how we may draw to ourselves that assistance.
 Rom. 8, If God be for us, who can be against us? Let us make one 31. thing our study; that He be not our enemy, that He turn not away from us.

[4.] Not the being afflicted is an evil; the evil is, to sin. This is the sore affliction, however we may pass our days in luxury:
 —not to speak of the life to come, it is so even in this life present. Think how our conscience is stung with remorse, and whether this is not worse than any kind of torture! I should like to put the question searchingly to those who live

 νοίis.

own sins, whether they do not tremble, and are in fear and anguish, whether they do not think those blessed who live in abstinence, them of the mountains, them<sup>1</sup> of the strict rule? Acts VII. 1-5. ἰ τοὺς ἐν πολλῷ φιλοσοφία. Dost thou wish to find rest in the life to come? Suffer affliction in this life for Christ's sake: there is nothing equal to this rest. The Apostles rejoiced when scourged. Paul gives this exhortation, saying, Rejoice in the Lord. And Philip. 4, 4. how can there be rejoicing, where there are bonds, where there are tortures, where there are courts of justice? There, most of all, is rejoicing. But<sup>1</sup> say, how can there be rejoicing, where these are not? For he who is conscious of no evil, will have a sort of exceeding delight, insomuch that in what degree you speak of tribulation, in the same you tell of his delight. The soldier who has received numberless wounds and is come home again, will he not return with exceeding delight, with his wounds<sup>2</sup> as his title for speaking up boldly, and as evidence of his glory and renown? And thou, if thou be able to exclaim as Paul does, I bear Gal. 6, 17. the marks of Jesus, wilt be able to become great and glorious and renowned. 'But there is no persecution.' Make thy stand against glory: and should any one speak anything against thee, fear not to be evil-spoken of for Christ's sake: make thy stand against the tyranny of pride, against the fighting of anger, against the torment of concupiscence. These also are 'marks'; these also are torments. For, I ask, what is the worst in tortures? Is it not, that the soul is pained, and is on fire? For in the other case, the body too has its share: but in this, the whole belongs to the soul. On the soul alone comes all the smart, when one is angry, when one is envious, whatever else of this kind one does, or rather suffers. For, in fact, it is not action, but passion, not a doing, but a suffering—to be angered, to feel envy: therefore indeed they are called<sup>3</sup> passions (or sufferings)<sup>4</sup> πράξεις of the soul, yea wounds, and bruises. For it is indeed a περturbationes. suffering, and worse than suffering. Bethink you, ye that

HOMIL. are angry, that ye do such things in "passion," in a state of XV. suffering. Therefore he who is not angry suffers not. Do you mark that not he who is abused is the sufferer, but he that abuses, as I said above? For that he is a sufferer, is plain in the first place from the very fact, that such a thing is called by this name of passion: and it is also plain from the (effects on the) body: for these are the
 'τῶν. affections' [or 'sufferings,' as we call them] engendered by anger, viz. dimness of vision, insanity, and numberless others. 'But he insulted my boy,' say you; 'but [he called him] clown *.' Deem it not weakness thy not doing the same thing thyself. For, I ask you, was it well done?
 You will not say that: then leave that undone which being done were not well done. I know what passions are engendered in such cases. 'But,' say you, 'how if he despise me, how if he say it again?' Shew him that he is in the wrong: rebuke him, entreat him: by meekness anger is put down: go and expostulate with him. For though in cases of wrong done to ourselves it is right not to do even this, yet it is quite necessary to do it in behalf of others. Do not look on it as an insult to yourself that your boy has been insulted: annoyed you may be for his sake, yet not as if you were insulted: for it does not follow because your boy has been ill-treated, that you are disgraced, but he is disgraced that did the ill. Quench (thine anger), that sharp sword: let it lie in its scabbard. If we have it unsheathed, we shall be apt to use it even when the time is not proper, being drawn on by it: but if it be hidden, though a necessity should arise, yet, while we seek it in order* to draw it, the anger will be quenched. Christ would not have us be angry Mat. 26, on His account: (hear what He saith to Peter: Put up again to be the true reading.

thy sword into the sheath.:) and art thou angry on account of a boy? Teach thy boy also to be philosophical: tell him thy own sufferings: imitate (herein) thy Teacher. When they too (His disciples) were about to be treated with dishonour, He said not, "I will avenge you:" but, "to Me also," saith He, "they have done the same: bear it nobly, for ye are not better than I." These words too do thou speak to thy son and thy boy: "Thou art not better than thy master." But these words of philosophy are counted as the talk of a widow woman. Alas! that it is not in the power of words to bring it home to people in the way that it is possible to be taught it by actual experience! And that you may learn this; stand between two combatants, take part with the wronged, not with the wrong-doers, [that you may learn]<sup>9</sup> whether you shall not see the victory on your side, whether you shall not get splendid crowns.—See, how God is insulted, and how He answers; how gently, Where, saith He, is Abel thy brother? <sup>Gen. 4,</sup> and what saith the other: Am I my brother's keeper? What<sup>9.</sup> could be more contumacious than this? Would any one have heard it (patiently) even from a son? and if from a brother, would he not have thought such conduct an insult? What then? See how again God gently answers, The voice of thy brother's blood, saith He, crieth unto Me. 'But God,' it will be said, 'is superior to wrath.' Yes, but for this reason the Son of God came down, that He might make thee a God as far as human power can go. 'But I cannot,' says one, 'seeing I am man.' Well then, let us give you men for instances. And do not suppose I speak of Paul or of Peter: no, but of some of inferior sort, yea, very much lower down. Eli's menial insulted Hannah, saying, Put away thy wine from thee. What could be more<sup>1 Sam. 1,</sup> insulting than this? What then said she? I am a woman<sup>14.</sup> of a hard lot'. Indeed, there is nothing equal to affliction: she is the mother of true philosophy. But this same woman, though she has her rival, insulted her not: but what does she? She takes refuge with God, and in her prayer does not

 might have done so: but he bore it like a philosopher, saying,

 she was not angry even with the Pharisee, when reproached

 Baptism after so great grace, fight, and worry, and kick one another, worse than beasts? Nothing is more base than passion, nothing more disgraceful, nothing more frightful, nothing more odious, nothing more hurtful. These things I say, not only in order that towards men we may be gentle, but also if a wife be a talker, that thou mayest bear it: let thy wife

 στρα and can it but be absurd, to submit to exercises which yield no γυμνά- profit, where we afflict the body, but not to practise exercises σιον. at home, which, even before the contest, present to us a crown? Does thy wife abuse thee? Do not thou become a woman: to be abusive is womanly: it is a disease of the soul, an inferiority. Think not that it is unworthy of thee, when thy wife abuses thee. Unworthy it is, when thou art abusive, but she<sup>3</sup> bears patiently: then dost thou act un-thou bear it, great is the proof of thy strength. I do not say this, to induce wives to be abusive: God forbid: but only in case it should so happen at the instance of Satan. It is the part of men that are strong, to bear the weak. And if thy servant contradict thee, bear it philosophically: not what he deserves to have said to him, do thou say or do, but that which it behoves thee both to do and to say. Never insult a girl by uttering some foul word against her: never call thy servant, 'scoundrel: not he is disgraced, but <sup>μαρτυρ.</sup> thou. It is not possible to be master of oneself, being in a passion. Like a sea rolling mountains high, it is all hurly-burly: or even as a pure fountain, when mire is cast into it, becomes muddied, and all is in turmoil. You may beat him, you may rend his coat to rags, but it is you that sustain the greater damage: for to him the blow is on the body and the garment, but to you on the soul. It is your own soul that you have cut open; it is there that you have inflicted a wound: you have flung your own charioteer from his horses, you have got him dragging along the ground upon his back. And it is all one, as if one driver being in a passion with another, should choose to be thus dragged along. You may rebuke, you may chide, you may do whatever it be, only let it be without wrath and passion. For if he who rebukes is physician to him who offends, how can he heal another, when he has first hurt himself, when he does not heal himself? Say, if a physician should go to heal another person, does he first wound his own hand, first blind his own eyes, and so set about healing that other? God forbid. So also, however thou rebuke, however thou chide, let thine eyes see clearly. Do not make thy mind muddy, else how shall the cure be wrought? It is not possible to be in the same tranquillity, being in a passion, and being free from passion. Why dost thou first overturn thy master from his seat, and then discourse with him as he lies sprawling on the ground? Seest thou not the judges, how, when about to hold the assize, they seat themselves upon the bench, in their becoming attire? Thus do thou likewise dress thy soul with the judicial robe, (which is gentleness.) 'But he will not be afraid of me,' say you. He will be the more afraid. In the other case, though you speak justly, your servant will

ACTS vii. 6, 7.

And God spake on this wise, That his seed should sojourn in a strange land; and that they should bring them into bondage, and entreat them evil four hundred years. And the nation to whom they shall be in bondage will I judge, said God: and after that shall they come forth, and serve Me in this place.

SEE, what a number of years the Promise has been given, and the manner of the Promise, and nowhere sacrifice, nowhere circumcision! He here shews, how God Himself suffered them to be afflicted, not<sup>a</sup> that He had anything to lay to their charge. [And they shall bring them into bondage, etc.] But, nevertheless, they did not these things with impunity. And the nation to whom they shall be in bondage I will judge, said God. For<sup>b</sup>, to shew that they are not to go by this, in estimating who are pious, (by reason of their saying, He trusted in God, let Him deliver Him,)—He, the Mat. 27, Same that promised, He that gave the land, first permits the <sup>43</sup> evils. So also now, though He has promised a Kingdom, yet He suffers us to be exercised in temptations. If here the freedom was not to be till after four hundred years, what wonder, with regard to the Kingdom? Yet He performed

* E. Edd. omit this sentence: and below, for "Here again, &c." the same substitute: "This happened also in the case of Christ: for indeed Joseph is a type of Him: wherefore also he narrates the history at large, hinting (at this meaning)."

Abraham bought for a sum of money of the sons of Emmor the father of Sychem. But when the time of the promise drew nigh, which God had sworn to Abraham, the people grew and multiplied in Egypt, till another king arose, which knew not Joseph. Then again, fresh <sup>1</sup>disappointment: <sup>1</sup>ἀνελ- first, famine, but they came through that: secondly, the <sup>πιστία.</sup> falling into the hands of their enemy: thirdly, the being destroyed by the king. Then, (to shew) God's <sup>2</sup>fulness <sup>3</sup>εὐμελ- of ways and means, In which time, it says, Moses was born, <sup>Χανον.</sup> <sup>7. 20.</sup> and was exceeding fair. If the former circumstance was wonderful, that Joseph was sold by his brethren, here again is another circumstance more wonderful still, that the king nourished the very person who was to overthrow his dominion, being himself the person that was to perish. Do you observe all along a figurative enacting, so to say, of the resurrection of the dead? But it is not the same thing for God Himself to do a thing, and for a thing to come to pass in connexion with man's <sup>1</sup>purpose. For these things <sup>1</sup>προα- indeed were in connexion with man's purpose, [<sup>1</sup>but the <sup>ρεσις.</sup> Resurrection by itself, independently.]—And he was mighty, v. 22. it says, in word and in deed: he that was to have died. Then again he shews how ungrateful they were to their <sup>7. 23-29.</sup> benefactor. For, just as in the former instance, they were saved by the injured Joseph, so here again they were saved by another injured person, I mean, Moses. [And when he was full forty years old, etc.] For* what though they

* Τί γὰρ εἰ μὴ ἀνέιδον αὐτὸν τῷ πράγματι; τῷ λόγῳ ἀνέιδον ὥστερ κἀκείνοι. N. and Catena read ἀνέιδον, both times, as if the Compiler understood the passage in the sense of a preceding comment extracted from S. Clem. Alex.

Strom. "φασι δὲ οἱ μυσταὶ λόγῳ μόνῳ ἀνελεῖν τὸν Αἰγύπτιον: the initiated say that Moses struck the Egyptian dead by a word, as in the Acts Peter is related to have done in the case of Ananias, &c." But Chrys. nowhere thus interprets the fact, and the context, ὥστερ κἀκείνοι, is against this view.—Below, δι' ὃν ἐζη μετὰ Θεοῦ: i. e. the Hebrew whom Moses saved, v. 24. who is here supposed to be one of the parties in the strife mentioned in v. 26. This however not being clear, A., as usual, omits: and the innovator, assuming the passage to be corrupt, substitutes, δι' ὃν ἐσοῦνται μετὰ Θεοῦ, "giving them counsel by means of which they shall be with God." So Edd.: only Sav. notes in the margin the genuine reading of the other Mss. and Cat.

HOMIL. killed him not actually? In intention they did kill, as XVI. did the others in the former case. There, they sold out of their own into a strange land: here, they drive from one strange land into another strange land: in the former case, one in the act of bringing them food; in this, one in the act of giving them good counsel; one to whom, under God, the man was indebted for his life! Mark how it shews (the truth ch. 5, 39. of) that saying of Gamaliel's, If it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it. See the plotted-against eventually becoming the authors of salvation to those plotting against them: 'the people, plotting against itself, and itself plotted against by others; and for all this, saved! A famine, and it did not consume them: nor was this all: but they were saved by means of the very person, whom they had expected to be destroyed (by their means). A royal edict, and it did not consume them: nay then most did their number increase, when he was dead "who knew" them. Their own Saviour they wished to kill, but for all that, they had not power to [2.] do it. Do you observe, that by the means whereby the devil tried to bring to nought the promise of God, by those very means it was advanced?

great liberty: for this is the meaning of that expression, Acts VII. 6—16. They shall serve (Me): and they shall 'come up hither again; and with impunity'.—And observe, how, while he seems to concede something to circumcision, he in fact allows it nothing: since the Promise was before it, and it followed after.—And the patriarchs, he says, moved with envy. Where it does no harm, he<sup>s</sup> humours them: <sup>v. 8.</sup> 'for they prided themselves much on these also.'—And he shews, that the saints were not exempt from tribulation, but that in their very tribulations they obtained help. And that these persons did themselves help to bring about the results, who wished to cut short these same (afflictions): just as these made Joseph the more glorious: just as the king did Moses, by ordering the children to be killed: since had he not ordered, this would not have been: just as also that (Hebrew) drives Moses into exile, that there he may have the Vision, having become worthy. Thus also him who was sold for a slave, makes He to reign as king there, where he was thought to be a slave. Thus also does Christ in His death give proof of His power: thus also does He there reign as King where they sold Him. It shews, that they were not masters even to the extent of a burying-place. But when the time of the promise drew nigh, which God had sworn to Abraham, the people grew and multiplied in Egypt, till another king arose, which knew not Joseph. Observe, that it is not during the four hundred years that He multiplies them, but (only) when the end was about to draw nigh. And yet already four hundred years were passed, nay more, in Egypt. But
 v. 19. this is the wonder of it. The same dealt subtly with our kindred, and evil-entreated our fathers, so that they cast out their young children, to the end they might not live. [Dealt subtly:] he hints at their not liking to exterminate them openly: that they should cast out their young children,

And his face, we read, was as the face of an angel.—[For he supposed, etc.] And yet it was by deeds that his championship was shewn; what intelligence was there need of here? but still for all this they understood not. And the next day he shewed himself unto <sup>ch. 6, 15.</sup> them as they strove, and would have set them at one again, saying, Sirs, ye are brethren; why do ye wrong one to another? Do you mark with what mildness he addresses them? He who had shewn his wrath in the case of the other, shews his gentleness<sup>o</sup> in his own case. But he that did his neighbour wrong thrust him away, saying, Who made thee a ruler and a judge over us? Wilt thou kill me, as thou didst the Egyptian yesterday? Mark; the very words which they said to Christ: Who made Thee ruler and judge over us? So habitual a thing was it for Jews to wrong (their benefactors) when in the act of receiving benefits! And again, mark the<sup>1</sup> atrocious baseness: As thou didst the Egyptian yesterday! Then fled Moses at this saying, and was a stranger in the land of Madian, where he begat two sons. But neither did flight extinguish the plan of Pro-<sup>μπαλα. al. μοχ- θηπλα. Sav. marg. v. 29.</sup> vidence, as neither did death<sup>2</sup>.

And when forty years were expired, there appeared to him in the wilderness of mount Sinai an angel of the <sup>v. 30.</sup> Lord in a flame of fire in a bush. Do you mark that it is not hindered by lapse of time? For when he was an exile, when a stranger, when he had now passed much time in a foreign land, so as to have two sons, when he no longer expected to return, then does the Angel appear to him. The Son of God he calls an Angel, as also he calls Him man. (Appears,) in the desert, not in a temple. See how many miracles are taking place, and no word of Temple, no word of Sacrifice. Hearing these things, let us in our afflictions flee to Him. And their groaning, saith He, I have heard: not simply, “because of their calamities.” But if any should ask, Why then did He suffer them to be evil entreated there? Why, in the first place, to every just man his sufferings are the causes of his rewards. And in the next place, as to why He afflicted them: it was to shew His power, that He can (do all), and not only so, but that He may also train them. Therefore Acts VII. also from the beginning He said to Adam: In the sweat of thy face thou shalt eat thy bread. Also<sup>32—34.</sup> (it was) in order Gen. 3, that having come out of much suffering into rest, they might<sup>19.</sup> give thanks to God. For affliction is a great good. For hear the Prophet saying, It is good for me, that Thou hast humbled me. But if to great and wonderful men afflictions be a great (good), much more to us. And, if you will, let us examine into the nature of affliction as it is in itself. Let there be some person rejoicing exceedingly, and gay, and giving a loose to jollity: what more unseemly, what more senseless than this? Let there be one sorrowing and dejected: what more truly philosophic than this? For, It is better, we read, to go into the house of mourning, than into the house of laughter. But, likely enough, you<sup>7, 2.</sup> do not like the saying, and want to evade it. Let us however see, what sort of man Adam was in Paradise, and what he was afterwards: what sort of man Cain was before, and what he was afterwards. The soul does not stand fast in its proper place, but, like as by a 'running tide, is raised and buoyed up by pleasure, having no steadfastness; facile in making professions, prompt at promising; the thoughts all in restless commotion: laughter ill-timed, causeless hilarity, idle clatter of unmeaning talk. And why speak of others? Let us take in hand some one of the saints, and let us see what he was while in pleasure, what again, when in distress. Shall we look at David himself? When he was in pleasure and rejoicing, from his many trophies, from his victory, from his crowns, from his luxurious living, from his confidence, see what sort of things he said and did: But I said in my prosperity, says he, I shall never be moved. But when he has come to be in affliction, hear what he says: And if He say to me, I have no mind for thee; lo! here am I, let Him do that which is pleasing in His sight. What can be more truly philosophic than these words? "What-

ib. 9, 22. also the son of Noah did nothing of the kind erewhile: but when he was no longer afraid for his safety, you hear how

2 Kings wanton he became. Hezekiah too, when he was in affliction, see what things he did in order to his deliverance; he

o. 19, 20. put on sackcloth, and such like; but when he was in pleasure, he fell through the haughtiness of his heart. For, saith

Deut. 6, the Scripture, When thou hast eaten, and drunk, and art 11, 12. filled, take heed to thyself. For perilous, as on a precipice's brink, is the post of affluence. Take heed, saith he, to thyself. While the Israelites were afflicted, they became all the more increased in number: but when He left them to themselves, then they all went to ruin. And why speak of examples from the ancients? In our own times, let us see, if you please, is it not the case, that when the most are in good case, they become puffed up, hostile to every body, passionate, while the power is with them: but if it be taken away, they are gentle, lowly, (and as) human beings, are brought to a consciousness of their own natural condition.

Ps. 73, 6. Therefore the Scripture saith, Pride hath holden them unto LXX. the end: their iniquity shall go forth as from fatness.

Now these things I have spoken, that we should not make enjoyment every way our object. How then does Paul

Phil. 4, say, Rejoice alway? He does not say simply, Rejoice, 4. but he adds, in the Lord. This is the greatest joy, such as

[4.] the Apostles rejoiced withal; the joy of which prisons, and scourges, and persecutions, and evil report, and all painful things, are the source, and the root, and the occasion; whence also it comes to a happy issue. But that of the world, on the contrary, begins with sweets and ends in bitters. Neither do I forbid to rejoice in the Lord, nay, I earnestly exhort to this. The Apostles were scourged, and they rejoiced: were bound, and they gave thanks: were stoned, and they preached. This is the joy I also would have: from nothing bodily has it its origin, but from spiritual things. It is not possible for him who joys after the fashion of the world, to rejoice also after a godly sort: for every one who joys after the world's fashion, has his joy in riches, in luxury, in honour, in power, in arrogance: but he who rejoices after the mind of God, has his joy in dishonour for God's sake, in poverty, in want, in fasting, in humbleness of mind. Seest thou, how opposite are the grounds (of joy)? To go without joy here, is to be without grief also: and to be without grief here, is to go without pleasure too. And in truth these are the things which produce real joy, since the others have the name only of joy, but they altogether consist of pain. What misery the arrogant man endures! How is he 'cut short in the midst of his arrogance, bespeaking for himself numberless insults, much hatred, great enmity, exceeding spite, and many an evil eye! Whether it be, that he is insulted by greater men, he grieves: or that he cannot make his stand against every body, he is mortified. Whereas the humble man lives in much enjoyment: expecting honour from none, if he receive honour, he is pleased, but if not, he is not grieved. He takes it contentedly that he is honoured: but' above all, none dishonours him. Now not to seek honour, and yet to be honoured—great must be the enjoyment of this. But in the other, it is just the reverse: he seeks honour, and is not honoured. And the pleasure that the honour gives is not the same to him who seeks it, as it is to him who seeks it not. The one, however much he receives, thinks he has received nothing: the other, though you give him ever so little, takes it as though he had received all. Then again, he who lives in affluence and luxury has numberless affairs of business, and let his revenues flow in to him ever so easily, and, as it were, from full fountains, yet he fears the evils arising from luxurious living, and the uncertainty of the future: but the ignominia.' But in the old text there is no ἀλλὰ before ἀγαπᾷ: and the meaning is not, 'he thinks himself well off, &c.' nor as Ben. 'he rejoices that &c.' but, 'he is content not to be honoured; knowing this at any rate, that nobody can dishonour him.'

HOMIL. other is always in a state of security and enjoyment, having XVI. accustomed himself to scantiness of diet. For he does not so bemoan himself at not partaking of a sumptuous board, as he luxuriates in not fearing the uncertainty of the future. But the evils arising from luxurious living, how many and great they are, none can be ignorant: it is necessary, however, to mention them now. Twofold the war, in the body, and in the soul: twofold the storm: twofold the diseases; not only in this respect, but because they are both incurable, and bring with them great calamities. Not so, frugality: but here is twofold health, twofold the benefits.

Eccles. Sleep of health, we read, is in moderate eating. For every-31, 20. where, that which keeps measure is pleasant, that which is beyond measure, ceases to please. For say now: on a little spark put a great pile of fagots, and you will no longer see the fire shining, but much disagreeable smoke. On a very strong and large man lay a burden which exceeds his strength, and you will see him with his burden lying prostrate on the ground. Embark too large a freight in your vessel, and you have ensured a grievous shipwreck. Just so it is here. For just as in over-laden ships, great is the tumult of the sailors, the pilot, the man at the prow, and the passengers, while they cast into the sea the things above deck, and things below; so here too, with their vomitings upwards, and their purgings downwards, they mar their constitutions, and destroy themselves. And what is the most shameful of all, the mouth is made to do the office of the nether parts, and that becomes the more shameful member. But if to the mouth the disgrace be such, think what must it be in the soul! For indeed there it is all mist, all storm, all darkness, great the uproar of the thoughts, at being so thronged and crushed, the soul itself crying out at the abuse done to it: all* (the parts and faculties) complaining of one another, beseeching, entreating, that the filth within may be discharged somewhere. And after it is flung out, still the turmoil is not at an end; but then comes fever and diseases. 'And how comes it,' say you, 'that one may see these luxurious livers, in goodly plight, riding on horse-back? What idle talk is this,' say you, 'to tell us of diseases? It is I that am diseased, I that am racked, I that am disgusting, while I have nothing to eat.' Ah me! for one may well lament at such words. But the sufferers with the gout, the men that are carried on litters, the men that are swathed with bandages, from what class of people, I ask you, shall we see these? And indeed, were it not that they would deem it an insult, and think my words opprobrious, I would before now have addressed them even by name. 'But there are some of them, who are in good health as well.' Because they give themselves not merely to luxurious living, but also to labours. Else shew me a man, who does nothing whatever but fatten himself, free from pain as he lies there, without an anxious thought. For though a host of physicians without number came together, they would not be able to rescue him from his diseases. It is not in the nature of things. / For I will hold you a medical discourse. Of the matters sent down into the belly, not all becomes nourishment; since even in the food itself, not all is nutritive, but part of it in the process of digestion passes into stool, part is turned into nourishment. If then in the process of digestion the operation is perfect, this is the result, and each finds its proper place; the wholesome and useful part betakes itself to its appropriate place, while that which is superfluous and useless, withdraws itself, and passes off. But if it be in too great quantity, then even the nutritive part of it becomes hurtful. And, to speak by way of example, in order that my meaning may be clearer to you: in wheat, part is fine flour, part meal, part bran: now if the mill be able to grind (what is put in), it separates all these: but if you put in too much, all becomes mixed up together. Wine again, if it go through its proper process of formation, and under due influence of the seasons, then, whereas at first all is mixed together, anon part settles into lees, part rises into scum, part remains for enjoyment to those that use it, and HOMIL. this is the good part, and will not readily undergo any XVI. change. But what they call 'nourishment,' is neither wine, nor lees, while all are mixed up together.—The same may be seen in the river", when its waters make a whirling flood. As at such time we see the fishes floating at top, dead, their eyes first blinded by the muddy slime: so is it with us. For when gormandizing, like a flood of rain, has drenched the inward parts, it puts all in a whirl, and makes that the <sup>1 λογισ-</sup> faculties', healthy till then and living in a pure element, <sup>μολ</sup> drift lifeless on the surface. Since then by all these examples we have shewn how great the mischief is, let us cease to count these men happy for that, for which we ought to think them wretched, and to bemoan ourselves for that, for which we ought to count ourselves happy, and let us welcome sufficiency with a contented mind. Or do you not hear even what physicians tell you, that 'want is the mother of health?' But what I say is, that want is mother, not of bodily health, but also of that of the soul. These things Paul also, that physician indeed, cries aloud; when he says, <sup>1 Tim. 6,</sup> Having food and raiment, let us therewith be content. Let <sup>8.</sup> us therefore do as he bids us, that so, being in sound health, we may perform the work that we ought to do, in Christ Jesus our Lord, with Whom to the Father and the Holy Ghost together be glory, dominion, honour, now and ever, world without end. ### ACTS vii. 35.

This Moses whom they refused, saying, Who made thee a ruler and a judge over us? the same did God send to be a ruler and a deliverer by the hand of the Angel which appeared to him in the bush.

THIS is very suitable to the matter in hand. This Moses, he says. This, the man who had been in danger of losing his life; the man who had been set at nought by them; this the man whom they had declined; this same, God having raised up, sent unto them. [Whom they refused, saying, Who made thee a ruler?] just as they themselves (the hearers) said, We have no king, but Cæsar. He here shews <sup>John 19,</sup> also, that what was then done, was done by Christ. The <sup>15.</sup> same did God send by the hand of the Angel, who said unto him, I am the God of Abraham. This same Moses, he says,—and observe how he points to his renown—this same Moses, he says, brought them out, after that he had shewed <sup>v. 36. 37.</sup> wonders and signs in the land of Egypt, and in the Red sea, and in the wilderness forty years. This is that Moses, which said unto the children of Israel, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me: set at nought like me. Him, likewise, Herod wished to kill, and in Egypt He found preservation; just as it was with the former, even when He was a babe, He was aimed at for destruction. This is he, that was in the Church <sup>v. 38.</sup> in the wilderness with the Angel which spake to him in the mount Sina, and with our fathers: who received the lively oracles to give unto us. Again no mention of temple, none of sacrifice. With the Angel, it says, he received the lively

- HOMIL. XVII. oracles to give unto the fathers. It shews, that he not only wrought miracles, but also gave a law, as Christ did. Just as Christ first works miracles, and then legislates; so did Moses. But they did not hear him, keeping their disobedience, even after the miracles: To whom, he says, our fathers would not obey: after the wonders done in those forty years. And not only so, but just the contrary: but thrust him from them, and in their hearts turned back again into Egypt. Saying unto Aaron, Make us gods to go before us; for as for this Moses, which brought us out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him. And they made a calf in those days, and offered sacrifice unto the idol, and rejoiced in the works of their own hands. Then God turned, and gave them up to worship the host of heaven; as it is written in the book of the Prophets, O ye house of Israel, have ye offered to me slain beasts and sacrifices by the space of forty years in the wilderness? Yea, ye took up the tabernacle of Moloch, and the star of your god Remphan, figures which ye made to worship them: and I will carry you away beyond Babylon. The expression, gave them up, means, He suffered. Our fathers had the tabernacle of witness in the wilderness, as he had appointed, speaking unto Moses, that he should make it according to the fashion he had seen. Even when there was a Tabernacle, yet there were no sacrifices. Did ye offer unto Me slain beasts and sacrifices? There was the tabernacle of witness, and yet it profited them nothing, but they were consumed. But neither before, nor afterwards, did the miracles profit them aught. Which also, our fathers that came after brought in. Seest thou, how the holy place is there wherever God may be? For to this end also he says, in the wilderness, to compare place with place. Then the benefit (conferred upon them): And our fathers that came after brought it in with Jesus into the possession of the Gentiles, whom God drave out before the face of our fathers, unto the days of David; who found favour before God, and desired to find a tabernacle for the God of Jacob. David desired to find favour: and he builded not, he, the wonderful, the great; but the cast-away, Solomon. But Solomon, it says, built Him an house. Howbeit the Most High dwelleth not in (places) made with hands. This was shewn indeed already by what had been before said: Acts VII. but it is shewn also by the voice of a prophet; What house 39—50.

v. 41. And they made a calf in Horeb—the very place where God appeared unto Moses: and offered sacrifices unto the idol, and rejoiced in the works of their own hands: for which they ought to have hid their faces. What wonder that ye know not Christ, seeing ye knew not Moses, and God Who was manifested by such wonders? But they not only knew Him not: they also insulted in another way, by their idol-

v. 42. making. Then God turned, and gave them up to worship the host of heaven. Hence these same “customs” date their origin, hence the sacrifices: they were themselves the first that made sacrifices—to their idols! For that is why it is marked<sup>d</sup>, They made a calf in Horeb, and offered sacrifices

<sup>c</sup> This clause, omitted by A. B. C., is preserved by N. and the Catena. The calf was one, yet they called it Gods: on which St. Chrys. remarks elsewhere, that they added polytheism to idolatry.—The next sentence may perhaps be completed thus: “that they did not even know that there is One God.”—

<sup>d</sup> διὰ γὰρ τοῦτο ἐπιστημαίμεθα. The meaning is: Stephen was accused of speaking against ‘the customs,’—sacrifices, temple, feasts, &c. Therefore he significantly points to that critical conjuncture from which these ‘customs’ date their introduction: namely, the Provocation at Horeb. Prior to that, he tells of ‘living oracles,’ life-giving to the idol: seeing that, before this, the name of sacrifice is nowhere mentioned, but only lively ordinances, and lively oracles. And rejoiced—that is why feasts also. As it is written in the Book of the Prophets—and observe, he does not cite the text without a purpose, but shews by it that there is no need of sacrifices; saying: Did ye offer slain beasts and sacrifice to Me?—He lays an emphasis on this word (to Me?). “Ye cannot say that it was from sacrificing to Me, that ye proceeded to sacrifice to them:—by the space of forty years: and this too, in the wilderness, where He had most signally shewn Himself their Protector. Yea, v. 43. ye took up the tabernacle of Moloch, and the star of your god Remphan: images which ye made to worship them. The cause of sacrifices! And I will carry you away beyond Babylon. Even the captivity, an impeachment of their wickedness! ‘But a Tabernacle,’ say you, ‘there was, (the v. 44. precepts: after it, and as its consequence, sacrifices, &c, those statutes which were not good, and ordinances by which a man shall not live, as God says by Ezekiel. Not a word of sacrifice till then: and the first mention is, of the sacrifices offered to the calf. In like manner, “they rejoiced,” “the people ate and drank, and rose up to play:” and in consequence of this, the feasts were prescribed: καὶ ἐβόρυσαντο, φησὶν διὰ τοῦτο καὶ ἔορτα.—“Ἐπισημαίνεσθαι might be rendered, ‘he marks,’ ‘puts a mark upon it’ (so the innovator, who substitutes, τοῦτο καὶ Δαυὶδ ἐπισημαίνόμενος λέγει): we take it passively, ‘there is a mark set over it—it is emphatically denoted.’ In the active, the verb taken intransitively means ‘to betoken or announce itself,’ ‘make its first appearance.’—In the Treatise adv. Judæos, iv. §. 6. tom. i. 624. C. St. Chrysostom gives this account of the legal sacrifices. “To what purpose unto Me is the multitude of your sacrifices? etc. (Isaiah I, 11 ff.) Do ye hear how it is most plainly declared, that God did not from the first require these at your hands? Had He required them, He would have obliged those famous saints who were before the Law to observe this practice. ‘Then wherefore has He permitted it now?’ In condescension to your infirmity. As a physician in his treatment of a delirious patient, &c.: thus did God likewise. For seeing them so frantic in their lust for sacrifices, that they were ready, unless they got them, to desert to idols; nay not only ready, but that they had already deserted, thereupon He permitted sacrifices. And that this is the reason, is clear from the order of events. After the feast which they made to the demons, then it was that He permitted sacrifices: all but saying: ‘Ye are mad, and will needs sacrifice: well then, at any rate sacrifice to Me.’”—(What follows may serve to illustrate the brief remark a little further on, Καὶ ἡ ἀρχαῖα κατηγορία τῆς κακίας.) “But even this, He did not permit to continue to the end, but by a most wise method, withdrew them from it. . . For He did not permit it to be done in any place of the whole world, but in Jerusalem only. Anon, when for a short time they had sacrificed, he destroyed the city. Had He openly said, Desist, they, such was their insane passion for sacrificing, would not readily have complied. But now perforce, the place being taken away, He secretly withdrew them from their frenzy.” So here: “Even the captivity impeaches the wickedness, (which was the cause of the permission of sacrifice.)”

- HOMIL. so* that on the mount was the Original. And this Tabernacle, XVII. moreover, in the wilderness, was carried about, and not locally fixed. And he calls it, Tabernacle of witness: i. e. (for witness) of the miracles, of the statutes. This is the reason why both it and those (the fathers) had no Temple. [As He had appointed, that spake unto Moses, that he should make it according to the fashion that he had seen.] Again, it was none other than He (Christ) that gave the fashion itself. v. 45. Until the days of David: and there was no Temple! And yet the Gentiles also had been driven out: for that is why he mentions this: Whom God drave out, he says, before the face of our fathers. Whom He drave out, he says: and even then, no Temple! And so many wonders, and no mention of a Temple! So that, although first there is a Tabernacle, yet nowhere a Temple. v. 46. Until the days of David, he says: even David, and no Temple! And he sought to find favour before God: and built not:—so far v. 47. was the Temple from being a great matter! [But Solomon built Him an house.] They thought Solomon was great: but that he was not better than his father, nay not even v. 48. 49. equal to him, is manifest. Hovbeit the Most High dwelleth not in temples made with hands; as saith the prophet, Heaven is My throne, and earth is My footstool. Nay, not even these are worthy of God, forasmuch as they are made, seeing they are creatures, the works of His hand. See how he leads them on by little and little, (shewing) that not even these are to be mentioned. And again the prophecy says v. 50. openly, [What house will ye build Me? etc.] v. 51. What is the reason that at this point he speaks<sup>1</sup> in the tone of invective? Great was his boldness of speech, when at the point to die: for in fact I think he knew that this was the case. Ye stiffnecked, he says, and uncircumcised in heart and ears. This also is from the prophets: nothing is of himself. Ye do always resist the Holy Ghost: as your fathers did, so do ye. When it was not His will that sacrifices should be, ye sacrificed; when it is His will, then again ye do not sacrifice: when He would not give you commandments, ye drew them to you: when ye got them, ye neglected them. Again, when the Temple stood, ye worshipped idols: when it is His will

to be worshipped without a Temple, ye do the opposite. <sup>Acts VII. 36—53.</sup> Observe, he says not, Ye resist God, but, the Spirit: so far was he from knowing any difference between Them. And, what is greater: As your fathers did, he says, so do ye. Thus also did Christ (reproach them), forasmuch as they were always boasting much of their fathers. Which of the v. 52. prophets have not your fathers persecuted? and they have slain them which shewed before of the coming of the Just One: he still says, the Just One, wishing to check them: of Whom ye have been now the betrayers and murderers—two charges he lays against them—who have received the Law by the disposition of Angels, and have not kept it. [How, By the disposition of Angels?] Some say, (The Law) [3.] disposed by Angels; or, put into his hand by the Angel Who appeared to him in the bush; for was He man? No wonder that He<sup>s</sup> who wrought those works, should also have wrought these. Ye slew them who preached of Him, much more Himself. He shews them disobedient both to God, and to Angels, and the Prophets, and the Spirit, and to all: as also Scripture saith elsewhere: Lord, they<sup>1</sup> Kings have slain Thy Prophets, and thrown down Thine altars.—<sup>19, 10.</sup> They, then, stand up for the Law, and say, He blasphemeth against Moses: he shews, therefore, that it is they who blaspheme, and that (their blasphemy is not only against Moses, but) against God; shews, that they from the very beginning have been doing this: that they have themselves destroyed their “customs,” that there is no need of these: that while accusing him, and saying that he opposed Moses, they themselves were opposing the Spirit: and not merely opposing, but with murder added to it: and that they had their enmity all along from the very beginning. Seest thou, that he shews them to be acting in opposition both to Moses and to all others, and not keeping the Law? And <sup>s</sup> E. F. D. Edd. add, “that they knew (Him) not, and that they murdered (Him):” but the meaning is, that they betrayed, and that they murdered: or, as below, Their fathers slew the Prophets, and they, Him Whom they preached.

Such is the boldness of speech of a man bearing the Cross.

Let us then also imitate this: though it be not a time of war, yet
Pa. 119, it is always the time for boldness of speech. For, I spake, says 46. one, in Thy testimonies before kings, and was not ashamed. If Comp. we chance to be among heathens, let us thus stop their mouths, Hom. in without wrath, without harshness. For if we do it with 1 Cor. iv. §. 6. wrath, it no longer seems to be the boldness (of one who xxiii. §. 4, 5. is confident of his cause,) but passion: but if with gentleness, Col. xi. this is boldness indeed. For<sup>h</sup> in one and the same thing §. 2. success and failure cannot possibly go together. The boldness is a success: the anger is a failure. Therefore, if we are to have boldness, we must be clean from wrath, that none may impute our words to that. No matter how just your words may be, when you speak with anger, you ruin all: no matter how boldly you speak, how fairly reprove, or what not. See this man, how free from passion as he discourses to them! For he did not abuse them: he did but remind them of the words of the Prophets. For, to shew you that it was not anger, at the very moment he was suffering evil at their hands, he prayed, saying, Lay not to their charge this sin. So far was he from speaking these words in anger; no, he spake in grief and sorrow for their sakes. As indeed this is why it speaks of his appearance, that they saw his face as it had been the face of an angel, on purpose that they might believe. Let us then be clean from wrath. The Holy Spirit dwelleth not where wrath is: cursed is the wrathful. It cannot be that aught wholesome should approach, where wrath goes forth. For as in a storm at sea, great is the tumult, loud the clamour, and then would be no time<sup>1</sup> for lessons of wisdom: so neither in wrath. If the soul is to be in a condition either to say, or to be disciplined to, aught of philosophy, it must first be in the haven. Seest thou not how, when we wish to converse on matters of serious import, we look out for places free from noise, where all is stillness, all calm, that we may not be put out and discomposed? But if noise from without discomposes, much more disturbance from within. Whether one pray, to no purpose does he pray with wrath and disputings: whether he speak, he will only make himself ridiculous: whether he hold his peace, so again it will be even then: whether he eat, he is hurt even then: whether he drink, or whether he drink not; whether he sit, or stand, or walk; whether he sleep: for even in their dreams such fancies haunt them. For what is there in such men that is not disagreeable? Eyes unsightly, mouth distorted, limbs agitated and swollen, tongue foul and sparing no man, mind distraught, gestures uncomely: much to disgust. Mark the eyes of demoniacs, and those of drunkards and madmen; in what do they differ from each other? Is not the whole madness? For what though it be but for the moment? The madman too is possessed for the moment: but what is worse than this? And they are not ashamed at that excuse; "I knew not (saith one) what I said." And how came it that thou didst not know this, thou the rational man, thou that hast the gift of reason, on purpose that thou mayest not act the part of the creatures without reason, just like a wild horse, hurried away by rage and passion? In truth, the very excuse is criminal. For thou oughtest to have known what thou saidst. "It was the passion," say you, "that spoke the words, not I." How should it be that? For passion has no power, except it get it from you. You might as well say, "It was my hand that inflicted the wounds, not I." What occasion, think you, most needs wrath? would you not say, war and battle? But even then, if any thing is done with wrath, the whole is spoiled and undone. For of all men, those who fight had best not be enraged: of all men, those had best not be enraged, who <sup>1</sup>want to hurt. And how is it possible to fight then? you will ask. With reason, with <sup>2</sup>self-command: since fighting is, to stand in opposition. Seest thou not that even these (common) wars are regulated by definite law, and order, and times? For wrath is nothing but an irrational impulse: and an irrational creature cannot possibly perform aught rational. For in- [4.]

HOMIL. stance, the man here spoke such words, and did it without XVII. passion. And Elias said, How long will ye halt on both
 1 Kings your knees? and spake it not in passion. And Phinees 18, 21. slew, and did it without passion. For passion suffers not a man to see, but, just as in a night-battle, it leads him, with eyes blindfolded and ears stopped up, where it will. Then let us rid ourselves of this demon, at its first beginning let us quell it, let us put the sign of the Cross on our breast, as it were a curb. Wrath is a shameless dog: but let it learn to hear the law. If there be in a sheep-fold a dog so savage as not to obey the command of the shepherd, nor to know his voice, all is lost and ruined. He is kept along with the sheep: but if he makes a meal on the sheep, he is useless, and is put to death. If he has learnt to obey thee, feed thy dog: he is useful when it is against the wolves, against robbers, and against the captain of the robbers that he barks, not against the sheep, not against friends. If he does not obey, he ruins all: if he learns not to mind thee, he destroys all. The mildness in thee let not wrath consume, but let it guard it, and feed it up. And it will guard it, that it may feed in much security, if it destroy wicked and evil thoughts, if it chase away the devil from every side. So is gentleness preserved, when evil works are nowhere admitted: so we become worthy of respect, when we learn not to be shameless. For nothing renders a man so shameless, as an evil conscience. Why are harlots without shame? Why are virgins shamefaced? Is it not from their sin that the former, from their chastity that the latter, are such? For nothing makes a person so shameless, as sin. 'And yet on the contrary,' say you, 'it puts to shame.' Yes; him who condemns himself: but him that is past blushing, it renders even more reckless: for desperation makes daring. For the wicked, saith the Scripture, when he is Prov. come into the depths of evils, despiseth. But he that is 18, 3. shameless, will also be reckless, and he that is reckless, will be daring. See in what way gentleness is destroyed, when evil thoughts gnaw at it. This is why there is such a dog, barking mightily: we have also sling and stone (ye know what I mean): we have also spear and enclosure and cattle-fold: let us guard our thoughts unhurt. If the dog<sup>1</sup> be gentle with the sheep, but savage against those without, and keep vigilant watch, this is the excellence of a dog: and, be he ever so famished, not to devour the sheep; be he ever so full, not to spare the wolves. Such too is anger meant to be: however provoked, not to forsake gentleness; however at quiet, to be on the alert against evil thoughts: to acknowledge the friend, and not for any beating forsake him, and for all his caressing, to fly at the intruder. The devil uses caressing full oft: let<sup>i</sup> the dog know at sight that he is an intruder. So also let us caress<sup>i</sup> Virtue, though she put us<sup>i</sup> to pain, and shew our aversion to Vice, though she give us pleasure. Let us not be worse than the dogs, which, even when whipped and throttled, do not desert their master: but if<sup>k</sup> the stranger also feed them, even so they do hurt. There are times when anger is useful; but this is when it barks against strangers. What means it, Whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause? It means, Stand not up in thine own quarrel, neither avenge thyself: if thou see another suffering deadly wrong, stretch out thy hand to help him. This is no longer passion, when thou art clear of all feeling for thyself alone. David had gotten Saul into his power, and was not moved by passion, did not thrust the spear into him, the enemy he had in his power; but took his revenge upon the Devil. Moses, when he saw a stranger doing an injury, even slew him: but when one of his own people, he did not so: them that were brethren he would have reconciled; the others, not so. That "most meek" Moses, as Scripture witnesseth of him, see how he was

N. ὥς ὁ κύων εἰδέναι (ἰδέναι C.) ὅτι. We restore the true reading by omitting ὥς. 'The dog' is anger: the devil σαίνει, not as the dog, but upon the dog, as the ἀλλότριος in the preceding sentence. 'Let our faithful watch-dog see at once that he is an intruder.' In the following sentence the image is so far incongruous, as σαίνωμεν here has a different reference: viz. 'as the dog fawns upon the friend though beaten, so let us, &c.'

The antithesis seems to require the sense to be, "While, if the stranger even feed them, for all that, they do him a mischief." But the words τρέφῃ and βλάπτουσιν are scarcely suitable in the sense, τροφὴν διδῶ and λυμῶνται. Edd. have from E. alone, πᾶς οὐ μᾶλλον βλάφουσιν; in the sense, "If however the stranger (not merely caresses but) also (regularly) feeds them, how shall they not do more hurt (than good)?" i. e. "If the devil be suffered to pamper our anger, that which should have been our safeguard will prove a bane to us."—Perhaps this is the sense intended in the old reading; but if so, καὶ οὕτω is unsuitable.

HOMIL. XVII. roused ! But not so, we: on the contrary, where we ought to Hom. vi. de laud. Pauli, ad fin. shew meekness, no wild beast so fierce as we : but where we ought to be roused, none so dull and sluggish. On no occasion do we use our faculties to the purpose they were meant for: and therefore it is that our life is spent to no purpose. For even in the case of implements ; if one use them, one instead of other, all is spoilt: if one take his sword, and then, where he should use it and cut with it, uses only his hand, he does no good: again, where he should use his hand, by taking the sword in hand he spoils all. In like manner also the physician, if where he ought to cut, he cuts not, and where he ought not, he does cut, mars all. Wherefore, I beseech you, let us use the thing<sup>1</sup> at its proper time. The proper time for anger is never, where we move in our own quarrel: but if it is our duty to correct others, then is the time to use it, that we may by force deliver others. So shall we both be like unto God, always keeping a spirit free from wrath, and shall attain unto the good things that are to come, through the grace and loving-kindness of our Lord Jesus Christ, with Whom, to the Father and the Holy Ghost together, be glory, dominion, and honour, now and evermore, world without end. Amen.

ACTS vii. 54.

When they heard these things, they were cut to the heart, and they gnashed on him with their teeth.

SEE*, once more, the wrong-doers in trouble. Just as the Jews are perplexed, saying, What are we to do with these men? so these also are cut to the heart. And yet it was he that had good right to be incensed, who, having done no wrong, was treated like a criminal, and was spitefully calumniated. But the calumniators had the worst of it in the end. So true is that saying, which I am ever repeating, "Ill to do, is ill to fare." And yet he (in his charges against them) resorted to no calumny, but proved (what he said). So sure are we, when we are shamefully borne down in a matter wherein we have a clear conscience, to be none the worse for it.—<sup>b</sup> If they desired,' say you, 'to kill him, how chief priests, in their perplexity, said, &c." F. D. adopting part of this addition, "but are still mad, and seek an accusation. See, once more, &c."

HOMIL. XVIII. was it that they did not take occasion, out of what he said, that they might kill him? They would fain have a fair-seeming plea to put upon their outrage. 'Well then, was not the insulting them a fair plea?' It was not his doing, if they were insulted: it was the Prophet's accusation of them. And besides, they did not wish it to look as if they killed him because of what he had said against them—just as they acted in the case of Christ; no, but for impiety: now<sup>a</sup> this word of his was the expression of piety. Wherefore, as they attempted, besides killing him, to hurt his reputation also, they were cut to the heart. For they were afraid lest he should on the contrary become an object of even greater reverence. Therefore, just what they did in Christ's case, the same they do here also. For as He said, Ye shall see the Son of Man sitting on the right hand of God, and they, calling it blasphemy, ran upon Him; just so was it here. There, they rent v.55-58. their garments; here, they stopped their ears. But he, being full of the Holy Ghost, looked up stedfastly into heaven, and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God, and said, Behold, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of Man standing on the right hand of God. Then they cried out with a loud voice, and stopped their ears, and ran upon him with one accord, and cast him out of the city, and stoned him. And yet, if he lied, they ought to have thought him beside himself, and to have let him go.—But he wished to bring them over, [and said, Behold, etc.] for, since he had spoken of Christ's death, and had said nothing of His resurrection, he would fain add this doctrine also. [Standing at the right hand of God.] And in this manner He appeared to him<sup>d</sup>: that, were it but so, the Jews might receive φασιν εἰλογον κ. τ. λ. Hence we restore the true reading, and the proper order. Namely, for Καὶ we read Εἰ, and transpose to this place, as part of the interlocation, the question πῶς οὐκ ἔλαβον—; So, the φησὶν is explained, the question is followed by its answer, and there is no abruptness.

impious;' and they were waiting to catch at something which might enable them to cry out, 'He blasphemeth:' and, disappointed of this, they were cut to the heart.—Below Ben. retains (from E. alone) μὴ πάλιν καινόν τι περὶ αὐτὸν ἄλλο γένηται, though Savile had restored the genuine reading μὴ πάλιν αἰδεσμιώτερος γένηται. They had desired to injure his reputation for sanctity, and now feared that his speech would have the opposite result.

This is the reason also why his face was glorified. For God, being merciful, desired to make their machinations the means of recalling them unto Himself. And see, how many signs are wrought! And cast him out of the city, and stoned him. Here again, without the city, and even in death, Confession and Preaching. And the witnesses laid down their clothes at a young man's feet, whose name was Saul. And they stoned Stephen, calling upon God, and saying, Lord Jesus, receive my spirit. This is meant to shew them that he is not perishing, and to teach them. And he knelt down, and cried with a loud voice, Lord, lay not this sin to their charge. To clear himself, and shew that neither were his former words prompted by passion, he says, Lord, [lay not this sin to their charge]: wishing also even in this way to win them over. For to shew that he forgave their wrath and rage in murdering him, and that his own soul was free from all passion, was the way to make his saying to be favourably received.

And Saul was consenting unto his death. Hereupon arises a persecution, and it becomes a great one. And at that time there was a great persecution against the

The clause ὡς πού διέξουσιν seems to have been intended by the innovator, not as part of the text, but as a gloss, "as is somewhere shewn at large." But what Chrys. says is, that Christ was pleased to appear in this attitude to Stephen for the sake of the Jews, in order &c.—Hom. vi. in Ascens. (Cat. in l.) he says, "Why standing, and not sitting? To shew that He is in set to succour His martyr. For thus it is said also of the Father, Stand up, O God, and, Now will I stand up, saith the Lord, I will set him in safety."—

HOMIL. XVIII. Church which was at Jerusalem. And they were all scattered abroad throughout the regions of Judea and Samaria, except the Apostles. Mark how once more God permits temptations to arise; mark, and well observe, how the events are ordered by Divine Providence. They were admired because of the signs: being scourged, they were none the worse for it: (some) were ordained in the matter of the widows': the word increased: once more, God permits a great hindrance to arise. And a persecution of no ordinary kind; [and they were all scattered, etc.] for they feared their enemies, now become more daring: and at the same time it is shewn that they were but men, these that were afraid, that fled. For, that thou mayest not say after these things that<sup>s</sup> by grace alone they effected (what they did), they were also persecuted, and themselves became more timorous, while their adversaries were more daring. And were all scattered abroad, it says, except the Apostles. But this was divinely ordered, so that they should no longer

[2.] were men—not their fear alone, but their grief and lamentation. Who would not have wept to see that mild, that lamb-like person stoned, and lying dead? Fit eulogy to be spoken over his grave has the Evangelist recorded, in this one speech, Lay not this sin to their charge.—And made, he says, great lamentation over him.—But let us look over again what has been said.

[Upon him,] the man who has wrought such miracles, the man who has prevailed over all in speech, the man who can hold such discourse! As if they had got the very thing they wanted, they straightway give full scope to their rage. And the witnesses, he says, laid down their clothes at the feet of a young man, whose name was Saul. Observe how particularly he relates what concerns Paul, to shew thee that the Power which wrought in him was of God. But after all these things, not only did he not believe, but also aimed at Him with a thousand hands: for this is why it says, And Saul was consenting unto his death.—And this blessed man does not simply pray, but does it with earnestness: having kneeled down. Mark his divine death! So long<sup>1</sup> only the Lord permitted the soul to remain in him: [And having said this, he fell asleep.]—And they were all scattered abroad throughout the region of Judæa and Samaria. And now without scruple they had intercourse with Samaria, whereas it had been said to them, Go not into the way of the Gentiles, [and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not.] Mat. 10. 5. <sup>1</sup> Ben. after Morel. from E. without notice of the true reading (A. B. C. N. Cat.), received by Savile, has: "Ὅθεν θεῖος αὐτοῦ καὶ ὁ θάνατος γέγονε. Μεχρὶ γὰρ τούτου συγκεχώρητο ταῖς ψυχαῖς ἐν τῇ ᾄδῃ εἶναι. (The latter part is adopted also by D. F.) "Whence also his death became divine. For until this time it had been granted to the souls to be in Hades." This comment is derived from St. Cyril. Al. from whom the Catena cites: "Since we are justified by faith in Him.... He hath wrought a new thing for us, τὸ μηκέτι μὲν εἰς ᾧδου τρέχειν τὰς τῶν σωμάτων ἀπαλαττομένας ψυχὰς καθὰ καὶ πρῆξιν, πέμπεσθαι δὲ μᾶλλον εἰς χεῖρας Θεοῦ ζῶντος: that our souls, on their deliverance from our bodies, no longer as aforetime haste into Hades, but are conveyed into the hands of the Living God. And knowing this, Saint Stephen said, Lord Jesus, receive my spirit." Œcumen. repeats this, almost in the same words.

HOMIL. to prison. Great was his frenzy: that he was alone, that XVIII. he even entered into houses: for indeed he was ready to give his life for the Law. Haling, it says, men and women: mark both the confidence, and the violence, and the frenzy. All that fell into his hands, he put to all manner of ill-treatment: for in consequence of the recent murder, he was
 v. 4—9. become more daring. Therefore they that were scattered abroad went every where preaching the word. Then Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them. And the people with one accord gave heed unto those things which Philip spake, hearing and seeing the miracles which he did. For unclean spirits, crying with loud voice, came out of many that were possessed with them: and many taken with palsies, and that were lame, were healed. And there was great joy in that city. But there was a certain man, called Simon, which beforetime in the same city used sorcery, and bewitched the people of Samaria. Observe<sup>k</sup> another trial, this affair of Simon. Giving out, it
 v. 10-15. says, that he was himself some great one. To whom they all gave heed, from the least to the greatest, saying, This man is the great power of God. And to him they had regard, because that of long time he had bewitched them with sorceries. But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women. Then Simon himself believed also: and when he was baptized, he continued with Philip, and wondered, beholding the miracles and signs which were done. Now when the Apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John: who, when they were come down, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost. And (yet) great signs had been done: how then had they not received the Spirit? They had received the Spirit, namely, of remission of sins: but the Spirit of miracles they had not received.

<sup>k</sup> In the old text, vv. 4—10. are given continuously, and vv. 11—19; between them the brief comments which we have restored to their proper places, viz. here and after v. 15: and after v. 19, the comment which we have placed after v. 17. In the modern text, the first comment (omitting ἀγαπᾶν εἰς αὐτὸν κ. τ. λ.) is placed after v. 10; in the second, the words, καὶ σημεῖα μεγάλα ἐγένετο, are omitted; the rest is given after v. 19.

For as yet He was fallen upon none of them: only they ACTS VIII. 16—19. were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. Then laid VIII. 16—19. they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost. V. 16. 17.

For, to shew that this was the case, and that it was the Spirit of miracles they had not received, observe how, having seen the result, Simon came and asked for this. And when V. 18. 19. Simon saw that through laying on of the Apostles' hands the Holy Ghost was given, he offered them money, saying, Give me also this power, that on whomsoever I lay hands, he may receive the Holy Ghost.

'The' persecution,' say you, 'gained strength.' True, but at that very time to men possessed before (by a hostile power) it brought deliverance. For it planted the miracles, like a strong-hold, in the heart of the enemies' country.—Not even the death of Stephen quenched their rage, nay, increased it rather: it scattered wide the teachers, so that the greater became the discipleship.—And there was joy. And yet there had been great lamentation: true; but mark again the good.—Of a long time was the malady, but this man brought them deliverance.—And how came he to baptize Simon also? Just as Christ chose Judas.—And beholding the signs which he did, forasmuch as the others did not receive the (power of working) signs, he durst not ask for it.—How was it then that they did not strike him dead, as they did Ananias and Sapphira? Because even in the old times, he that gathered sticks (on the sabbath-day) Numb. 15, 32. was put to death as a warning to others, and in no other

B. C. N. Cat. ad vv. 15—17, and 3. 4.) the subject to ἐπέτειχετο and ἐπετείχισα is not Θεός, but διωγμός: and the persons delivered are not the disciples, but the Samaritans, described as ποικιλοτρόφως, viz. under the influence of Simon's sorceries. In the last sentence, the meaning is entirely mistaken: for the νόσημα is the infatuation of the Samaritans, not the wickedness of Simon.—Ἐπετείχισα γὰρ αὐτοῖς τὰ σημεῖα can hardly be rendered without an awkward periphrasis: ἐπέτειχ. τί τιμι, a phrase frequently used by St. Chrys., means, to raise up something against a person as an ἐπετείχισμα, (as Decelea in Attica against the Athenians in the Peloponnesian war:) see Mr. Field's Index to Hom. in Matt.

- [8.] purchased with money.—Why had not these received the Holy Ghost, when baptized? Either because Philip kept this honour for the Apostles; or, because he had not this gift (to impart); or, he was one of the Seven: which is rather to be said. Whence, I take it, this Philip was one of the Seven, the second of them, next to Stephen; but he of the Eunuch one of the Apostles<sup>a</sup>. But observe; those went <sup>a</sup> So A. B. C. N. Cat. Of the Edd., Savile alone retains this clause, the rest follow the mod. text, which rejects it. And indeed it can hardly be doubted, that St. Chrys. himself would have expunged, or altered this statement, had he revised these Homilies: for in the next Hom. he shews that the Philip of vv. 26 ff. was certainly not the Apostle, but probably one of the seven deacons. The fact seems to be, that having had no occasion until now to discuss this question, he had assumed (as others had done before him) that the Philip of the Eunuch's history was the Apostle of that name: thus in Hom. ad Gen. xxxv. §. 2. (delivered but a few years before,) he takes this for granted. Here, however, he perceives that the Philip who preached at Samaria could not be the Apostle: but at present he is still under the impression, that the person by whom the Eunuch was converted was St. Philip the Apostle, and accordingly speaks as in the text, "This Philip, I take it, was one of the Seven; he of the story of the Eunuch was one of the Apostles." Of course it was impossible on a review of the circumstances to rest in this conclusion; and in the very beginning of the next Homily he tacitly revokes the notion here advanced, and points out how the command, "Arise, and go to the south," must have been addressed to Philip in Samaria (the deacon), and not Philip the Apostle in Jerusalem. (See the note there.)—The early writers frequently confound the Philip of this chapter (the deacon and evangelist, Acts 21, 9.) with the Apostle: Polycrates ap. Eus. H. E. iii. 30. and v. 24. Augustin. Serm. 266. §. 5.—S. Isidore of Pelusium, Ep. 448. in reply to a correspondent who was not satisfied with his statement (Ep. 447.), that "Philip who baptized the Eunuch and catechized Simon was not the Apostle, but one of the Seven," and requested proof from Scripture, (Ἐπειδὴ καὶ μυστηρίων ἡγεῖς γραφικῶν . . . Ἐπειδὴ πολλῶν ἀποδείξεων ἐρᾷ,) bids him observe, ch. viii. 1. that the Apostles remained at Jerusalem: that Philip the Apostle would have been competent to impart the gift of the Spirit: and further suggests, that Philip the deacon, fleeing from the persecution, was on his way through Samaria to Cæsarea his native place, (where we afterwards find him, xxi. 9.) when these events befel, viz. the preaching &c. at Samaria, and the conversion of the Eunuch.—In the next sentence, ἐκείνων (i. e. the Apostles) οὐκ ἐξήσαν φανερωθῆναι τοῖς (i. e. Philip the deacon and others) ἐλθεῖν καὶ ἐκείνους (the Apostles) δοτερίσαι: "should come after," or rather, "should be lacking, be behindhand, not be forthcoming (at the time):" but Cat. καὶ ἐκείνους ἐτέρους, "and those (the Apostles) otherwise."—The modern text, after "next to Stephen," proceeds thus: "Wherefore also, when baptizing, he did not impart the Spirit to the baptized, for neither had he authority to do so, since the gift belonged only to the Twelve. But observe; those went not forth; it was Provisionally ordered that these should go forth, οὐ καὶ δοτέρουν τῆς χάριτος διὰ τὸ μὴν λαβεῖν Πν. "A., who were deficient in the grace because they had not yet received the Holy Ghost. For they received power, &c. Consequently, this was the prerogative of the Apostles."

not forth: it was Providentially ordered that these should go forth and those be lacking, because of the Holy Ghost: for they had received power to work miracles, but not also to impart the Spirit to others: this was the prerogative of the Apostles. And observe (how they sent) the chief ones: not any others, but Peter [and John<sup>o</sup>]. And when Simon, it says, saw that through laying on of the Apostles' hands the Holy Ghost was given. He would not have said, And having seen<sup>o</sup>, unless there had been some sensible manifestation. [Then laid they their hands on them, etc.] Just as Paul also did, when they spake with tongues. Observe the execrable conduct of Simon. He offered money, with what object? And yet he did not see Peter doing this for money. And it was not of ignorance that he acted thus; it was because he would tempt them, because he wished to get matter of accusation against them. And therefore also Peter says, Thou hast no part nor lot in this matter, for thine heart is not right before God, [because thou hast thought, etc.] Once more, he brings to light what was in the thoughts, because Simon thought to escape detection. Repent therefore of this thy wickedness, and pray God, if perhaps the thought of thine heart may be forgiven thee. For I perceive that thou art in the gall of bitterness, and in the bond of iniquity. Then answered Simon, and said, Pray ye to the Lord for me, that none of these things which ye have spoken come upon me. Even this<sup>p</sup> he did only formally, as words of course, when he ought to have wept and mourned as a penitent. If perchance it may be forgiven thee. Not as though it would not have been pardoned, had he wept, but this is the manner of the Prophets also, to 'denounce absolutely, and not to say, 'Howbeit, if thou do this, thy sin shall be forgiven,' but that in any wise the punishment shall take effect.

<sup>1</sup> What follows, to the end of the Exposition, has by some accident fallen into strange confusion. In the Translation we have endeavoured to restore the proper order. In the first place it should be observed, that the portion beginning Οἱ μὲν διαμαρτυρούμενοι, p. 148. D. Ben. and ending at ὅτε πρῶτον ἐπίστευσαν, p. 149. A. consisting of about 20 lines, is interchanged with the portion of about 25 lines, beginning Δεδν οὖν τούτων, and ending ἐκεῖ τοῦ ἀποστόλου, p. 149. C. These being restored to their proper order, which is evident from the contents of the two portions, we have, to the end of the Recapitulation, two portions, dividing at οὐκ ἴσχυον ἐλεῖν τοὺς ἀποστόλους (ἐξίστατο), p. 148. B. the former beginning with the exposition of

v. 4. the second with v. 7. and both ending at v. 24. These, it may be supposed, are two several and successive expositions. But it will be seen on comparing them, that each in itself is often abrupt and incomplete, and that their parts fit into each other in a way which can hardly be accidental. It may also be remarked, that the length of each is the same; each containing about 46 lines. We have marked the order of the Mss. and Edd. by the letters a, b, prefixed to the several parts.

he plays the hypocrite, just as did the magicians, who said, This is the finger of God. And indeed that he might not be driven away again, therefore he continued with Philip, and did not part from him. [And when the Apostles which were at Jerusalem, etc.] See how many things are brought about by God's Providence through the death of Stephen! (a) But they, it says, having come down, prayed for them that they might receive the Holy Ghost: for as yet He was fallen upon none of them. Then laid they their hands upon them, and they received the Holy Ghost. Seest thou that it was not to be done in any ordinary manner, but it needed great power to give the Holy Ghost? For it is not all one, to obtain remission of sins, and to receive such a power. (b) By degrees it is, that these receive the gift. It was a twofold sign: both the giving to those, and the not giving to this man*. Whereas then this man ought, on the contrary, to have asked to receive the Holy Ghost, he, because he cared not for this, asks power to give It to others. And yet those received not this power to give: but this man wished to be more illustrious than Philip, he being among the disciples! (a) He offered them money. What? had he seen the others doing this? had he seen Philip? Did he imagine they did not know with what mind he came to them? (b) Thy money with thee to perdition: since thou hast not used it as it ought to be used. These are not words of imprecation, but of chastisement. To thee, he says, be it: (to thee) being such. As if one should say, Let it perish along with thy purpose. Hast thou so mean conceptions of the gift of God, that thou hast imagined it to be altogether a thing of man? It is not this. (a) Wherefore also Peter well calls the affair a gift: Thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money. Dost thou observe how on all occasions they are clean from money? For thine heart is not right in the sight of God. Dost thou see how he does all of malice? To be simple, however, was the thing needed. (b) For had it been done with simplicity†, he would have even welcomed

But otherwise he did not punish him: that faith may not thereafter be of compulsion; that the matter may not seem to be carried ruthlessly; that he may introduce the subject of repentance: or also, because it suffices for correction to have convicted him, to have told him what was in his heart, to have brought him to confess himself<sup>1</sup> overcome. twice said of Simon. Perhaps the passage may be restored somewhat thus: "Seeing his miracles, he was amazed, and came over. He thought to escape detection, he thought the thing was an art: but when he had not power to resist, he plays the hypocrite, as the magicians did, who said, This is the finger of God. Having seen the Apostles, (hence the reading ἰδεῖν τ. ἀπ.) how by laying on of hands, &c.; again he thought it was an art, he thought to purchase it with money: but when he was not able to defeat the Apostles, (as it was said above, "he wished to get matter of accusation against them,") again he plays the hypocrite, and says, Pray ye for me, &c."—Edd. from E. "Seeing signs wrought he was amazed, shewing that all was a lie (on his part). It is not said, Προσῆλθεν, but, Ἐξίστατο. And why did he not do the former at once? He thought to be able, &c. ἐπειδὴ δὲ οὐκ ἴσχυσε λαβεῖν τ. ἀπ., προσῆλθεν."

simplicity: but he was struck with dismay, first by the ACTS VIII. 22-25. former circumstance, <sup>1</sup> that he was overcome by the miracles, <sup>2</sup> and secondly by this, that his thoughts are made manifest. <sup>3</sup> Therefore he now takes himself a long way off, to Rome, <sup>4</sup> thinking the Apostle would not soon come there.

And they, when they had testified, and preached the word v. 25. of the Lord, returned to Jerusalem. Testified, probably because of him (Simon), that they may not be deceived; that thenceforth they may be safe. Having preached, it says, the word of the Lord, they returned to Jerusalem. Why do they go thither again where was the tyranny of the bad, where were those most bent upon killing them? Just as generals do in wars, they occupy that part of the scene of war which is most distressed. And preached the Gospel in many villages of the Samaritans. Observe them again, how they do not <sup>5</sup> of set purpose come to Samaria, but driven by stress of per- <sup>6</sup> secution, just as it was in the case of Christ; and how when the Apostles go thither, it is to men now believers, no longer Samaritans. But when the Apostles, it says, which were at Jerusalem heard this, they sent unto them Peter and John. Sent them, again, to rid them of magic. And<sup>7</sup> besides, <sup>8</sup> (the Lord) had given them a pattern at the time when the Samaritans believed. And in many villages, it says, of the Samaritans, they preached the Gospel. Observe how actively employed even their journeys were, how they do nothing without a purpose.

Such travels should we also make. And why do I speak of travels? Many possess villages and lands, and give themselves no concern, nor make any account of this. That baths may be provided, their revenues increased, courts and buildings erected, for this they take plenty of pains: but for the husbandry of souls, not so. When you see thorns—answer me—you cut them up, you burn, you utterly destroy them, to rid your land of the hurt thence arising. And seest thou the labourers themselves overrun with thorns, and dost by good offices, by gentleness, by <sup>3</sup> courting him, by all other means. Market-places, indeed, and baths, the most do provide; but no Churches: nay, sooner every thing than this! Wherefore I beseech and implore, as a favour I entreat, yea as a law I lay it down, that there be no estate to be seen destitute of a Church<sup>2</sup>. Tell not me, There is one hard by; there is one in the neighbouring properties: the expense is great, the income not great. If thou have anything to expend upon the poor, expend it there: better

* In St. Chrysostom's time, little had been done for the conversion and instruction of the peasantry: hence in the latter half of the fourth century paganus came to be as synonymous with 'heathen.' Even Christian proprietors neglected their duty in this regard, while they improved their properties, and swelled their revenues by great oppression of their tenants and labourers: see Hom. in Matt. xliii. lxi. and at the same time often connived at the practice of the old idolatries, for the sake of the dues accruing to them from the Temples which still remained. Thus Zeno of Verona, Sermon. xv. p. 120. complains: "In prædiis vestris fumantia undique sola fana non noetis, quæ, si vera dicenda sunt, dissimulanda subtiliter custoditis. Jus templorum ne quis vobis eripiat, quotidie litigatis." The Christianity which was outwardly professed in the country parts was often for want of Churches and Clergy little more than nominal: and the heathen orator Libanius, in his Oratio pro Templis, addressed to the Emperor Theodosius, perhaps did not greatly exaggerate in the following description: "When you are told, that through this proceeding on your part (viz. the destruction of the Temples and suppression of the sacrifices) many are become Christians, you must not forget to distinguish between show and reality. They are not a whit changed from what they were before: they only say they are so. They resort indeed to the public acts of religion, and mingle themselves with the general body of Christians. But when they have made a show of praying, they invoke either none, or the Gods."—Moreover, the country clergy were often themselves ill-taught and needing instruction. Thus Hom. in Col. (t. xi. p. 392.) delivered at Constantinople Chrys. says: "How much instruction is needed by your brethren in the country, and by their teachers (καὶ τοὺς ἐκείνων διδασκάλους)!" Which perhaps was the result of a law passed A.D. 398. Cod. Theodos. xvi. tit. 2. l. 33. which enacted, that the clergy for the Churches founded on estates, or in villages, should be ordained from no other estate or village, but that to which the Church pertained: and of these a certain number, at the discretion of the bishop, according to the extent of the village, &c.—On the other hand, Chrys. 'on the Statues,' Or, xix. t. ii. p. 189. dwells with much delight on the virtues and patriarchal simplicity of the rural clergy in Syria, and the Christian attainments of their people.

there than here. Maintain a Teacher, maintain a Deacon, and a sacerdotal body complete. As by a bride, whether a wife whom thou takest, or a daughter whom thou givest in marriage<sup>a</sup>, so act by the Church: give her a dowry. So shall thy estate be filled with blessing. For what shall not be there of all that is good? Is it a small thing, tell me, that thy wine-press should be blessed<sup>b</sup>; a small thing, tell me, that of thy fruits God is the first to taste, and that the first-fruits are there (with Him)? And then even for the peace of the labouring people this is profitable. Then as one whom they must respect, there will be the presbyter among them, and this will contribute to the security of the estate. There will be constant prayers there through thee, 'hymns and Communions through thee; the Oblation on each Lord's Day. For only consider what a praise it will be, that, whereas others have built splendid tombs, to have it said hereafter, 'Such an one built this,' thou hast reared Churches! Bethink thee that even until the coming of Christ thou shalt have thy reward, who hast reared up the altars of God.

Suppose an Emperor had ordered thee to build an house [5.] that he might lodge there, wouldest thou not have done every thing to please him? And here now it is a palace of Christ, the Church which thou buildest. Look not at the cost, but calculate the profit. Thy people yonder cultivate thy field: cultivate thou their souls: they bring to thee thy fruits, raise thou them to heaven. He that makes the beginning is the cause of all the rest: and thou wilt be the cause that the people are<sup>a</sup> brought under Christian teaching: both there, and in the neighbouring estates. but make the peasants less hardy, your taverns give them a taste for luxury, and yet you provide these for credit's sake. Your markets and <sup>1</sup>fairs, on the other hand, promote<sup>4</sup> covetousness. But think now what a thing it would be to see a presbyter, the moving picture of Abraham, gray-headed, girded up, digging and working with his own hands? What more pleasant than such a field! There virtue thrives. No intemperance there, nay, it is driven away: no drunkenness and wantonness, nay, it is cast out: no vanity, nay, it is extinguished. All benevolent tempers shine out the brighter through the simplicity of manners. How pleasant to go forth and enter into the House of God, and to know that one built it himself: to fling himself on his back in his litter, and<sup>5</sup> after the bodily benefit of his pleasant airing, be present both at the evening and the morning hymns, have the priest as a guest at his table, in associating with him enjoy his benediction, see others also coming thither! This is a wall for his field, this its security. This is the field of Gen. 27, which it is said, The smell of a full field which the Lord hath blessed. If, even without this, the country is pleasant, the scope of the description. Erasmus, 'et quiescere in villa securum, et habere deambulationem servientem corpori,' "to sleep securely in his villa, and to take a walk which is good for the body." Neander simply, 'und sich niederzuwerfen,' "to prostrate himself," (viz. on entering the Church) —overlooking both ἔπτιον and αἰώραν. Of the Mss., A., for καὶ βῆσαι κ. τ. λ. substitutes, καὶ μετὰ τροφὴν σῶμ. "and after taking food for the body." C. ex corr. gives ἑώραν for αἰώραν, F. ὄραν, Sav. marg. On the contrary, it is both needless and unsuitable, for the repast is mentioned afterwards.—The "hymns" are the ψαλμοὶ ἐπιλύχνιος s. λυχνικοὶ, ad incensum lucernæ, which was Psalm 141. ψαλμὸς ἑωθινός, Psalm 63. St. Chrysost. in Psalm 140. and Constit. Apost. ii. 59. viii. 37.

because it is so quiet, so free from distraction of business, what will it not be when this is added to it? The country with a Church is like the Paradise of God. No clamour there, no turmoil, no enemies at variance, no heresies: there you shall see all friends, holding the same doctrines in common. The very quiet shall lead thee to higher views, and receiving thee thus prepared by philosophy, the presbyter shall give thee an excellent cure. For here, whatever we may speak, the noise of the market drives it all out: but there, what thou shalt hear, thou wilt keep fixed in thy mind. Thou wilt be quite another man in the country through him: and moreover to the people there he will be director, he will watch over them both by his presence and by his influence in forming their manners. And what, I ask, would be the cost? Make for a beginning a small house<sup>1</sup> to<sup>1</sup> ἐν serve as temple. Thy successor will build a porch, his τῆς successor will make other additions, and the whole shall be ναοῦ. put to thy account. Thou givest little, and receivest the reward for the whole. At any rate, make a beginning: lay a foundation. Exhort one another, vie one with another in this matter. But now, where there is straw and grain and such like to be stored, you make no difficulty of building: but for a place where the fruits of souls may be gathered in, we bestow not a thought; and the people are forced to go miles and miles, and to make long journeys, that they may get to Church! Think, how good it is, when with all quietness the priest presents himself in the Church, that he may draw near unto God, and say prayers for the village, day by day, and for its owner! Say, is it a small matter, that even in the Holy Oblations evermore thy name is included in the prayers, and that for the village day by day prayers are made unto God?—How greatly this profits thee for all else! It chances<sup>1</sup> that certain (great) persons dwell in the neighbourhood, and have overseers: now to thee, being poor, one of them will not deign even to pay a visit: but the presbyter, it is likely, he will invite, and make him sit at his table. How much good results from this! The village will in the first place be free from all evil suspicion. None will charge it with murder, with theft: none will suspect any thing of the kind.—They have also another comfort, if sickness befall, if death.—Then again the friendships formed there by people as they go side by side (to and from the Church) are not struck up at random and promiscuously: and the meetings there are far more pleasant than those which take place in marts and fairs. The people themselves also will be more respectable, because of their presbyter. How is it you hear that Jerusalem was had in honour in the old times above all other cities? Why was this? Because of the then prevailing religion. Therefore it is that where God is honoured, there is nothing evil: as, on the contrary, where He is not honoured, there is nothing good. It will be great security both with God and with men. Only, I beseech you, that ye be not remiss: only may you put your hand to this work. For if he who brings out the precious from the vile, shall be as the mouth of God; he who benefits and recovers so many souls, both that now are and that shall be even until the coming of Christ, what favour shall not that person reap from God! Raise thou a garrison against the devil: for that is what the Church is. Thence as from head-quarters let the hands go forth to work: first let the people hold them up for prayers, and then go their way to work. So shall there be vigour of body; so shall the tillage be abundant; so shall all evil be kept aloof. It is not possible to represent in words the pleasure thence arising, until it be realized. Look not to this, that it brings in no revenue: if<sup>a</sup> thou do it at all in this spirit, then do it not at all; if thou account not the revenue thou gettest thence greater than from the whole estate beside; if thou be your people; no troublesome inquisition will be held, no fine or penalty levied on your estate." The v. l. λέγειν cannot be the true reading, but something of this sort must be supplied: οὐ καὶ λέγουσιν αὐτῷ. It seems also that something is wanting between τινὰς

not thus affected, then let it alone; if thou do not account this work to stand thee more in stead than any work beside. What can be greater than this revenue, the gathering in of souls into the threshing-floor which is in heaven! Alas, that ye know not how much it is, to gain souls! Hear what Christ says to Peter, Feed My sheep. If, seeing the emperor's sheep, or herd of horses, by reason of having no fold or stable, exposed to depredation, thou wert to take them in hand, and build a fold or stables, or also provide a shepherd or herdsman to take charge of them, what would not the emperor do for thee in return? Now, thou gatherest the flock of Christ, and puttest a shepherd over them, and thinkest thou it is no great gain thou art earning? But, if for offending even one, a man shall incur so great a punishment, how can he that saves so many, ever be punished? What sin will he have thenceforth? for, though he have it, does not this blot it out? From the punishment threatened to him that offends, learn the reward of him that saves. Were not the salvation of even one soul a matter of great importance, to offend would not move God to so great anger. Knowing these things, let us apply ourselves forthwith to this spiritual work. And let each invite me, and we will together help to the best of our ability. If there be three joint-owners, let them do it by each bearing his part: if but one, he will induce the others also that are near. Only be earnest to effect this, I beseech you, that in every way being well-pleasing unto God, we may attain unto the eternal blessings, by the grace and mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ, with Whom to the Father and the Holy Ghost together be glory, dominion, and honour, now and ever, world without end. Amen.

ACTS viii. 26, 27.

And the Angel of the Lord spake unto Philip, saying, Arise, and go toward the south unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza, which is desert. And he arose and went.

IT seems to me, this<sup>a</sup> (Philip) was one of the seven: for from Jerusalem he would not have gone southwards, but to the north; but from Samaria it was towards the south. The same is desert: so that there is no fear of an attack from the Jews. And he did not ask, Wherefore? but arose v.27.28. and went. And, behold, it says, a man of Ethiopia, an eunuch of great authority under Candace queen of the Ethiopians, who had the charge of all her treasure, and had come to Jerusalem for to worship, was returning, and sitting in his chariot read Esaias the prophet. High encomiums for the man, that he, residing in Ethiopia and beset with so much business, and when there was no festival going on, and living in that superstitious city, came to Jerusalem for to worship. Great also is his studiousness, v.29-31. that even sitting in his chariot he read<sup>b</sup>. And, it says, the

<sup>a</sup> So all the Mss. and the Catena; except E. which having already made Chrys. affirm that Philip was one of the seven, supra, p. 254, and note m, gives a different turn to this passage. "It seems to me, that he received this command while in Samaria: because from Jerusalem one does not go southward, but to the north: but from Samaria it is to the south." An unnecessary comment; for it would hardly occur to any reader of the Acts to suppose that Philip had returned to Jerusalem.

<sup>b</sup> "Behold, an eunuch, (comp. p. 271, note n.) a barbarian—both circumstances calculated to make him indisposed to study—add to this, his dignified station and opulence: the very circumstance of his being on a journey, and riding in a chariot: for to a person travelling in this way, it is not easy to attend to reading, but on the contrary very troublesome: yet his strong desire

Spirit said unto Philip, Go near, and join thyself to this chariot. And Philip ran thither to him, and heard him reading the prophet Esaias, and said, Understandest thou what thou readest? And he said, How can I, except some man should guide me? Observe again his piety; that though he did not understand, he read, and then after reading, examines. And he desired Philip that he would come up and sit with him. The place of the Scripture which he read was this, He was led as a sheep to the slaughter; and like a lamb dumb before his shearer, so opened He not His mouth: in His humiliation His judgment was taken away: and who shall declare His generation? for His life is taken from the earth. And the eunuch answered Philip, and said, I pray thee, of whom speaketh the prophet this? of himself, or of some other man? Then Philip opened his mouth, and began at the same Scripture, and preached unto him Jesus. Observe how it is Providentially ordered. First he reads, and does not understand: then he reads the very text, in which was the Passion, and the Resurrection, and the Gift. And as they went on their way, they came unto a certain water: and the eunuch said, See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized? Mark the eager desire, mark the exact knowledge. And he commanded the chariot to stand still: and they went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him. And when they were come up out of the water, the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip, that the eunuch saw him no more: and he went on his way rejoicing. But why did the Spirit of the Lord bear him away? (Hereby) the occurrence was shewn to be more wonderful. Even then, the eunuch did not know him. Consequently this was done, that Philip and earnestness set aside all these hindrances, &c." Hom. in Gen. xxxv. §. 1. Throughout the exposition of the history of the eunuch there given, (t. iv. p. 350—352.) he is called a barbarian: so in the tenth of the "Eleven Homilies," §. 5. t. xii. 393, 394. he is called a 'barbarian,' and 'alien,' ἀλλόφυλος, but also 'a Jew:' ἀλλ' οὐχ ὁ βάρβαρος τότε ἑκείνος ταῦτα εἶπε (viz. excuses for delaying baptism) καὶ ταῦτα Ἰουδαῖος ὢν κ. τ. λ. i. e. as Matthæi explains in l., 'a Jewish proselyte.'—Both expositions should be compared with this in the text.

° ἀκρίβειαν. Below, ὁρᾷς ὅτι τὰ δόγματα ἀπηρτισμένα εἶχε. The 37th verse (Philip's answer and the Eunuch's confession) seems to have been absent from St. Chrysostom's copy (unless indeed it is implied in the passage just cited). It is found in Laud's Gr. and Lat. copy of the Acts, part is cited by St. Irenæus, p. 196. and part by St. Cyprian, p. 318., but unknown to the other ancient authorities.

HOMIL. might afterwards be a subject of wonder to him<sup>d</sup>. For, XIX. it says, he went on his way rejoicing. But Philip was
 v. 40. found at Azotus: and passing through he preached in all the cities, till he came to Cæsarea. This (Philip, therefore) was one of the seven: for there in fact he is afterwards found, at Cæsarea. It was well and expedient therefore that the Spirit caught Philip away: else the eunuch would have desired to go with him<sup>e</sup>, and Philip would have grieved him by declining to comply with his request, the time being not yet come. (a) But<sup>f</sup> at the same time here was an encouraging assurance for them that they shall also prevail over the heathen: for<sup>g</sup> indeed<sup>h</sup> the high character of the (first) believers was enough to move them. If however the eunuch had stayed there, what fault could have been found? [But he knew him not]: for this is why it says, he went on his way rejoicing: so that had he known him, he would not have been (so) delighted.

Recapitulation.
 v. 26.

[And the Angel of the Lord, etc.] (b) See Angels assisting the preaching, and not themselves preaching, but calling these (to the work). But the wonderful nature of the occurrence is shewn also by this: that what of old was rare, and hardly done, here takes place with ease<sup>i</sup>, and see with what frequency! (c) An eunuch, it says, a man of great authority, under Candace queen of the Ethiopians. For there women bore rule of old, and this was the law among

v. 27.

Because he was to pass through other cities, and to preach the Gospel. Consequently this was done, &c. that he might not think what had happened to him was of man, but of God.”

<sup>e</sup> συναπελθεῖν (Ec. συμπαρελθεῖν) αὐτῷ. As there is no αὐτὸν, the meaning seems to be as above expressed, not, ‘would have desired Philip to go with him.’

Though if the eunuch had stayed behind in Judæa, who could have blamed him?—The modern text: “—sufficient to persuade the learners to be roused up themselves also to the same zeal.”

them. Philip did not yet know for whose sake he had come into the desert: (d) but<sup>1</sup> what was there to hinder his learning all (these particulars) accurately, while in the chariot? [Was reading the prophet Esaias.] For the road was desert, and there was no display in the matter. Observe also at what time: in the most violent heat (of the day). (e) [And the Spirit said unto him.] Not now the Angel<sup>k</sup>, v. 29. but the Spirit urges him. Why is this? Then, the vision took place, in grosser form, through the Angel, for this is for them that are more of the body, but the Spirit is for the more spiritual. And how did He speak to him? Of course, suggested it to him. Why does not the Angel appear to the other, and bring him to Philip? Because it is likely he would not have been persuaded, but rather terrified. Observe the wisdom of Philip: he did not accuse him, not say, 'I know these things exactly:' did not pay court to him, and say, 'Blessed art thou that redest.' But mark his speech, how far it is from harshness alike and from adulation; the speech rather of a kind and friendly man. [Understandest thou what thou redest?] For it was needful that he should himself ask, himself have a longing desire. He plainly intimates, that he knows that the other knew nothing: and says, Understandest thou what thou redest? at the same time he shews him that great was the treasure that lay therein. It [2.] tells well also, that the eunuch looked not to the<sup>1</sup> outward appearance (of the man), said not, 'Who art thou?' did not chide, not give himself airs, not say that he did know. On the contrary, he confesses his ignorance; wherefore also he learns. He shews his hurt to the physician: sees at a glance, that he both knows the matter, and is willing to teach. Look<sup>1</sup> how free he is from haughtiness: the outward appearance announced nothing splendid. So desirous was he of learning, and gave heed to his words: and that saying, He that seeketh, findeth, was fulfilled in him. And, it says, he besought Philip, that he would come up and sit with him. Do you mark the eagerness, the longing desire? But should any say he ought to have waited for Philip (to speak), (the answer is,) he does not know what is the matter: he could not in the least tell what the other was going to say to him, but supposed merely that he was about to receive some (lesson of) prophecy. And moreover this was more respectful, that he did not draw him into his chariot, but besought him. And Philip, we have read, ran to him, and heard him reading: even the fact of his running, shewed<sup>2</sup> that he wished to say (something). And the place, it says, of the Scripture which he read was this: As a sheep He was led to the slaughter. And this circumstance, also, is a token of his<sup>3</sup> elevated mind, that he had in hand this prophet, who is more sublime than all others. Philip does not relate matters to him just as it might happen, but quietly: nay, does not say anything until he is questioned. Both in the former instance he prayed him, and so he does now, saying, I pray thee, of whom speaketh the prophet this? That<sup>4</sup> he should

Ben. and similarly Erasm. as if the meaning were, "the eunuch saw there was no pride in Philip, for he had no splendid clothing." But it is the eunuch in whom this (τὸ ἄνθρωπον) is praised, (see below, §. 4. init.) that he did not disdain Philip for the meanness of his appearance: comp. Hom. in Gen. xxxv. §. 2. "For when the Apostle (supra p. 254. note m.) had said, Knowest thou, and came up to him in mean attire (μετὰ ἐντελοῦς σχήματος), the eunuch did not take it amiss, was not indignant, did not think himself insulted . . . but he, the man in great authority, the barbarian, the man riding in a chariot, besought him, the person of mean appearance, who might for his dress have easily been despised, to come up and sit with him, &c." And infra note u.

at all know either that the Prophets speak in different ways Acts VIII. 31—40. about different persons, or that they speak of themselves in another person—the question betokens a very thoughtful mind. Let us be put to shame, both poor and rich, by this eunuch. Then, it says, they came to a certain water, and he said, Lo, here is water. Again, of his own accord he requests, saying, What doth hinder me to be baptized? And see again his modesty: he does not say, Baptize me, neither does he hold his peace; but he utters somewhat midway betwixt strong desire and reverent fear, saying, What doth hinder me? Do you observe that he has the doctrines (of faith) perfect? For indeed the Prophet had the whole, Incarnation, Passion, Resurrection, Ascension, Judgment to come. And if he shews exceeding earnestness of desire, do not marvel. Be ashamed, all ye as many as are unbaptized. And, it says, he commanded the chariot to stand still. He spoke, and gave the order at the same moment, before hearing (Philip's answer). And when they were come up out of the water, the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip: in order that the occurrence might be shewn to be of God; that he might not consider it to be merely man. And he went, it says, on his way rejoicing. This hints, that he would have been grieved, had he known: for the greatness of his joy, having had the Spirit also vouchsafed to him, he did not even see things present.—[But Philip] was found at Azotus. Great was the gain to Philip also:—that which he heard concerning the Prophets, concerning Habakkuk, concerning Ezekiel, and the rest, he saw done in his own person. Thence it appears that he went a long distance, seeing he was found at Azotus. (The Spirit) set him there, where he was thenceforth to preach: [And passing through, he preached in all the cities, until he came to Cæsarea.]

And Saul, yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, went unto the high priest, and desired of him letters to Damascus to the synagogues, that if he found any of this way, whether they were men or

HOMIL. women, he might bring them bound unto Jerusalem. He XIX. fitly mentions Paul's zeal, and shews that in the very midst of his zeal he is drawn. ! [Yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter,] and not yet sated with the murder of Stephen, he was not yet glutted with the persecution of the Church, and the dispersion. Lo, this was fulfilled John 16, which was spoken by Christ, that they which kill you shall 2. think they offer worship to God. He then in this wise did it, not as the Jews: God forbid! For that he did it through zeal, is manifest from his going abroad even to strange cities:
 whereas they would not have cared even for those in Jerusalem: they were for one thing only, to enjoy honour. But why went he to Damascus? It was a great city, a royal city: he was afraid lest that should be preoccupied. And observe his strong desire and ardour, (and) how strictly according to the Law he went to work: he goes not to the governor, but to the priest. That if he found any of this way: for so the believers were called, probably because of their taking the direct way that leads to heaven. And why did he not receive authority to have them punished there, but brings them to Jerusalem? He did these things here with more authority. And mark on what a peril he casts himself.
 He° was not afraid lest he should take any harm, but (yet) he took others also with him, that if, it says, he found any of this way, whether they were men or women—O, the ruthlessness!—he might bring them bound. By this journey of his, he wished to shew them all (how he would act): so far were they from being earnest in this matter. Observe him also casting (people) into prison before this. The others therefore did not prevail: but this man did prevail, by reason of ° Edd. "on what danger casting himself, still even so he is afraid lest he should suffer some harm. This is the reason why he takes others with him, probably to rid himself of his fear: or also, because they were many against whom he was going, he takes many, in order that the more boldly, whosoever he should find, both men and women, &c." Just the opposite to C.'s meaning: viz. "It is not to be supposed, because he took many with him, that he had any fears for himself: he was above all such regards. The fact is, he wished to shew them all (both the Jews at Jerusalem, and the companions of his journey,) how they ought to act:" διὰ τῆς ὁδοῦ πᾶσιν αὐτοῖς δεῖξαι ἐβόλητο. C. however has πᾶσιν αὐτοῦ, N. πᾶσιν αὐτοῖς, meaning: "by means of his journey, he wished to shew them (the Christians bound) to all." Perhaps the true reading is αὐτοῦ τῆς ποδομπλάς, or the like. E. D. F. Edd. "Especially as by means of the journey he wished to shew them all (πᾶσιν αὐτοῖς), that all depended on him (αὐτοῦ τὸ πᾶν ἔν)." .

his ardent mind. And as he journeyed, he came near <sup>Acts</sup> <sup>IX.</sup> <sup>1—5.</sup> <sup>v. 3, 4.</sup> Damascus: and suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven: and he fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me? Why not in Jerusalem? why not in Damascus? That [3.] there might be no opening for different persons to relate the occurrence in different ways, but that he alone should be the 'authentic narrator, he that<sup>p</sup> went for this purpose.<sup>1</sup> <sup>ἀξίω-</sup> In fact, he says this, [both in his oration on the stairs,] and <sup>πιστος</sup> when pleading before Agrippa. [Fell to the earth]: for <sup>ch. 22, 6:</sup> <sup>26, 12.</sup> excess of light is wont to shock, because the eyes have their measure: it is said also that excess of sound makes people deaf and <sup>2</sup>stunned (as in a fit.) But<sup>1</sup> him it only blinded,<sup>2</sup> <sup>ἀπο-</sup> and extinguished his passion by fear, so that he should <sup>πλῆγας</sup> hear what was spoken. Saul, Saul, saith He, why persecutest thou Me? And He tells him nothing: does not say, Believe, nor anything whatever of the kind: but expostulates with him, all but saying, What wrong, great or small, hast thou suffered from Me, that thou doest these things? And he <sup>v. 5.</sup> said, Who art Thou, Lord? thus in the first place confessing himself His servant. And the Lord said, I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest: think not thy warring is with men<sup>r</sup>. And

<sup>p</sup> ὁ δὲ διὰ τοῦτο ἐπιών: i. e. who would have a right to be believed, because it was known that he left Jerusalem for the purpose of persecuting. Had it taken place in Jerusalem or in Damascus, some would have given one account of the matter, some another—as, in the case of our Lord, when the voice came to Him from heaven at Jerusalem, "some said it thundered, some that an Angel spake to Him," (so Chrys. explains below, p. 275.)—but, happening in the way it did, the person most interested in it, and who by this very thing was caused to take so momentous a step, was the authentic narrator; i. e. the story was to come from him, as the only competent authority: ἀλλ' αὐτὸς ἀξιώπιστος ἦν διηγουμένος (so Cat.; C., ἦν διηγῆσασθαι: the other Mss. ἦ διηγούμενος) ὁ διὰ τοῦτο ἐπιών. Infra, p. 275, οὗτος δὲ ἀξιώπιστος ἦν ἀπαγγέλλων μᾶλλον τὰ ἑαυτοῦ.—In the next sentence, Τοῦτο γοῦν λέγει, καὶ πρὸς Ἀγρίππαν ἀπολογούμενος, something seems wanting before καὶ, as supplied in the translation: but also both before and after these words: e. g. [For the men which were with him, heard not the voice, and were amazed and overpowered.] In fact, he says this [in his oration on the stairs, They heard not the voice of Him that spake to me], and when pleading before Agrippa, [he says, And when we were all fallen to the ground, I heard a voice, etc.]

<sup>r</sup> The remainder of the verse and the first part of v. 6. to πρὸς αὐτὸν, were absent from Chrysostom's copy, (and Cat. (Ec. Theoph.) as from Codd. A. B. C. (of New Test.) and Laund's Gr. and Lat. of Acts: but the last have the clause, σκληρὸν σοὶ π. κ. λ. after διώκεις, v. 4. St. Hil. omits the clause durum est, etc. but has, tremens et pavens, etc.—"The voice of Paul:" Didymus in Cat. gives this as Chrysostom's solution of the seeming contradiction between taken. And the wonder of it is, the enemies and foes themselves brought him in, in the sight of all! And for three days <sup>Mat. 13,</sup> he neither did eat nor drink, being blinded. What could equal <sup>29.</sup> this? To compensate the discouragement in the matter of Stephen, here is encouragement, in the bringing in of Paul: though that sadness had its consolation in the fact of Stephen's making such an end, yet it also received this further consolation: moreover, the bringing in of the villages of the Samaritans afforded very great comfort.—But why did this take place not at the very first, but after these things?

 That it might be shewn that Christ was indeed risen. This furious assailant of Christ, the man who would not believe in His death and resurrection, the persecutor of His disciples, how should this man have become a believer, had xxii. 9. "In the first narrative, they heard Paul's voice, saying, Who art

<sup>1</sup> οὕτω καὶ τοὺς μαθητὰς ἐκάλεσεν ἐκ

 As here, there is an interval between the conversion of Saul, and Christ's announcement of the purpose for which he was called, (which in Acts xxvi.
 15, 16. are put together as if all was said at the same time,) so in the case of the disciples, Andrew, John, and Simon, there was a first call, related in John i.; then after a while, Christ called them a second time, (see Hom. in Matt. xiv. §. 2.) namely, to be fishers of men, Matt. iv. In both cases there was an interval, during which he and they were prepared for the further revelation of His will concerning them. The mod. t. (E. Edd.)

 omits this clause, and substitutes, καὶ

not the power of His resurrection been great indeed? Be it so, that the other Apostles favoured (His pretensions): what say you to this man? Why then not immediately after His resurrection? That his hostility might be more clearly shewn as open war. The man who is so frantic as even to shed blood and cast men into prisons, all at once believes! It was not enough that he had never been in Christ's company: the believers must be warred upon by him with vehement hostility: he left to none the possibility of going beyond him in fury: none of them all could be so violent. But when he was blinded<sup>a</sup>, then he saw the proofs of His sovereignty and lovingkindness: then he answers, [Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?] that none may say that he played the hypocrite, he that was even eager for blood, and went to the priests, and flung himself upon such dangers, in persecuting and bringing to punishment even them that were in foreign parts—under these circumstances he now acknowledges His sovereignty. And why was he shone upon by that light not within the city, but before it? The many would not have believed, since even there (at Jerusalem) when the people heard the voice which came from above, they said that it <sup>John 12,</sup> thundered; but this man was authority enough in reporting <sup>29.</sup> supra, what was his own affair. And bound he was brought in, <sup>note p.</sup> though not with bonds upon him: and they drew him, who had expected to draw the others. And he eat not, neither drank: he condemned himself for the past, he confessed, prayed, besought God. nothing of the barbarian about them, meeting in the public place, I do not say an unknown stranger, but one whom they know, would be in no great hurry to give him a seat beside him (in their carriage), how came this man to condescend so much to a perfect stranger—for I will not cease to insist upon this—a stranger, I say, one whom he had never seen, a mean-looking person, apt to be despised for his appearance, as to bid him mount and sit beside him? Yet this he did, and to his tongue committed his salvation, and endured to put himself in the position of a learner: yea, beseeches, intreats, supplicates, saying, I pray thee, of whom saith the Prophet this? and receives with profound attention what he says. And not only so, but having received, he was not remiss, did not put off, did not say, 'Let me get back to my own country, let me see my friends, my family, my kinsfolk'—which is what many Christians say now-a-days when called to Baptism: 'let me get to my country, let me see my wife, let me see my children with my other kinsfolk: with them present, and making holiday with me, so will I enjoy the benefit of Baptism, so partake of the Grace.' But not these words spake he, the barbarian: Jew as he was, and trained to make strict account of places, especially with (the Law) ever sounding in his ears the duty of observing the Place, inasmuch that he had gone a long journey to Jerusalem, on purpose that he might worship in the place which God commanded: and behold, all at once casting away all that he had been used to in this regard, and relinquishing this strict observance of place, no sooner is the discourse finished, and he sees a fountain by the road-side, than he says, See, here is water, what doth hinder me to be baptized?

* The letters (a) (b) denote the order of the two parts in Mss. and Edd.

† διὰ τὸ ἀσθενὲς ἔτι: Edd. give this to the preceding sentence, and then: Οὐδὲ πρότερον οὕτως ἢν εὐκολον, ὥς ὅτε δ' προφήτης αὐτὸν κατήχησεν: "nor was it so easy before, as (it was) when the Prophet had catechized him:" which is irrelevant to the question: for Philip might have found him engaged in the same study then as afterwards. The old text has: οὐκ ἦν εὐκολος, δ' προφήτης γὰρ αὐτὸν κατήχησεν, but A. rightly omits γὰρ. Something is wanting; e. g. either, "until Philip catechized him," or, rather, "but yet the Prophet catechized him." What follows is much confused in the Mss. By "the prophecy itself" Chrys. probably means more than the two verses given in the Acts, viz. Isai. liii. 7-12.—"It is likely he had heard that He had been crucified," so C. D. F. (i. e. as appears further on, the eunuch when at Jerusalem had heard of the Crucifixion, had seen the rent in the rocks, &c. another reason why it was fit that he should have first visited Jerusalem:) but B., "Perhaps he had not heard:" and E. Edd., "Hence he learnt." After "taken from the earth," C. alone has, καὶ τὰ ἄλλα δ' (sic) ἀμαρτίαν οὐκ ἐποίησεν, the others, ὅτι ἄμ. οὐκ ἐπ. after which Savile alone adds, "nor was guile found in His mouth." After ἐσταυρώθη something is wanting, e. g. νῦν δὲ ἔμαθεν or κατήχηθη. In καὶ τὰ ἄλλα there seems to be a reference to the sequel in "the prophecy itself," viz. "and the rest which may be read in Isaiah, as that He did no sin, &c."—A., as usual, omits the whole passage: E. refashions it thus: "Hence he learnt that He was crucified, that His life is taken away from the earth, that He did no sin, that He prevailed to save others also, that His generation is not to be declared, that the rocks were rent, that the veil was torn, that dead men were raised from the tombs: or rather, all these things Philip told him, &c." so Edd.

HOMIL. easy; (but yet the Prophet) catechized him. For even XIX now, if any of you would apply himself to the study of the Prophets, he would need no miracles. And, if you please, v. 22. 23. let us take in hand the prophecy itself. He was led as a sheep to the slaughter; and like a lamb dumb before his shearer, so opened He not His mouth: in His humiliation His judgment was taken away: and who shall declare His generation? for His life is taken from the earth. It is likely he had heard that He was crucified, [and now he learns] that His life is taken away from the earth, and the rest: that He did no sin, nor deceit in His mouth: that He prevailed to save others also: [and] who He is, Whose generation is unutterable. It is likely he had seen the riven rocks there (on the spot), and (had heard) how the veil was rent, and how there was darkness, and so forth: and all these things Philip mentioned, merely taking his text from the Prophet. It is a great thing, this reading of the Scriptures! That was fulfilled which was spoken by

Deut. 6, Moses, Sitting, lying down, rising up, and walking, remember the Lord thy God. For the roads, especially when they are lonely, give us opportunity for reflection, there being none to disturb us. Both this man is on the road, and Paul on the road: howbeit the latter no man draws, but Christ alone. This was too great a work for the Apostles: and, greater still, in that, the Apostles being at Jerusalem, and no person of authority at Damascus, he nevertheless returned thence converted: yet those at Damascus knew that he did not come from Jerusalem converted, for he brought letters, that he might put the believers in bonds. Like a consummate Physician, when the fever was at its height, Christ brought help to him: for it was needful that he should be quelled in the midst of his frenzy. For then most of all would he be brought down, and condemn himself as one guilty of dreadful audacity. (a) For these things Paul 1 Tim. 1, deploras himself, saying, Howbeit for this cause I obtained 13. 16. mercy, that in me first Jesus Christ might shew all His longsuffering. Verily one has reason to admire this eunuch.

He did not see Christ, he saw no miracle: he beheld Jerusalem <sup>1</sup>standing yet entire: he believed Philip. How <sup>2</sup>came he to behave thus? His soul was <sup>3</sup>earnest. Yet the thief (on the cross) had seen miracles: the wise men had seen a star: but this man, nothing of the kind. So great a thing is the careful reading of the Scriptures! What of Paul then? did he not study the Law? But he, it seems to me, was specially reserved, for the purpose which I have already mentioned by anticipation, because Christ would fain draw to Himself the Jews by inducements from every quarter. For had they been in their right mind, nothing was so likely to do them good as this; for this, more than miracles and all else, was calculated to attract them: as<sup>a</sup>, on the other hand, nothing is so apt to prove a stumblingblock to men of duller minds. See then how, after the Apostle, we have God also doing miracles. They accused the Apostles after these [miracles of theirs]; they cast them into prison: see thereupon God doing the miracles. For instance, the bringing them out of prison, was His miracle: the bringing Philip, His miracle: the bringing Paul over, was His.—Observe in what way Paul is honoured, in what way the eunuch. There, Christ appears, probably because of his hardness, and because Ananias<sup>a</sup> would not (else) have been persuaded. Conversant with these wonders, let us shew ourselves worthy. But many in these times, even when they come to church, do not know what is read; whereas the eunuch, even 'in public and riding in his chariot, applied<sup>b</sup> himself to the reading of the Scriptures. Not so you: none takes the Bible in hand: nay, everything rather than the Bible.

Say, what are the Scriptures for? For as much as in you lies, it is all undone. What is the Church for? Tie up<sup>b</sup> the Bibles: perhaps the judgment would not be such,

<sup>a</sup> ὡς περ οὐδὲν οὕτω σκανδαλίζειν εἶθε τοὺς παχυτέρους: i. e. Saul's conversion would have weighed with the Jews εἰ γοῦν εἶχον, but it was a great stumbling-block to them as παχύτεροι: "as indeed nothing is so apt to prove a stumbling-block to men of duller minds," as this is—viz. the sudden conversion of one of their own party to the opposite side.

<sup>a</sup> καὶ ὅτι οὐκ ἂν ἐπεισθῇ Ἀνανίας, A. B. C. But Edd. omit Ananias: "because he (Paul) would not otherwise have been persuaded." In the next sentence, C. F. have ἔντε-

<sup>b</sup> δῆσον. i. e. tie them up, and keep them shut. E. Edd. κατὰχῳσον, 'Bury.' Below, for καὶ μὴ ἀκούει αὐτῶν, we read ἵνα μὴ. C. however has ἀκούει, which may imply that the sentence should be joined to the preceding one, οὐ τοιαύτη κόλασις, εἰ τις καταχῳσειεν αὐτὰ ἐν κόπρῳ, καὶ [εἰ] μὴ ἀκούει αὐτῶν: "not such the punishment, were one to bury, &c. as if it is if he refuse to hear them."

HOMIL. not such the punishment: if one were to bury them in XIX. dung, that he might not hear them, he would not so insult them as you do now. For say, what is the insult there? That the man has buried them. And what here? That we do not hear them. Say, when is a person most insulted—when he is silent, and one makes no answer, or, when he does speak (and is unheeded)? So that the insult is greater in the present case, when He does speak and thou wilt not hear: greater the contempt. Speak not to us, we read, they said of old to the Prophets: but ye do worse, saying, Speak: we will not do. For there they turned them away that they should not even speak, as feeling that from the voice itself they got some sort of awe and obligation; whereas you, in the excess of your contempt, do not even this. Believe me, if you stopped our<sup>a</sup> mouths by putting your hands over them, the insult would not be so great as it is now. For say, whether shews greater contempt, he that hears, even when [5.] hindering by this action, or, he that will not even hear? Say—if we shall look at it as a case of an insult offered—suppose one person to check the party insulting him, and to stop his mouth, as being hurt by the insults, and another person to shew no concern, but pretend not even to hear them: whether will shew most contempt? Would you not say the latter? For the former shews that he feels himself hit: the latter all but stops the mouth of God. Did ye shudder at what was said? Why, the mouth by which God speaks, is the mouth of God. Just as our mouth is the mouth of our soul, though the soul has no mouth, so the mouth of the Prophets is the mouth of God. Hear, and shudder. There, common (to the whole congregation) stands the deacon crying aloud, and saying, Let us attend to the reading. It is the common voice of the whole Church, the voice which he utters, and yet none does attend. After him begins the Reader, “The Prophecy of Esaias,” and still none attends, although Prophecy has nothing of man in it. Then after this, he says, Thus saith

<sup>a</sup> All the Mss. and Edd. Μὴ λαλεῖτε, ‘Speak not.’ But the context plainly requires the sense, “Speak on, if you will: we will not do what you bid us:” though it should rather be, Ὁὐκ ἀκούομεν.

38—40. But what is the common excuse? 'It is always the same things over again.' This it is most of all, that ruins you. Suppose you knew the things, even so you certainly ought not to turn away: since in the theatres also, is it not always the same things acted over again, and still you take no disgust? How dare you talk about 'the same things,' you who know not so much as the names of the Prophets? Are you not ashamed to say, that this is why you do not listen, because it is 'the same things over again,' while you do not know the names of those who are read, and this, though always hearing the same things? You have yourself confessed that the same things are said. Were I to say this as a reason for finding fault with you, you would need to have recourse to quite a different excuse, instead of this which is the very thing you find fault with.—Do not you exhort your son? Now if he should say, "Always the same things!" would not you count it an insult? It would be time enough to talk of "the same things," when we both knew the things, and exhibited them in our practice. Or rather, even then, the reading of them would not be superfluous. What equal to Timothy? tell me that: and yet to him says Paul, Give 1 Tim. 4, 13. attention to reading, to exhortation. For it is not possible, I say not possible, ever to exhaust the mind of the Scriptures. It is a well which has no bottom. I said, saith the Eccles. 7, 24. Preacher, I am become wise': and then it departed from me.— Shall I shew you that the things are not "the same?" How many persons, do you suppose, have spoken upon the Gospels? And yet all have spoken in a way which was new and fresh. For the more one dwells on them, the more insight does he get, the more does he behold the pure light. Look, what a number of things I am going to speak of:—say, what is

XIX. type? what is allegory? what is symbol? what are Gospels?
 Answer me only to this one point, which is plain: why are they called Gospels, "good tidings?" And yet ye have often heard that good news ought to have nothing sad in it: yet Mark 9, this 'good news' has abundance of sadness in it. Their fire, 44. it saith, shall never be quenched: their worm shall not die:
Mat. 24, Shall appoint his portion, it saith, with the hypocrites, with 51: 7, them that are cut asunder: then shall He say, I know you do not deceive ourselves, when we imagine that we tell you downcast; you are stunned; you are struck all of a heap, unable to hold up your heads. 'Good news' should have nothing in it of a duty to be done, but rather should counsel what is good: whereas these 'Gospels' have endless duties to be done. And again, to mention other things, as for Lukel 4, instance, Except a man hate father and mother, he is not

Mat. 10, earth, but a sword: and, In the world ye shall have tribu-

John 16, "What shall I have for my good news? Your father is 33. coming, or, your mother:" he does not say, "You must do this or that."—Again, tell me, how do the Gospels differ from the Prophets? Why are not the Prophecies

Lord shall give the word to them that preach the Gospel : <sup>ACTS VIII. 26-40.</sup> and, A new heaven and a new earth. Why are not those also called Gospels? But if, while you do not so much as <sup>Ps. 68,</sup> know what 'Gospels' mean, you so despise the reading of <sup>Is. 65,</sup> the Scriptures, what shall I say to you?—Let me speak <sup>17.</sup> of something else. Why four Gospels? why not ten? why not twenty? If many have taken in hand to set forth a <sup>Luke 1,</sup> narrative, why not one person? Why they that were <sup>1. i. e.</sup> 'disciples? why they that were not disciples? But why any <sup>Apo-</sup> Scriptures at all? And yet, on the contrary, the Old Testament says, I will give you a New Testament. Where are they that say, "Always the same things"? If ye knew <sup>Jer. 31,</sup> these, that, though a man should live thousands of years, <sup>31.</sup> they are not "the same things," ye would not say this. Believe me, I will not tell you the answers to any of these questions; not in private, not in public: only, if any find them out, I will nod assent. For this is the way we have made you good-for-nothing, by always telling you the thing, ready to your hands, and not refusing when we ought. Look, you have questions enough: consider them, tell me the reasons. Why Gospels? Why not Prophecies? Why duties to be done, in the Gospels? If one is at a loss, let another seek the answer, and contribute each to the others from what he has: but now we will hold our peace. For if what has been spoken has done you no good, much less would it, should we add more. We only pour water into a vessel full of holes. And the punishment too is all the greater for you. Therefore, we will hold our peace. Which that we may not have to do, it rests with yourselves. For if we shall see your diligence, perhaps we will again speak, that both ye may be more approved, and we may rejoice over you, in all things giving glory to the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ: to Him be glory and dominion now and ever, and world without end. Amen.

HOMILY XX.

ACTS ix. 10—12.

And there was a certain disciple at Damascus, named Ananias; and to him said the Lord in a vision, Ananias. And he said, Behold, I am here, Lord. And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go into the street which is called Straight, and enquire in the house of Judas for one called Saul, of Tarsus: for, behold, he prayeth, and hath seen in a vision a man named Ananias coming in, and putting his hand on him, that he might receive his sight.

WHAT may be the reason that He neither drew any one of high authority and importance, nor caused such to be forthcoming for the purpose of instructing Paul? It was, because it was not meet that he should be induced by men, but only by Christ Himself: as in fact this man taught him nothing, but merely baptized him: for, as soon as <sup>1</sup> baptized, he was to draw upon himself the grace of the Spirit, by his zeal and exceeding earnestness. And that Ananias was no very distinguished person, is plain. For, the Lord, v. 13. it says, spake unto him in a vision, and Ananias answered and said, Lord, I have heard by many of this man, how much evil he hath done to Thy saints at Jerusalem. For if he spoke in objection to Him, much more would he have done so, had He sent an Angel. And this is why, in the former instance, neither is Philip told what the matter is; but he sees the Angel, and then the Spirit bids him go near to the chariot. But observe here how the Lord relieves him of his fear: 'He is blind,' saith He, 'and prayeth, and art thou afraid?' In the same way Moses also is afraid: so that the words betokened that he was afraid, and shrunk from the task, not that he did not believe. He said, I have heard from many concerning this man. What sayest thou? God speaketh, and thou hesitatest? They did not yet well know the power of Christ. And here he hath authority from the chief priests to bind all that call on Thy name. How was that known? It is likely that they, being in fear, made minute enquiries. He does not say this, as thinking that Christ does not know the fact, but, 'such being the case, how,' says he, 'can these things be?' As in fact those (in the Gospel) say, Who can be saved?—This is done, in order that Paul may believe him that shall come to him: he hath seen in a vision: it hath shewed him beforehand: he prayeth, saith (the Lord): fear not. And observe, He speaks not to him of the success achieved: teaching us not to speak of our achievements. And<sup>b</sup>, though He saw him afraid, for all this He said it not. 'Thou shalt not be disbelieved:' he hath seen, saith He, in a vision a man (named) Ananias: for this is why it was in a vision, namely, because he was blind. And not even the exceeding wonderfulness of the thing took possession of the disciple's mind, so greatly was he afraid. But observe: Paul being blind, in this way He restored to sight. But the Lord said unto him, Go thy way: for he is a chosen vessel unto Me, to bear My name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel: for I will shew him how great things he must suffer for My name's sake. 'Not only,' saith He, 'shall he be a believer, but even a teacher, and great boldness shall he

 v. 17. former, so He may (startle him even more) by the latter. And Ananias went, and entered into the house, and laid his hands upon him, and said, Brother Saul—he straightway addresses him as a friend by that name—Jesus, Who appeared unto thee in the way in which thou camest—and yet Christ had not told him this, but he learnt it from the Spirit—hath sent me unto thee, that thou mayest receive thy sight, and be filled with the Holy Ghost. As he said this, he laid his
 v. 18. hands upon him. And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales. Some say this was a sign of his blindness. Why did he not blind his eyes (entirely)?
 v. 8. This was more wonderful, that, with his eyes open, he did not see: which was just his case in respect of the Law, until<sup>d</sup> the Name of Jesus was put on him. And he received sight forthwith, and arose, and was baptized.
 v. 19. And having taken food, he recovered strength. He was faint, therefore, both from his journey and from his fear; both from hunger, and from dejection of mind. Wishing therefore to deepen his dejection, He made the man blind until the coming of Ananias: and, that he might not imagine the blindness to be (only) fancy, this is the reason of the scales. He needed no other teaching: that which had befallen was made teaching (to him). And he was with the disciples which were at Damascus certain "That as He (Christ) astonished (Ananias) by the one, so He may by the other." τοῦτο, by the announcement of Saul as a believer; ἐκείνῳ, by that of his becoming a preacher, and before Gentiles and kings. (Chrys. is negligent in his use of the pronouns οὗτος and ἐκεῖνος.) Or it may be, "that as he (Saul) astonished (men) by his conversion, so by his wonderful boldness as a preacher.—E. Edd. omit this, and substitute, "as to prevail over all nations and kings."

of Jesus on Paul, when, having laid his hands on him, he told him that it was Jesus from whom he should receive his sight." Ben.,—who surely must have overlooked the clause ὅτι ἐκείνῳ ἐπὶ τοῦ νόμου, to which these words belong.—Above, τίνας φασὶ τῆς πηρόσεως εἶναι τοῦτο σημεῖον, the meaning is, that this falling off of the scales, &c. is an emblem of his mental blindness, and of his recovery therefrom. The innovator, not understanding this, alters it to, ταύτας τίνας φασὶ τῆς π. αὐτοῦ εἶναι αἰτίαι. "Some say that these were the cause of his blindness:" which is accepted by Edd.—And below, "lest any should imagine, &c." where τίς, E. bracketted by Sav., adopted by the other Edd., is due to the same hand.

days. And straightway in the synagogues he preached <sup>Acts</sup> Jesus*, that He is the Son of God. See, straightway he <sup>IX.</sup> 17—22. was a teacher in the synagogues. He was not ashamed of <sup>v. 20.</sup> the change, was not afraid while the very things in which he was glorious aforetime, the same he destroyed. Even 'from his first appearance on the stage here was a man, death-dealing, ready for deeds of blood: seest thou what a manifest sign (was here)? And with this very thing, he put all in fear: for, said they, Hither also is he come for this very thing. But all that heard him were amazed, and <sup>v. 21, 22.</sup> said; Is not this he that destroyed them which called on this name in Jerusalem, and came hither for that intent, that he might bring them bound unto the chief priests? But Saul increased the more in strength, and confounded the Jews which dwelt at Damascus, proving that this is very Christ. As one learned in the Law, he stopped their mouths, and suffered them not to speak. They thought they were rid of disputation in such matters, in getting rid of Stephen, and they found another, more vehement than Stephen.

But let us look at what relates to Ananias. The Lord <sup>Recapitulation.</sup> said not to him, Converse with him, and catechize him. For if, when He said, He prayeth, and hath seen a man laying <sup>v. 11, 12.</sup> his hands upon him, He did not persuade him, much less had He said this. So that he shall not disbelieve thee, he hath seen in a vision. Observe how in the former instance neither is Philip told all immediately. Fear not, He saith: for this man is a chosen vessel for Me. He <sup>v. 16.</sup>

And justly he is called a vessel (or, instrument)—for reason shews that evil is not a physical quality: a vessel of election, (or, chosen instrument,) He saith; for we choose that which is approved. And let not any imagine, that (Ananias) speaks in unbelief of what was told him, as imagining that Christ was deceived: far from it! but affrighted and trembling, he did not even attend to what was said, at hearing the name of Paul. Moreover, the Lord does not tell that He has blinded him: at the mention of his name fear had prepossessed his soul: ‘see,’

him how great things he must suffer for My Name's sake. At the same time also this is said by way of putting Ananias to the blush: If he, that was so frantic, shall suffer all things, and thou not willing even to baptize him! 'It is well,' saith he: 'let him continue blind' (this<sup>b</sup> is why he says these words): 'he is blind: why dost Thou at all bid me open his eyes, that he may bind (men) again?' Fear not the future: for that opening of his eyes he will use not against you, but for you: (with reference to that saying, That he may receive v. 12. his sight, these words are spoken:) for not only will he do you no harm, but he will suffer many things. And what is wonderful indeed is, 'that he shall first [know how great things he shall] suffer, and then shall take the field against the perils.—Brother Saul, the Lord Jesus—he saith not, v. 17. Who made thee blind, but, Who appeared with thee in the way, hath sent me unto thee [that thou mayest receive thy sight]: observe this man also, how he utters nothing boastful, but just as Peter said in the case of the lame man, Why look ye on us, as though by our own power or holiness we had made him to walk, so here also he saith, Jesus, Who appeared unto thee. <sup>b</sup> διὰ τοῦτο ταῦτα λέγει: i. e. Ananias's objection, (v. 13.) in fact comes to this: this was the feeling which prompted his words. The innovator substitutes, διὰ τοῦτο νῦν ἡμερος, ὅτι... "therefore is he now gentle, because he is blind." E. Edd.—The meaning is: "In saying, I will shew him how much he shall suffer, etc. the Lord rebukes Ananias' reluctance to baptize him, and restore his sight: his answer, Lord, I have heard, etc. was in fact as good as saying, Let him remain blind, it is better so." The parenthetic, πρὸς τὸ, "ἵνα ἀναβλέψῃ, ταῦτα εἰρηται, looks like a marginal note of one who did not perceive the connexion.—E.

makes it, "To that saying, That he may receive his sight, let this be added."

<sup>1</sup> Καὶ τὸ δὴ θαυμαστόν, ὅτι πρότερον πείσεται, καὶ τότε. So all our Mss. (Cat. τὸ πρ.) We conjecture the true reading to be, ὅτι πρότερον εἰσεται: "he shall first know," viz. how many things he must suffer, &c. v. 16.

<sup>k</sup> In the Mss. and Edd. the portions here marked b, a, c, occur in the order a, b, c. The clause ἡ ὥστε πιστεῦσαι ἐκείνον being thus thrown out of its connexion, perplexed the scribes: Cat. omits ἡ, "until he obtained the mighty gifts, so that he (ἐκείνον, Ananias?) believed." A. E. F. D. reject the clause altogether. N. ὥστε καὶ π. ε.

(c) It seems to me, that both Paul and Cornelius, at the very instant when the words were spoken, received the Spirit. And yet (in this case) the giver was no great one. So true is it, that there was nought of man's in the things done, nor aught was done by man, but God was present, the Doer of these things. And at the same time, (the Lord) both teaches him to think modestly of himself, in that He does not bring him to the Apostles who were so admired, and shews that there is nothing of man here. He was not filled, however, with the Spirit which works signs: that in this way also his faith might be shewn; for he wrought no

And after that many days were fulfilled, the Jews v. 23. took counsel to kill him. The Jews again resort to that <sup>1</sup>valid argument of theirs, not now seeking false-accusers <sup>1</sup>ισχυρὸν and false-witnesses; they cannot wait for these now: but <sup>συλλογισμὸν.</sup> what do they? They set about it by themselves. For as they see the affair on the increase, they do not even use the form of a trial. But their laying await was known v. 24. of Saul. And they watched the gates day and night to kill him. For this was more intolerable to them than the miracles which had taken place—than the five thousand, the three thousand, than everything, in short. And observe him, how he is delivered, not by (miraculous) grace, but by man's wisdom—not as <sup>2</sup>the Apostles were—that thou mayest learn <sup>2</sup>ἐκεῖνοι, ch. 5, 19. the <sup>3</sup>energetic character of the man, how he shines even <sup>3</sup>ἀρετήν. without miracles. Then the disciples took him by night, v. 25. that the affair might not be suspected, and let him down by the wall in a basket. What then? having escaped such a danger, does he flee? By no means, but goes where he kindled them to greater rage.

[And straightway in the synagogues he preached Jesus]<sup>Recapitulation.</sup>—for he was accurate in the faith—[that this is the Son of v. 20. 21. God. But all that heard him were amazed, etc.] for indeed it was incredible. [But Saul increased, etc.] Therefore v. 22-24. after many days this happens: [viz. the Jews took counsel to kill him. And their laying await was known of Saul.] What does this mean? It is likely that for a while he did not choose to depart thence, though many, perhaps, besought him; but when he learnt it, then he permitted his disciples: for he had disciples immediately. [Then the disciples, etc.] v. 25. Of this occurrence he says: The ethnarch of Aretas the king 2 Cor. 11, 32. kept the city of the Damascenes with a garrison, desiring to apprehend me. But observe the Writer here<sup>1</sup>, that he does

HOMIL. not tell the story ambitiously, and so as to shew what an XX. important person Paul was, saying, "For they stirred up the king," [and so forth: but only, Then the disciples took him by night, and let him down by the wall—in a basket:] for they sent him out alone, and none with him. And it was well they did this: the consequence being, that he shewed himself to the Apostles in Jerusalem. Now they sent him out, as bound to provide for his safety by flight: but he did just the contrary—he leaped into the midst of those who were mad against him. This it is to be on fire, this to be fervent indeed! From that day forth he knew all the commands which the Apostles
Mat. 10, had heard: Except a man take up his cross, and follow Me.
38. The very fact that he had been slower to come than the rest
Luke 7, made him more zealous: for to whom much is forgiven, the 47. same will love more, so that the later he came, the more he loved: † †<sup>m</sup> and having done ten thousand wrongs, he thought he could never do enough to cast the former deeds
v. 22. into the shade. Proving, it says: i. e. with mildness teaching. And observe, they did not say to him, Thou art he that destroyed: why art thou changed? for they were ashamed: but they said it to themselves. For he would have said to them, This very thing ought to teach you, as in fact he does thus plead in his speech before Agrippa. Let us imitate this man: let us bear our souls in our hands, ready to confront all dangers.—(That he fled from Damascus,) this was no cowardice<sup>a</sup>: he preserved himself for the preaching. Had he been a coward, he would not have gone to Jerusalem, would not immediately have commenced teaching: he would have abated somewhat of his vehemence: for he had been taught by the fate of Stephen. He was no not say it, and his not saying it is the very thing which Chrys. comments: ἀλλ' ὅρα τοῦτον οὐ φιλοτίμως λέγοντα, οὐδὲ λαμπρὸν δεικνύοντα τὸν Π., "Ἐπήγειραν γάρ," φησιν, "τὸν βασιλέα." The φησιν here is put hypothetically, "as if he had said," or "when he might have said." The sentence, however, requires something to complete it, such as we have added in the translation.

Wherefore he thought it no great thing to die for the Gospel's sake, unless he should do this to great advantage: <sup>1X.</sup> <sup>20-25.</sup> willing not even to see Christ, Whom most of all he longed <sup>Phil. 1,</sup> to see, while the work of his stewardship among men was <sup>23. 24.</sup> not yet complete. Such ought to be the soul of a Christian. From * his first appearance, from the very outset, the character of Paul declared itself: nay, even before this, even in the things which he did not according to knowledge, <sup>Rom.</sup> it was not by man's reasoning that he was moved to act <sup>10, 2.</sup> as he did<sup>1</sup>. For if, so long afterwards, he was content not to depart, much more at the beginning of his trading-voyage, when he had but just left the harbour. Many things Christ leaves to be done by (ordinary) human wisdom, that we may learn that (his disciples) were men, that it was not all everywhere to be done by grace: for otherwise, they would have been mere motionless logs: but in many things they managed matters themselves.—This is not less than martyrdom,—to shrink from no suffering for the sake of the salvation of the many. Nothing so delights God. Again will I repeat what I have often said: and I repeat it, because I do exceedingly desire it: as Christ also did the same, when discoursing concerning forgiveness: When ye Mark pray, forgive if ye have aught against any man: and again <sup>11, 25.</sup> to Peter He said, I say not unto thee, Forgive until seven Mat. 18, times, but until seventy-times seven. And Himself in fact <sup>22.</sup> forgives the transgressions against Him. So do we also, because we know that this is the very goal of Christianity, continually discourse thereof. Nothing is more frigid than a Christian, who cares not for the salvation of others. Thou canst not here plead poverty: for she that cast down the two <sup>Luke 21,</sup> mites, shall be thine accuser. And Peter said, Silver and <sup>1.</sup> <sup>Acts 3,</sup> gold have I none. And Paul was so poor, that he was often <sup>6.</sup> hungered, and wanted necessary food. Thou canst not plead lowness of birth: for they too were ignoble men, and of ignoble parents. Thou canst not allege want of education: for they

HOMIL. too were unlearned men. Even if thou be a slave, therefore, XX.
 Acts 4, and a runaway slave, thou canst perform thy part: for such was 13. Onesimus: yet see to what Paul calls him, and to how great Philem. honour he advances him: that he may communicate with ver. 13. me, he says, in my bonds. Thou canst not plead infirmity:
 for such was Timothy, having often infirmities; for, says the 1 Tim. Apostle, Use a little wine for thy stomach's sake, and thine 5, 23. often infirmities. Every one can profit his neighbour, if he will fulfil his part. See ye not the unfruitful trees, how strong they are, how fair, how large also, and smooth, and of great height? But if we had a garden, we should much rather have pomegranates, or fruitful olive trees: for the others are for delight to the eye, not for profit, which in them is but small. Such are those men who only consider their own interest: nay, not such even, since these persons are fit only for burning: whereas those trees are useful both for building, and for the safety of those within. Such too Mat. 25, were those Virgins, chaste indeed, and decent, and modest, 1. but profitable to none: wherefore they are burned. Such are they who have not nourished Christ. For observe that none of those are charged with particular sins of their own, with fornication, for instance, or with perjury; in short, with no sin but the having been of no use to another. Such was Jh. 25. he who buried his talent, shewing indeed a blameless life, but not being useful to another. How can such an one be a Christian? Say, if the leaven being mixed up with the flour did not change the whole into its own nature, would such a thing be leaven? Again, if a perfume shed no sweet odour on those who approach it, could we call it a perfume?
 Say not, 'It is impossible for me to induce others (to become Christians)'—for if thou art a Christian, it is impossible but that it should be so. For as the natural properties of things cannot be gainsaid, so it is here: the thing is part of the very nature of the Christian. Do not insult God. To say, that the sun cannot shine, would be to insult Him: to say that a Christian cannot do good, is to insult God, and call Him a liar. For it is easier for the sun not to give heat, nor to shine, than for the Christian not to send forth light:
 it is easier for the light to be darkness, than for this to be so.
 Tell not me that it is impossible: the contrary is the impossible.

Do not insult God. If we once get our own affairs in a right state, the other will certainly follow as a natural and necessary consequence. It is not possible for the light of a Christian to be hid; not possible for a lamp so conspicuous as that to be concealed. Let us not be careless. For, as the profit from virtue reaches both to ourselves and to those who are benefited by it: so from vice there is a twofold loss, reaching both to ourselves, and to those who are injured by it. Let there be (if you will) some private man, who has suffered numberless ills from some one, and let no one take his part, yet let that man still return good offices; what teaching so mighty as this? What words, or what exhortations could equal it? What wrath were it not enough to extinguish and soften? Knowing therefore these things, let us hold fast to virtue, as knowing that it is not possible to be saved otherwise, than by passing through this present life in doing these good works, that we may also obtain the good things which are to come, through the grace and mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ, with Whom to the Father together with the Holy Spirit be glory, might, honour, now and ever, world without end. Amen.

HOMILY XXI.

ACTS ix. 26, 27.

And when Saul was come to Jerusalem, he assayed to join himself to the disciples: but they were all afraid of him, and believed not that he was a disciple. But Barnabas took him, and brought him to the Apostles, and declared unto them how he had seen the Lord in the way.

ONE may well be much at a loss here to understand how it is that, whereas in the Epistle to the Galatians Paul says, I went not to Jerusalem, but into Arabia and to Damascus, and, After three years I went up to Jerusalem, and<sup>1</sup> to see Peter, here the writer says the contrary. (There, Paul says,) And none of the Apostles saw I; but here, it is said, (Barnabas) brought him to the Apostles.—Well then, either (Paul) means, “I went not up with intent <sup>a</sup>to refer (or attach) myself to them—for what saith he? I referred not myself, neither went I to Jerusalem [to those who were Apostles before me]”: or else, that the laying await for him in Damascus was after his return from Arabia; <sup>b</sup>or else, again, that the visit to Jerusalem was after he came from

<sup>a</sup> St. Chrysostom's exposition cannot be correctly reported here. Perhaps what he did say, was in substance as follows: “but I went into Arabia, and returned again unto Damascus: whence we learn, that the plot against him at Damascus was after his return from Arabia, and then the visit (to Jerusalem), after the escape from Damascus. Certainly of his own accord he went not to the Apostles, &c.”—(So far, the first hypothesis, viz. that the visit, Acts ix. and the visit in Gal. are one and the same. Then) “or else, Paul does not mean this visit (viz. after the flight from Damascus), but passes it by, so that the order (in his narration) is as follows: I went to Arabia, then to Damascus, then [viz. at some time during the residence in Damascus] to Jerusalem (to see Peter), then to Syria [i. e. back to Damascus]: whereas, had he related matters fully, it should have been, that he went into Arabia, thence to Damascus, then to Jerusalem [to see Peter], thence to Damascus again, then again to Jerusalem [after the escape from D.], thence to Cæsarea.”

Arabia. Certainly of his own accord he went not to the Apostles, but assayed to join himself unto the disciples—as being<sup>a</sup> a teacher, not a disciple—“I went not,” he says, “for this purpose, that I should go to those who were Apostles before me: certainly, I learnt nothing from them.” Or<sup>d</sup>, he does not speak of this visit, but passes it by, so that the order is, “I went into Arabia, then I came to Damascus, then to Jerusalem, then to Syria:” or else, again, that he went up to Jerusalem, then was sent to Damascus, then to Arabia, then again to Damascus, then to Cæsarea. Also, the visit after fourteen years, probably, was when he brought up the [alms to the] brethren together with Barnabas: or else he means a different occasion. For the Historian for conciseness, often omits incidents, and condenses the times. Observe how unambitious the writer is, and how he does not even relate<sup>1</sup> that vision, but passes it by. He assayed, it says, to join himself to the disciples. And they were afraid of him. By this again is shewn the ardour of Paul’s character: not (only) from the mouth of Ananias, and of those who wondered at him there, but also of those in Jerusalem: [they believed not that he was a disciple:] for truly that was beyond all human expectation. He<sup>e</sup> was <sup>a</sup> E. F. D. Edd. “As not being a teacher, but a disciple:” the reading of A. B. C. N. is attested by Cat. Cc. but below it is said that he joined himself to the disciples, ὅτε μαθητὴν ὄντα. Infra, note e.

<sup>d</sup> Here should begin the alternative to the former hypothesis (beginning ἢ τοῖνυν τοῦτο φησὶν) perhaps, with ἢ, εἰ μὴ τοῦτο. Cat. has ἀπηλθον, ἦλθον, which we adopt, as the mention of Syria shews that the narrative in Gal. i. 17—21. is referred to; the subject therefore of λέγει, ἀφίσκειν is Paul, and ταύτην means the visit in Acts ix. The next sentence, for ἢ εἰ μὴ τοῦτο πάλιν κ. τ. λ. requires to be remodelled as above, e. g. δέον λέγειν ὅτι ἐξ Ἀραβίας εἰς Δαμ. ἀποστρέψας, ἀνῆλθεν εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα, εἰτα εἰς Δαμ. ἀπῆλθε πάλιν, εἰτα πάλιν εἰς Ἱεροσ., εἰτα ἐξεπέμφθη εἰς Καισαρείαν. The reporter, or redactor, seems to have intended a recital of St. Paul’s movements before as well as after his conversion: viz. (from Tarsus) he went up to Jerusalem, then was sent (by the high-priest) to Damascus: then (after his conversion) went into Arabia: (the mod. t. substitutes, Syria:); then returned to Damascus: then (omitting all the rest) to Cæsarea.—In the Comment. on Gal. i. t. x. 675. D. Chrys. expounds thus: “Whereas he says, I went not up, this also may be said, that he went not up at the outset of his preaching, and, when he did, it was not for the purpose of learning. He intimates both these things, saying, Immediately I conferred not, etc. he does not say simply, Οὐ πρῶτον, but, εὐθέως. And if he did go up afterwards, it was not for the purpose of getting additional knowledge.”

HOMIL. [no longer a wild beast, but] a man mild and gentle! And XXI. observe how he does not go to the Apostles, such is his forbearance, but to the disciples, as being a disciple. He was not thought worthy of credit. But Barnabas—"Son of Consolation" is his appellation, whence also he makes himself easy of access to the man: for he was a kind man exceedingly, and this is proved both by the present instance, and in the affair of John (Mark)—having taken him, brought him to the Apostles, and related to them how he had seen the Lord in the way<sup>1</sup>. It is likely that at Damascus also he had heard all about him: whence he was not afraid, [but the others were,] for he was a man whose glance inspired fear. How, it says, *he had seen the Lord in the way, and that He had spoken unto him, and how in Damascus he had spoken boldly in the name of the Lord. that ἀνθρ. ἐκ. καὶ ἡμ. is a description of Saul's present bearing contrasted with his former character: and that the sentence should begin with ἐκεῖνο, somewhat in this way: οὐ γὰρ ἦν ὄντως προσδοκίας ἀνθρώπου. 'Εκεῖνο [e. g. τὸ θῆριον, that raging wild-beast, now] was a man, mild and gentle.—Below, all the Mss. have ἔτε μαθητὴν ὄντα, which is not easily reconciled with the former passage (note c). There it is represented, that he assayed to join himself to the disciples as being a teacher, and not a disciple; here, that he did this as being a disciple, and διὰ τὸ μετρίδζειν. Ec. combines this with the former statement: "he went not to the Apostles, but assayed, &c. μετρίδζων, ἔτε διδ. ὄν, καὶ οὐ μαθ., where Henten. renders, modeste de se sentiens quum tamen præceptor esset et non discipulus: rather, forbearing to put himself forward as he might have done, seeing he was himself a teacher, &c. The Catena has the διὰ τὸ μετρίδζειν after ἀπρίοντα, and again after ὄντα. Hence the true reading may be, καὶ δὲ αὐτὸν οὐ πρὸς τ. ἀπ. ἀπρίοντα, ἀλλὰ πρὸς τοὺς μαθητὰς οὐχ ἔτε μαθητὴν ὄντα, ἀλλὰ διὰ τὸ μετρίδζειν.

<sup>1</sup> A. B. C. (and Cat.) give the text, But Barnabas—in the way, continuously, and then the comments all strung together. Also the clause "it is likely—about him" is placed last, after γοργὸς ἦν ὁ ἀνθρ. This expression (Cat. adds γὰρ) may denote either the quick, keen glance of Paul's eye, or the terror with which he was regarded—"to them the man had a terrible look with him."—The modern text: "But Barnabas—in the way. This Barnabas was a mild and gentle sort of man. 'Son of Consolation' is the meaning of his name: whence also he became a friend to Paul. And that he was exceedingly kind and accessible, is proved both from the matter in hand, and from the affair of John. Whence he is not afraid, but relates how he had seen, &c.—in the name of the Lord Jesus. For it is likely, &c. Wherefore also ταῦτα ἐκείνων κατασκευαστικά ποιῶν, διὰ τῶν ἔργων ἰβεβαίωσε τὰ λεχθέντα." In the original text, it is simply ταῦτα ἐκείνων κατασκευαστικά, καὶ διὰ τῶν ἔργων ἰβεβαίωσε τὰ λεχθέντα, which being put before v. 28. would mean, that the conduct of Paul in Damascus, the πῶς ἐπαβήθη, evidenced the truth of what he said, about the Lord's appearing to him in the way. Hence in the mod. text: "wherefore Barnabas making the latter prove the former, confirmed by (Paul's) deeds the things told of him." (But Ben., Ideo hæc ad illa præparant, dum ille operibus dicta confirmat. Erasm., Ideo et hæc præparatoria facit operibus confirmans ea quæ dicta erant.) We have transposed the clause, as comment on v. 28.

the disciples were afraid of him, and the Apostles did not trust him; by this therefore he relieves them of their fear.

With the Hellenists: he means, those who used the Greek tongue: and this he did, very wisely; for those others, those profound Hebrews, had no mind even to see him.

But they, it says, went about to slay him: a token, this, of his energy, and triumphant victory, and of their exceeding annoyance at what had happened. Thereupon, fearing lest the issue should be the same as in the case of Stephen, they sent him to Cæsarea. For it says, When the brethren were <sup>v. 30.</sup>

aware of this, they brought him down to Cæsarea, and sent him forth to Tarsus, at the same time to preach, and likely to be more in safety, as being in his own country. But observe, I pray you, how far it is from being the case that everything is done by (miraculous) grace; how, on the contrary, God does in many things leave them to manage for themselves by their own wisdom and in a human way; so<sup>s</sup> to cut off the excuse of idle people: for if it was so in the case of Paul, much more in theirs. Then, it says, the <sup>v. 31.</sup>

For while there was persecution, he was in Jerusalem, but when the affairs of the Church are everywhere in security, then it is that he leaves Jerusalem. See how fervent and energetic he is! For he did not think, because there was peace, therefore there was no need of his presence. Paul<sup>1</sup> departed, and there was peace: there is

It is doubtful, as the text stands, whether the subject to ἡσυχία is, the Jewish believers, or, the adversaries: and κατεφερόντων, ἡγχιανόντων seem inconsistent as predicated of the same persons. Perhaps what Chrys. said is not fully reported, and the text may be

HOMIL. no war nor disturbance. Them, they respected most, as XXI. having often stood by them, and as being held in admiration by the multitude: but him, they despised, and were more savage against him. See, how great a war, and immediately, peace! See what that war effected. It dispersed the peace-makers. In Samaria, Simon was put to shame: in Judæa, the affair of Sapphira took place. Not that, because there was peace, therefore matters became relaxed,
 v. 32. but such was the peace as also to need exhortation. And it came to pass, as Peter passed throughout all quarters, he came down also to the saints which dwelt at Lydda. Like the commander of an army, he went about, inspecting the ranks, what part was compact, what in good order, what

And look: where there was danger, he was the man, and where good <sup>1</sup>management (was needed); but where all is calm, there they act all in common, and he demands no greater honour (than the others). When need was to work miracles, he starts forward, and here again he is the man to
 v. 33. 34. labour and toil. *And there he found a certain man named Eneas, which had kept his bed eight years, and was sick of the palsy. completed thus: (comp. p. 304.) "there is no war [from without], nor disturbance [within]. For [the Jewish believers] respected the Apostles, as having often stood by them, and [the unbelievers durst not attack them] as being had in admiration by the people: but as for Paul, [the one party—viz. the zealous Jewish believers, "the profound Hebrews,"] despised him, [while the others—viz. the unbelievers] were more savage against him." Edd. (from E. alone). "And why, you may ask, does he this, and 'passes through' when there is peace, and after Paul's departure, [i. e. why does Peter delay his journey until Paul is gone, and all is quiet]? Because them they most respected, as having, &c."

† Καὶ ἔρθα οἰκονομία· ἔρθα δὲ, κ. τ. λ. It does not appear what oikonomia can be intended, unless it be the order taken for the appointment of the deacons, but this was the act of all the Apostles, vi. 2. Hence perhaps the reading should be: ἔρθα δὲ οἰκονομία, καὶ ἔρθα. . . . "But where management (or regulation) only is concerned, and where all is peace, &c."

and ask if he wished to be healed? In the first place, the miracle served for exhortation to many: hear then how great <sup>Acts IX. 32-38.</sup> the gain. And all that dwelt at Lydda and Saron saw him, and turned to the Lord. For the man was notable. [Arise, and make thy bed:] he does well to give a proof of the miracle: for they not only released men of their diseases, but in giving the health they gave the strength also. Moreover, at that time they had given no proofs of their power, so that the man could not reasonably have been required to shew his faith, as neither <sup>ch. 3, 6.</sup> in the case of the lame man did they demand it. As therefore Christ in the beginning of His miracles did not demand faith, so neither did these. For in Jerusalem indeed, as was but reasonable, the faith of the parties was first shewn; [they <sup>ch. 5, 16.</sup> brought out their sick into the streets,] that as Peter passed by, his shadow at least might fall upon some of them; for many miracles had been wrought there: but here this is the first that occurs. For of the miracles, some were wrought for the purpose of drawing others (to faith); some for the comfort of them that believed. Now there was at Joppa a <sup>v. 36-38.</sup> certain disciple named Tabitha, which by interpretation is called Dorcas: this woman was full of good works and almsdeeds which she did. And it came to pass in those days, that she was sick, and died: whom when they had washed, they laid her in an upper chamber. And forasmuch as Lydda was nigh to Joppa, and the disciples had heard that Peter was there, they sent unto him two men, desiring him that he would not delay to come to them. Why did they wait till she was dead? Why was not Peter<sup>1</sup> solicited before <sup>ἡσκόλη.</sup> this? So<sup>2</sup> right-minded were they, they did not think it <sup>φιλοσο-</sup> proper to<sup>3</sup> trouble the Disciples about such matters, and to <sup>φοῦντες.</sup> take them away from the preaching: as indeed this is why <sup>σκόλ- λειν.</sup> it mentions that the place was near, seeing<sup>k</sup> they asked this as a thing beside his mark, and not now in the regular course. [Not to delay to come unto them]: for she was

They do not beseech, but leave it to him to give her<sup>1</sup> life. See<sup>1</sup> what a cheering inducement to alms is here! And all the widows, it says, stood round him weeping, and shewing the coats and garments which Dorcas had made while she was with them. Peter went into the apartment, as one who took it calmly, but see what an accession came of it! It is not without a meaning that the Writer has informed us of the woman's name, but to shew<sup>2</sup> that the name she bore matched her character; as active and wakeful was she as an antelope. For in many instances there is a Providence in the giving of names, as we have often told you. She was full, it says, of good works: not only of alms, but of good works, first, and then of this good work in particular. Which, it says, Dorcas made while she was with them. Great humility!

Not as we do; but they were all together in common, and in company with them she made these things and worked. But Peter put them all forth, and kneeled down, and prayed; and turning him to the body said, Tabitha, arise. And she opened her eyes: and when she saw Peter, she sat up. Why does he put them all out? That he may not be confused nor disturbed by their weeping. And having knelt down, he prayed. Observe the intentness of his prayer. [And<sup>3</sup> he

And it came to pass, that he tarried many days in Joppa with one Simon a tanner.* Mark the unassuming conduct, mark the moderation of Peter, how he does not make his abode with this lady, or some other person of distinction, but with a tanner: by all his acts leading men to humility, neither suffering the mean to be ashamed, nor the great to be elated! [Many days<sup>2</sup>;] for they needed his instruction, who had believed through the miracles.—Let us look then again at what has been said.

Assayed, it says, to join himself to the disciples. He did not come up to them unabashed, but with a subdued manner. "Disciples" they were all called at that time by reason of their great virtue, for there was the likeness of the disciples plainly to be seen. [But they were all afraid of him.] See how they feared the dangers, how the alarm was yet at its height in them. [But Barnabas, etc.]<sup>3</sup>—it seems to me that Barnabas was of old a friend of his—[and related, etc.]: observe how Paul says nothing of all this himself: nor would he have brought it forward to the others, had he not been compelled to do so. And he was with them, coming in and going out at Jerusalem, and speaking boldly in the name of the Lord Jesus. This gave them all confidence. [But they went about to slay him: which when the brethren knew, etc.] Do you observe how both there (at Damascus), and here, the rest take care for him, and provide for him the means of departure, and that we nowhere find him thus far receiving (direct supernatural) aid from God? So the energy of his character is betokened. [To Cæsarea, and sent him forth to Tarsus]: so that, I suppose, he did not continue his journey by land, but sailed the rest of it. And this (departure) is Providentially ordered, that he might preach there also: and so likewise were the plots

<sup>p</sup> Here the modern text has: "And the Churches had peace, being edified, and walking in the fear of the Lord: i. e. they increased, and (had peace), peace as it is in itself, the true peace, εἰρήνην αὐτῇν θήκου πρὸς ἑαυτὴν, τὴν ὅπως εἰρήνην." (The singular ἡ Ἐκκλ. being altered to the plural, the reference in πρὸς ἑαυτὴν was not perceived.) "With good reason. <sup>q</sup> Something must be supplied: e. g. "He did not wait for Eneas to ask, or to shew his faith," as above, p. 301.—Edd. from E. "And it came to pass—maketh thee whole. It is not the word of one making a display, but of confidence that the thing shall be. And it does very much seem to me, that the sick man believed this word, and was made whole. That Peter is unassuming, is clear from what follows. For he said not, In the Name of Jesus, but rather as a miracle he narrates it. And they that dwelt at Lydda saw, and turned unto the Lord. It was not for nothing that I said, that the miracles were wrought in order to persuade and comfort. But in Joppa—and died. Do you mark the miracles everywhere taking place? It is not merely said, &c. Wherefore also they do not call Peter until she was dead. And having heard (that Peter was there) the disciples sent, &c."

Peter until she died: then they sent and told him not to delay to come unto them. Observe, they send and call him by others. And he comes: he did not think it a piece of disrespect, to be summoned by two men: (for, it says, they sent two men unto him.)—Affliction, my beloved, is a great thing, and rivets our souls together. Not a word of wailing there, nor of mourning. See<sup>a</sup> how thoroughly matters are cleansed! Having washed her, it says, they laid her in an upper chamber: that is, they did all (that was right) for the dead body. Then Peter having come, knelt down, and v. 40. prayed; and turning him to the body, said, Tabitha, arise. They did not perform all their miracles with the same ease. But this was profitable for them: for truly God took thought not only for the salvation of others, but for their own. He that healed so many by his very shadow, how is it that he now has to do so much first? There are cases also in which the faith of the applicants cooperated. This is the first dead person that he raises. Observe how he, as it were, awakes her out of sleep: first she opened her eyes: then upon seeing (Peter) she sat up: then from his hand she received strength. [And it was known throughout all Joppa, v. 42. and many believed in the Lord.] Mark the gain, mark the fruit, that it was not for display. Indeed, this is why he puts them all out, imitating his Master in this also.

For where tears are—or rather, where miracles are, there tears ought not to be; not where such a mystery is celebrating. Hear, I beseech you: although somewhat of the like kind does not take place now, yet in the case of our dead

<sup>a</sup> "Ὅρα πῶς διακαθαίρεται τὰ πρᾶγματα (omitted in E. D. F. Edd.): i. e. how the Gospel has purged away all excess of mourning, and all noisy demonstrations of grief. St. Chrys. frequently inveighs against the heathenish customs of mourning for the dead, which were still practised—such as the hiring of heathen mourning-women: Hom. in Matt. xxi. p. 361. A. "I confess to you, I am ashamed when I see the troops of women tearing their hair, gashing their flesh, as they move through the market—and this under the very eyes of the heathen." <sup>b</sup> "Ἐνθα γὰρ δάκρυα, μᾶλλον δὲ ἔνθα θαύματα, οὐ δεῖ δάκρυα παρῆναι· ἔνθα τοιοῦτον μυστήριον τελεῖται. It seems, he was going to say, "Where tears are, it is no fit time for miracles," but corrects himself, for put in that way the proposition was not true. The innovator weakly substitutes, "For where tears are, such a mystery ought not to be performed: or rather, where miracles are, there tears ought not to be."

HOMIL. likewise, a great mystery is celebrating. Say*, if as we sit XIX. together, the Emperor were to send and invite some one of us to the palace, would it be right, I ask, to weep and mourn? Angels are present, commissioned from heaven and come from thence, sent from the King Himself to call their fellow servant, and say, dost thou weep? Knowest thou not what a mystery it is that is taking place, how awful, how dread, [4.] and worthy indeed of hymns and lauds? Wouldest thou learn, that thou mayest know, that this is no time for tears? For it is a very great mystery of the Wisdom of God. As if leaving her dwelling, the soul goes forth, speeding on her way to her own Lord, and dost thou mourn? Why then, thou shouldest do this on the birth of a child: for this in fact is also a birth, and a better than that. For here she goes forth to a very different light, is loosed as from a prison-house, comes off as from a contest. 'Yes,' say you, 'it is all very well to say this, 'in the case of those of whose salvation we are assured.' Then what ails thee, O man, that even in the case of such, thou dost not take it in this way? Say, what canst thou have to condemn in the little child? Why dost thou mourn for it? What in the newly baptized? for he too is brought into the same condition: why dost thou mourn for him? For as the sun arises clear and bright, so the soul, leaving the body with a pure conscience, shines joyously. Not such the spectacle of Emperor
 πόλεως.</sup> as<sup>1</sup> he comes in state to take possession of the city, not such the hush of awe, as when the soul having quitted the body is departing in company with Angels. Think what the soul must then be! in what amazement, what wonder, what delight! Why mournest thou? Answer me.—But it is only in the case of sinners thou doest this? Would that it were so, and I would not forbid your mournings, would that this were the object! This lamentation were Apostolic, this were after the pattern of the Lord; for even Jesus wept over Jerusalem. I would that your mournings were discriminated by this rule. But when thou speakest the words of one<sup>Acts IX. 28-38.</sup> that would call back (the dead), and speakest of thy long intimacy and his beneficence, it is but for this thou mournest (not because he was a sinner), thou dost but pretend to say it. Mourn, bewail the sinner, and I too will give a loose to tears; I, more than thou, the greater the punishment to which he is liable as such: I too will lament, with such an object. But not thou alone must lament him that is such; the whole city must do the same, and all that meet you on the way, as men bewail them that are led to be put to death. For this is a death indeed, an evil death, the death of sinners. But (with you) all is clean reversed. Such lamentation marks a lofty mind, and conveys much instruction; the other marks a littleness of soul. If we all lamented with this sort of lamentation, we should amend the persons themselves while yet living. For as, if it rested with thee to apply medicines which would prevent that bodily death, thou wouldest use them, just so now, if this death were the death thou lamentest, thou wouldest prevent its taking place, both in thyself and in him. Whereas now our behaviour is a perfect riddle; that having it in our power to hinder its coming, we let it take place, and mourn over it when it has come. Worthy indeed of lamentations are they, (when we consider) what time as they shall stand before the judgment seat of Christ, what words they shall then hear, what they shall suffer! To no purpose have these men lived: nay, not to no purpose, but to evil purpose! Of them too it may be fitly said, It were good for them had they never been born. For<sup>Mark 14, 21.</sup> what profit is it, I ask, to have spent so much time to the hurt “Ὅταν δὲ ἀνακαλούμενος ῥήματα λέγῃς καὶ συνήθειαν καὶ προστασίαν, ὡς Μss. and Edd. but Eccl. ἀνακαλουμένου, which we adopt. To the same purport, but more fully, Hom. xli. in 1 Cor. p. 392. (and Eccl. xlv.) “If when some (friend) were taken into the palace and crowned, thou shouldest bewail and lament, I should not call thee the friend of him that is crowned, but very much his hater and enemy. ‘But now, say you, I do not bewail him, but myself.’ But neither is this the part of a friend, that for thine own sake thou wouldest have him still in the contest, &c. ‘But I know not where he is gone.’ How knowest thou not, answer me? For whether he lived rightly or otherwise, it is plain where he will go. ‘Why, this is the very reason why I do bewail—because he departed a sinner.’ This is mere pretence. If this were the reason of thy lamenting him that is gone, thou oughtest while he was alive to have amended him, and formed his manners, &c.”

HOMIL. of his own person? Had it been spent only to no purpose, XXI. were not that, I ask you, punishment enough! If one who has been an hired servant twenty years were to find that he has had all his labour in vain, would he not weep and lament, and think himself the most miserable of men? Why, here is a man who has lost all the labour of a whole life: not one day has he lived for himself, but to luxury, to debauchery, to covetousness, to sin, to the devil. Then, say, shall we not bewail this man? shall we not try to snatch him from his perils? For it is, yes, it is possible, if we will, to mitigate his punishment, if we make continual prayers for him, if for him we give alms. However unworthy he may be, God will yield to our importunity. For if* Paul shewed mercy on one (who had no claims on his mercy), and for the sake of others spared one (whom he would not have spared), much more is it right for us to do this. By means of his substance, by means of thine own, by what means thou wilt; aid him: pour in oil, nay rather, water. Has he no alms-deeds of his own to exhibit? Let him have at least those of his kindred. Has he none done by himself? At least let him have those which are done for him, that his wife may with confidence beg him off in that day, having paid down the ransom for him. The more sins he has to answer for, the departed are aided by the prayers, alms, and Eucharistic oblations of the living. Hom. xli. in 1 Cor. u. s. "Even if he did depart, a sinner, . . . we ought to succour him, in such sort as may be (ὡς ἂν οἶόν τε ᾖ), not by tears, but by prayers and supplications, and alms and oblations. For not idly have these things been devised, nor to no purpose do we make mention of the departed in the Divine Mysteries, and for them draw near, beseeching the Lamb Which lieth there, Which taketh away the sins of the world, but in order that some consolation may thence come to them. Nor in vain does he that stands beside the altar, while the dread Mysteries are celebrating, cry out, 'For all that sleep in Christ, and for them that make the memorials for them.'" See also Hom. iii. ad Phil. p. 217, 218. Comp. S. Cyrill. Hier. Catech. Mystag. v. §. 9. S. Augustin. Serm. 172.

* Εἰ γὰρ Παῦλος ἕτερον ἠλέησε, καὶ δι' ἄλλους ἄλλων (Eccl. ἄλλον) ἐφέλιστο, πολλὰ μᾶλλον ἡμᾶς τοῦτο δεῖ ποιεῖν. But E. Edd. Εἰ διὰ Παῦλον ἑτέρους δίδωσκε, καὶ δι' ἄλλους ἄλλων φείδεται, πῶς οὐχὶ καὶ δι' ἡμᾶς τὸ αὐτὸ τοῦτο ἐργάσεται; "If (God) for Paul's sake saved others, and for some men's sake spares other men, how shall He not for our sakes do this same thing?" In Hom. xli. in 1 Cor. p. 393. B, Chrys. uses for illustration Job's sacrifice for his sons, and adds, "For God is wont to grant favours to others in behalf of others, ἑτέροις ὑπὲρ ἑτέρων χαρίζεσθαι. And this Paul shewed, saying, 'ἵνα ἐν πολλῷ προσέσθῃ, κ. τ. λ. 2 Cor. i. 11.' But here the reference seems to be to 2 Cor. ii. 10, "To whom ye forgive anything, I forgive also; for if I forgave anything, to whom I forgave it, for your sakes forgave I it in the person of Christ."—St. Chrysostom constantly teaches, as here, that the souls of the

greater need has he of alms, not only for this reason, but because the alms has not the same virtue now, but far less: ACTS IX.
28—38. for it is not all one to have done it himself, and to have another do it for him; therefore, the virtue being less, let us by quantity make it the greatest. Let us not busy ourselves about monuments, not about memorials. This is the greatest memorial: set widows to stand around him. Tell them his name: bid them all make for him their prayers, their supplications: this will overcome God: though it have not been done by the man himself, yet because of him another is the author of the almsgiving. Even this pertains to the mercy of God: widows standing around and weeping know how to rescue, not indeed from the present death, but from that which is to come. Many have profited even by the alms done by others on their behalf: for even if they have not got perfect (deliverance), at least they have found some comfort thence. If it be not so, how are children saved? And yet there, the children themselves contribute nothing, but their parents do all: and often have women had their children given them, though the children themselves contributed nothing. Many are the ways God gives us to be saved, only let us not be negligent.

How then if one be poor? say you. Again I say, the [4.] greatness of the alms is not estimated by the quantity given, but by the purpose. Only give not less than thine ability, and thou hast paid all. How then, say you, if he be desolate and a stranger, and have none (to care for him)? And why is it that he has none, I ask you? In this very thing thou sufferest thy desert, that thou hast none to be thus thy friend, thus virtuous. This is so ordered on purpose that, though we be not ourselves virtuous, we may study to have virtuous companions and friends—both wife, and son, and friend—as reaping some good even through them, a slight gain indeed, but yet a gain. If thou make it thy chief object not to marry a rich wife, but to have a devout wife, and a

In the old text, wife and daughter are mentioned first, as the persons most apt to perform these offices of religion: in ἀγαγέσθαι there is a zeugma; “to take to wife, and to have wife and daughter, &c.”

HOMIL. XXI. religious daughter, thou shalt gain this consolation; if thou study to have thy son not rich but devout, thou shalt also gain this consolation. If thou make these thine objects, then wilt thyself be such (as they). This also is part of virtue, to choose such friends, and such a wife and children. Not in vain are the oblations made for the departed, not in vain the prayers, not in vain the almsdeeds: all those things hath the Spirit ordered*, wishing us to be benefited one by the other. See: he is benefited, thou art benefited: because of him, thou hast despised wealth, being set on to do some generous act: both thou art the means of salvation to him, and he to thee the occasion of thine almsgiving. Doubt not that he shall get some good thereby. It is not for nothing that the Deacon cries, "For them that are fallen asleep in Christ, and for them that make the memorials for them." It is not the Deacon that utters this voice, but the Holy Ghost: I speak of the Gift. What sayest thou? There is the Sacrifice in hand, and all things laid out duly ordered: Angels are there present, Archangels, the Son of God is there: all stand with such awe, and in the general silence those stand by, crying aloud: and thinkest thou that what is done, is done in vain? Then is not the rest also all in vain, both the oblations made for the Church, and those for the priests, and for the whole body? God forbid! but all is done with faith. What thinkest thou of the oblation made for the martyrs, of the calling made in that hour, martyrs though they be, yet even "for martyrs"?* It is a great honour to be named in the presence of the Lord, when that memorial is celebrating, the dread Chrysostom the words are, "Ἐνι προσφέρομεν σοι τὴν λογικὴν ταύτην λατρίαν ὑπὲρ τῶν ἐν πίστει ἀναπαυμένων προπατέρων, πατέρων, πατριαρχῶν, προφητῶν, ἀποστόλων, κηρύκων, ἐδωγελιστῶν, μαρτύρων κ. τ. λ. Sacrifice, the unutterable mysteries. For just as, so long as the Emperor is seated, is the time for the petitioner to effect what he wishes to effect, but when he is risen, say what he will, it is all in vain, so at that time, while the celebration of the mysteries is going on, it is for all men the greatest honour to be held worthy of mention. For look: then is declared the dread mystery, that God gave Himself for the world: along with that mystery he seasonably puts Him in mind of them that have sinned. For as when the celebration of Emperors' victories is in progress, then, as many as had their part in the victory receive their meed of praise, while at the same time as many as are in bonds are set at liberty in honour of the occasion; but when the occasion is past, he that did not obtain this favour then, no longer gets any: so is it here likewise: this is the time of celebration of a victory. For, saith it, so often as ye eat this bread, ye do shew forth the Lord's death. Then let us not approach indifferently, nor imagine that these things are done in any ordinary sort. But it is in another sense<sup>b</sup> that we make mention of martyrs, and this, for assurance that the Lord is not dead: and this, for a sign that death has received its death's blow, that death itself is dead. Knowing these things, let us devise what consolations we can for the departed, instead of tears, instead of laments, instead of tombs, our alms, our prayers, our oblations, that both they and we may attain unto the promised blessings, by the grace and loving-kindness of His only-begotten Son our Lord Jesus Christ, with Whom to the Father and the Holy Ghost together be glory, dominion, honour, now and ever, world without end. Amen.

HOMILY XXII.

ACTS x. 1—4.

There was a certain man in Caesarea called Cornelius, a centurion of the band called the Italian band, a devout man, and one that feared God with all his house, which gave much alms to the people, and prayed to God alway. He saw in a vision evidently about the ninth hour of the day an angel of God coming in to him, and saying unto him, Cornelius. And when he looked on him, he was afraid, and said, What is it, Lord? And he said unto him, Thy prayers and thine alms are come up for a memorial before God.

THIS man is not a Jew, nor of those under the Law, but he had already forestalled our manner of life. Observe, thus far, two persons, both of high rank, receiving the faith, the eunuch at Gaza and this man; and the pains taken on behalf of these men. But do not imagine that this was because of their high rank: God forbid! it was because of their piety. For that the Scripture mentions their dignified stations, is to shew the greatness of their piety; since it is more wonderful when a person being in a position of wealth and power is such as these were. What makes the praise of the former is, his undertaking so long a journey, and this when there was no (festival) season to require it*, and his reading on his road, and while riding in his chariot, and his beseeching Philip, and numberless other points: and the great praise of the latter is, that he makes alms and prayers, * καὶ τὸ, μὴ δὲ καιροῦ καλοῦντος. As above, xix. p. 266. Chrys. remarks, that there was no festival which required the presence of the eunuch at Jerusalem. Probably he was led to this by the circumstance, that the incident of the eunuch occurs after the Martyrdom of St. Stephen and the Conversion of St. Paul, i.e. according to the Church Calendar, between the 26th of December and the 25th of January.

and is a just man, holding such a command. The reason <sup>Acts</sup> why the writer notifies the man so fully, is, that none may <sup>X.</sup> say that the Scripture history relates falsehoods: [Cornelius, <sup>1-3.</sup> v. 1. he says, a centurion] of the band called the Italian band. A band, σπεῖρα, is what we now call a numerous<sup>b</sup>. A devout v. 2. man, he says, and one that feared God with all his house: that you may not imagine that it is because of his high station that these things are done.—When Paul was to be brought over, there is no angel, but the Lord Himself: and He does not send him to some great one, but to a very ordinary person<sup>c</sup>: but here, on the contrary, He brings the chief Apostle (to these Gentiles), not sends them to him: herein condescending to their weakness, and knowing how such persons need to be treated. As indeed on many occasions we find Christ Himself hasting (to such), as being more infirm. Or (it may be) because (Cornelius) was not able himself to leave his home. But here again is a high commendation of alms, just as was there given by means of Tabitha. A devout man, it says, and one that feared God with all his house. Let us hear this, whoever of us neglect them of our own house, whereas this man was careful of his soldiers also. And that gave alms, it says, to all the people. Both his doctrines and his life were right. He saw in a v. 3. vision evidently, about the ninth hour of the day, an angel of God coming in to him, and saying unto him, Cornelius. Why does he see the angel? This also was in order to the full assurance of Peter, or rather, not of him, but of the others, the weaker ones. At the ninth hour, when he was released from his cares and was at quiet, when he was engaged in prayers and compunction. And when he looked v. 4. on him, he was afraid. Observe how what the angel speaks

The same hand substitutes, (for explanation of the plural, αὐτῶν τῇ ἀσθενείᾳ.) “as He did Philip to the eunuch, condescending to their infirmity.” And in the following sentence; “Since Christ Himself is often seen going to them that are ill, and in their own persons unable to come to Him.”

- moderation, just so far as served to fix his attention. /Then also the words relieved him of his fear. The fear roused him: the praise mitigated what was unpleasant in the fear. Thy prayers, saith he, and thine alms are come up for a memorial before God. And now send men to Joppa, and call for one Simon, whose surname is Peter. Lest they should come to a different person, he designates the man not only by his surname, but by the place. And the same, saith he, is lodging with one Simon a tanner, who hath his house by the sea side. Do you mark how the Apostles, for love of solitude and quiet, affected the retired quarters of the cities? [With one Simon a tanner]: how then if it chanced that there was another? Behold, there is another token, his dwelling by the sea side. All three tokens could not possibly coincide (elsewhere). He does not tell him for what purpose, that he may not take off the intense desire, but he leaves him to an eager and longing expectation of what he shall hear. And<sup>d</sup> when the Angel which spake unto Cornelius was departed, he called two of his household servants, and a devout soldier of them that waited on him continually; and when he had declared all these things unto them, he sent them to Joppa. Do you see, that it is not without a purpose that the writer says this? (it shews) that those also who waited on him continually were such as he. And when he had declared the whole matter unto them: observe the unassuming character of the man: for he does not say, Call Peter to me: but, in order also to induce (him to come), he declared the whole matter:—this was so ordered by Providence;—for he did not choose to use the authority of his rank to fetch Peter to him; therefore he declared the matter; such was the moderation of the man: and yet no great notion was to be formed of one lodging with a tanner. And on the morrow, as they journeyed, and drew nigh to the city—observe how the Spirit connects the times: no sooner than this, and no later, He causes this to take place—Peter about the sixth hour went up upon the house-top to pray: that is, privately and quietly, as in an upper chamber. And he became very hungry, and would have eaten; but while they made ready, there fell upon him a trance. What means this expression, ἔκστασις, trance? Rather, there was presented to him a kind of spiritual <sup>1</sup>view: the soul, so to say, <sup>2</sup>was caused to be out of the body. And saw heaven opened, and, knit at the four corners, a certain vessel descending unto him, as it had been a great sheet, and let down to the earth: wherein were all manner of fourfooted beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air. And there came a voice to him, Rise, Peter; kill, and eat. But Peter said, Not so, Lord; for I have never eaten any thing that is common or unclean. And the voice spake unto him again the second time, What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common. This was done thrice: and the vessel was received up again

* τί ἔστιν ἔκστασις. Because the word also, and more commonly, means the being beside oneself, amazed, or stupified by excess of grief, Chrys. explains that it denotes the being rapt out of the bodily consciousness: it was not that Peter was out of his mind, but his soul out of the body. (S. Augustin. Sermon. 266. §. 6. "orantis mens alienata est; sed ab infimis ad superna; non ut deviares, sed ut videret.") Comp. Exp. in Psal. 116. t. v. p. 312. D. "In Gen. ii. 21. the ἔκστασις which fell upon Adam denotes a kind of insensibility, for ἔκστ. means τὸ ἔξω ἑαυτοῦ γενέσθαι: and in Acts x. 10. it denotes κáρον τινα καὶ τὸ ἔξω αἰσθήσεως γενέσθαι: and everywhere ἔκστασις implies this. It comes, either by the act of God, or because the excess of calamity causes a kind of stupor, κáρος. For calamity likewise is wont to occasion ἔκστ. and κáρος." Didymus (or some other author) in the Catena: "They that have chosen to be disciples of frantic women, I mean, they of Phrygia (the Montanists), affirm that the Prophets, when possessed by the Holy Ghost, were not in a condition to be strictly cognizant of their own thoughts, being borne away from themselves at the instant of prophesying. And they think to confirm their error by this Scripture, which says, that Peter ἐξεστακίναι. But let these silly ones, these indeed frantic persons, know that this is a word of many significations. It denotes the amazement of wonder: and the being rapt above sensible objects, led on to spiritual things: and the being beside oneself (παράκοπτεν)—which is not to be said either of Peter or of the Prophets. Nay Peter, in his trance, was strictly cognizant, so as to report what he had seen and heard, and to be sensible of what the things shewn were symbolical. The same is to be said of all the Prophets—that their consciousness kept pace with the things presented to their view." Comp. on this subject, S. Epiphanius. adv. Hæres. He himself also says, I have never eaten: not being himself afraid—far be the thought from us—but it is so contrived by the Spirit, in order that he may have it to say in answer to those accusing him, that he did object: for it was altogether necessary for them to observe the Law. He was in the act of being sent to the Gentiles: therefore that these also may not accuse him, see how many things are contrived (by the Providence of God). For, that it may not seem to be a mere fancy, [this was done thrice]. I<sup>h</sup> said, saith he, Not so,

ch. 11,
10, 14.

<sup>c</sup> St. Chrysostom's exposition, as we gather it from this and the following Homily, seems to be in substance as follows. St. Peter was not ignorant of, nor averse to, the counsel of God in respect of the free admission of the Gentiles. He did not need instruction on this point for himself, and the vision was not so much intended for his instruction or assurance, as for reproof to the Jewish believers who were not yet enlightened in this mystery. (Even the token which was given in the descent of the Holy Ghost on Cornelius before baptism, was for them, not for him.) He needed but a command, to act upon it without hesitation. But because this would certainly be regarded as a flagrant offence by the weaker brethren, for their sakes this symbolical lesson is given: and the circumstances are so contrived (οικονομῆται) as to silence their objections. It is so ordered, that the matter of accusation is put by them in this form, Thou didst go in to men uncircumcised, and didst eat with them. Had they said, "Thou didst baptize such," St. Peter could not have alleged that he did it reluctantly: but to the charge of unclean eating he had his answer: "I did object; I said, Not so, Lord, for nothing common or unclean, &c." This carried with it his exculpation from the whole matter of offence: for they would apply it thus—"he baptized these Gentiles, but not without objecting to the command; not until his reluctance was overruled," though in fact St. Peter had no such reluctance.

<sup>e</sup> Τοῦτο πάλυ αὐτοῖς προσέτατο (B. and Sav. marg. παρίστατο) Erasmus. Et hoc illis valde frequens erat. Ben. Et illis admodum cordi erat. But Hom. xxiv. 2. ὅνα μὴ προστῇ (προσστῇ) αὐτοῖς, Ben. remarks that προσίστασθαι in the sense 'offendere' is frequent in St. Chrysostom. It properly applies to food against which the stomach rises: "to raise the gorge, to be nauseous, disgusting, offensive." See Field Annotat. in Hom. ad Matt. p. 319. B.—Τοῦτο, i. e. the going in to men uncircumcised, and eating with them. Comp. Hom. li. in Matt. p. 524. A. "Such was the strict observance in respect of meats, that, even after the Resurrection, Peter said, Not so, Lord, &c. For though he said this for the sake of others, and so as to leave himself a justification against those who should accuse him, and that he may shew that he did object, (ἔρι καὶ ἀρεινὸν), and for all this, the point was not conceded to him, still it shews how much was made of this matter."

<sup>h</sup> Here besides the clause, this was done thrice, something is wanting: e. g. "And observe how Peter relates the matter, and justifies himself," viz. in xi. 8. I said, saith he, Not so, Lord, for nothing common or unclean hath ever entered my mouth. Here for εἰπον, B. has εἶπεν, which is adopted

Lord, for I have never eaten aught common or unclean.— Acts
And the voice came unto him, What God hath cleansed, that X.
call not thou common. It seems indeed to be spoken to 9—16.
 him, but the whole is meant for the Jews. For if the teacher is rebuked, much more these. The earth then, this is what the linen sheet denotes, and the wild beasts in it, are they of the Gentiles, and the command, Kill and eat, denotes that he must go to them also; and that this thing is thrice done, denotes baptism. What God hath cleansed, saith it, call not thou common. Great daring! Wherefore<sup>1</sup> did he object? That none may say that God was proving him, as in the case of Abraham, this is why he says, [Not so, Lord, etc.] not gainsaying—just as to Philip also He said, How many loaves have ye? Not to learn, but tempting, or proving him<sup>1</sup>. And yet it was the same (Lord) that had discoursed by the modern text, in which the whole passage is refashioned thus: "Since then they would all accuse him as a transgressor, and this was altogether offensive to them, of necessity it is managed (οικον.) that he says, I never ate: not being himself afraid, God forbid! but, as I said, being managed (οικονομώμενος) by the Spirit, that he may have a justification to those accusing him, namely, that he did object: for they made a great point of keeping the Law. He was sent to the Gentiles: therefore, that these also may not have to accuse him, as I said before, these things are contrived, or also, that it may not seem to be a fancy, he said, Not so, Lord, &c."

<sup>1</sup> St. Chrys. seems here to be contravening a different exposition. He will not allow that the vision was meant for instruction to St. Peter, as if he were in ignorance up to this time of the counsel of God concerning the Gentiles. Let it not be said, that like as God did tempt Abraham, so He was putting Peter to the proof whether he would obey the call to the Gentiles, as if Peter understood the vision in that sense. Had he so understood the command, Kill and eat, he would not have objected; for he could not be either ignorant or unwilling. But he did not so understand it, and his objection was solely to the matter of eating. And as he needed not the lesson, (it was intended for others:) so neither did God need to learn his willingness. When God tempts, or proves, it is not to learn something that He did not know before; as, when Christ said to Philip, Whence shall we buy bread that these may eat? this He said tempting, or, proving him, for He Himself knew what He would do. He put that question to Philip that he might the more admire the greatness of the miracle which He was about to work. (see note j.) But nothing of the kind can be said here; the case is not parallel: the command to baptize the Gentiles would not surprise Peter; he expected no less from the beginning.—His objection, then, was to the thing itself, the command, Kill and eat. And no wonder, for the same Lord had in the Law strictly commanded to distinguish between clean and unclean, while there in the sheet were animals of all sorts indiscriminately.

 "What meaneth, Tempting, or, proving him? was He ignorant what would be said by him? This cannot be said, . . . We may learn the meaning from the Old Testament. For there also it is said, After these things God did tempt Abraham, &c. He did not say this in order to learn by the proof whether he would obey or not—how should it be so? for He knoweth all things before they come into existence: but on both occasions it is spoken after the manner of men. As, when it is said, He searcheth the hearts of men, it indicates the search, not of ignorance, but of perfect knowledge; so when it is said, He tempted, tried, or proved, it

But in that sheet were also [all the] fourfooted beasts [of the earth: the clean with the unclean]. And<sup>k</sup> for all this, v.17,18. he knew not [what it meant]. Now while Peter doubted in himself what this vision which he had seen should mean, behold, the men which were sent from Cornelius had made enquiry for Simon's house, and stood before the gate, and called, and asked whether Simon, which was surnamed Peter, were lodged there.—But while Peter, it says, doubted in himself, the men come at the right moment to solve his doubt: just as (the Lord) suffered Joseph first to be perturbed in mind, and then sends the Angel: for the soul with ease accepts the solution, when it has first been in perplexity. His perplexity neither lasts long (when it did occur), nor (did it occur) before this, but just at the moment when they asked whether he were lodging there. While Peter thought on the vision, the Spirit said unto him, Behold, three men seek thee. Arise therefore, and get thee down, and go with them, doubting nothing: for I have sent them. And this again is a plea for Peter in answer to the disciples, that he did doubt, and was instructed to doubt nothing. For I, saith He, have sent them. Great is the authority of the Spirit! What God doth, this the Spirit is said to do. Not so the Angel, but having first said, Thy prayers and thine alms [have ascended, for a memorial before God,] to shew means no other than that He perfectly knew.—Or, it may mean, that He made the person more approved: as Abraham there, so Philip by this question, leading him into the sure knowledge of the sign:" i. e. bringing more home to his mind the greatness of the miracle, by leading him in the first place to estimate the utter inadequacy of the means.

<sup>k</sup> Either this refers to the clause, This was done thrice, &c. which should be inserted; or, the connexion may be—This very circumstance of the clean and unclean being together in the sheet, (as in the Ark,) might have led him to an apprehension of the thing symbolized, viz. that he was not commanded to kill and eat the unclean with the clean, (by the same Lord who of old had commanded a distinction of meats,) but that the time was come to baptize all nations without respect of persons. But, obvious as it may seem, St. Peter was still ignorant what it meant: as the Writer adds, And while Peter was at a loss to know what the vision should mean, &c.—In E. (Edd.) the whole passage from "that this is thrice done, denotes baptism," is refashioned thus: "Not so, Lord, for I have never eaten ought common or unclean. And why, it may be asked, did he object? That none may say that God was tempting him, as in the case of Abraham, when he was ordered to offer up his son as a sacrifice: as in the case of Philip, when he was asked by Christ, How many loaves have ye? not that he may learn, [did He so ask,] but proving him. And yet in the Law Moses had distinctly enjoined concerning clean and unclean, both of land and sea: and yet for all this he knew not." that he is sent from thence, [then he adds, And now send ACTS X. 17-24. men, etc.:] the Spirit not so, but, For I have sent them. v. 21. 22. Then Peter went down to the men which were sent unto him from Cornelius; and said, Behold, I am he whom ye seek: what is the cause wherefore ye are come? And they said, Cornelius the centurion, a just man, and one that feareth God, and of good report among all the nation of the Jews, was warned from God by an holy angel to send for thee into his house, and to hear words of thee. They speak his praises, so as to persuade him that an Angel has in fact appeared unto him. Then called he them in<sup>1</sup>, (b) that they may suffer no harm, and lodged them: thenceforth he without scruple takes his meals with them. v. 23. 24. And on the morrow Peter went away with them, and certain brethren from Cæsarea accompanied him. And the morrow after, they entered into Cæsarea. The man was a person of note, and it was in a city of note that he then was.

(a) But let us look over again what has been said. For if, though the case be so, they are still offended, if this had not been the case, what would not have been the consequence! But mark the greatness of the assurance. (c) To this end<sup>a</sup> all is done (in the way it is done), and the affair takes its beginning from Judæa. (d) [He saw in a vision, evidently, etc.] v. 3. It was not in his sleep that the Angel appeared to him, but

<sup>a</sup> ἵνα ὅρα πόση ἀσφάλεια, i. e. how it is made infallibly certain, that it was the purpose of God to admit the Gentiles without circumcision. It might indeed be inserted in (b), after συνδιατᾶται: "he has no scruples—but mark the greatness of the assurance he has received." In the modern text, the connexion is, "He called <sup>o</sup> Here after the clause, οὕτως αὐτῷ προσέειπεν, (meaning, as afterwards explained, that he did not notice the Angel until he spoke,) A. B. C. have, λέγει δὲ ὁ ἄγγελος κ. τ. λ. Edd. 'Ἄλλ' ἴδωμεν ἔκωθεν τὰ εἰρημένα. Καὶ εἶπεν ὁ ἄγγελος κ. τ. λ.

<sup>p</sup> The old text: "And thy prayers, saith he. So far, &c." Edd. "And send for Simon, who is called Peter. So far, &c."

<sup>q</sup> The text is defective here. He seems to be commenting upon the variations of the different narratives: viz. the writer himself v. 6. mentions only the command to send for Peter. (p. 314. note d.) The messengers v. 22. add, "And to hear words of thee." Cornelius, v. 32. "who, when he cometh, shall speak unto thee." St. Peter 11, 14. "who shall tell thee words, whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved." "On the other hand," he says, "neither does Peter, though he is more full on this point, relate all that the Angel said, but gives only the substance." See the comment on 11, 14.

<sup>r</sup> The modern text, omitting this clause, and the comment, inserts the rest of the verse, Peter went up, &c.: and has below, But that Peter may not be in perplexity too long, he hears a voice saying, Rise, Peter, kill and eat. But the meaning is, The Spirit caused the vision to take place when they were near the city, that Peter might not be too long in doubt: as above, on the same clause, "Observe how the Spirit connects the times, &c."

the thing taking place was of God, (the circumstances made evident, namely,) both that he sees it (descending) from above, and that he is in a trance; and, that the voice comes from thence, and the thrice confessing that the creatures there were unclean, and its coming from thence, and being drawn back thither, (all this) is a mighty token of the cleanness (imparted to them).—But why is this done? For<sup>3.]</sup> the sake of those thereafter, to whom he is about to relate it. For to himself it had been said, Go not into the way of the Gentiles. * * For if Paul needed both (to give) circumcision, and (to offer) sacrifice, much more (was some assurance needed) then, in the beginning of the Preaching, while they were as yet weaker.—Observe<sup>5.</sup> too how he did not at once receive them. For, it says, they called, and asked, whether <sup>Mat.10, Acts 16, 3.21,16.</sup> v. 18.

καὶ τὸ τῆς τοῦτο γενέσθαι, καὶ τὸ οὐρανὸν ἀνεωχθῆναι, καὶ τὸ ἐκείθεν κ.τ.λ., and at the end, τοῦ θεῶν εἶναι τὸ πρᾶγμα for καθαρότητος.—Above, he had said that the sheet was a symbol of the world; now he adds, that the command Kill and eat denotes the Gospel, to be preached universally: that the descent of the sheet from heaven, and the circumstance of Peter's being in a spiritual trance, shews that the thing was of God—not a φαντασία. Again; that it is all done thrice, denotes Baptism: thrice the Voice says, Kill and eat: thrice Peter confesses that the creatures are unclean: thrice it is declared that God hath cleansed them: nay, thrice these unclean creatures are let down from heaven, and drawn up thither again: a mighty proof that they are now clean, and of the kingdom of Heaven.

<sup>6</sup> It was remarked above, that St. Chrysostom's exposition proceeds upon the assumption, that St. Peter did not need the instruction for himself. Here the reporter has not fully expressed his meaning: which should be to this effect. "Since it had been said at the outset to Peter and the other Apostles, Go not into the way of the Gentiles, though after the Resurrection they were commanded to baptize all nations, it is no marvel that the less enlightened brethren needed some strong assurance on this behalf. And if at a later time, we find Paul, to conciliate the Jewish believers, causing Timothy to be circumcised and himself offering sacrifice, much more was some condescension to their infirmity needed now."—Didymus in the Catena puts the question, "How was it that Peter needed a revelation in the matter of Cornelius, when the Lord after his Resurrection had expressly ordered to baptize all the nations?" or how came it that the Apostles in Jerusalem, having heard of the affair of Cornelius, disputed with Peter?" To which he answers: "Peter did undoubtedly need the revelation; for he knew not that the distinction of circumcision and uncircumcision was to cease: knew not for certain that the Lord meant the Gentiles to be baptized apart from the visible worship under the Law, until the Lord manifested this mystery to him, convicting him both by the emblem of the sheet, and by the faith and grace of the Holy Spirit given to the Gentiles, that in Christ Jesus there is no distinction of Jew and Greek: of which thing because the Apostles at Jerusalem were ignorant, therefore they contended with Peter, until they also learnt the hidden riches of God's mercy over all mankind." St. Cyril. Alex., also, c. Julian. (ibid.) explains, that "Peter was fain to dwell in the Jewish customs, and, in a manner, was loath to go on to the better, because he was overawed by the types: therefore he is corrected by this vision."

<sup>7</sup> E. D. F. Edd. omit this clause, see note x: and A. B. for οὐδὲ . . . ἐδέξατο have οὐδὲν . . . ἐδέξατο, which is evidently corrupt. "Neither did he at once receive these Gentiles: not until the Spirit expressly commanded him."

* So Cat. and the Mss. except E., which has ὁ τοὺς γείτονας ἡρώτων, and so Œcumen. But the meaning seems to be, that not expecting to find so mean a house, and thinking they might have come wrong, they asked below, in the street, i.e. inquired of the neighbours.

Cat. μὴ καταφρόνησας, for which Sav. marg. has ὡς ἂν εἴποιεν, μὴ καταφρ., is corrupt: perhaps it should be μὴ νομίσας ὅτι καταφρόνησέ σε οὐχ ὡς κ. τ. λ.

Such are the pains taken for the bringing of Cornelius to the faith, that both an angel is sent, and the Spirit works, and the chief of the Apostles is fetched to him, and such a vision is shewn, and, in short, nothing is left undone. How many centurions were there not besides, and tribunes, and kings, and none of them obtained what this man did! Hear, all ye that are in military commands, all ye that stand beside kings. A just man, it says, fearing God; <sup>v. 2. and</sup> devout; and what is more* than all, with all his house. Not as we: (who,) that our servants may be afraid of us, do every thing, but not that they may be devout. And<sup>b</sup> over the domestics too, so * * . Not so this man; but [he was one that feared God] with all his house, for he was as the <sup>v. 2.</sup> common father of those with him, and of all the others (under his command). But observe what (the soldier) says himself. For, fearing * * , he adds this also: well reported of by all the nation. For what if he was uncircumcised? Nay, but those give him a good report. Nothing like alms: great is the virtue of this practice, when the alms is poured forth from pure stores; for it is like a fountain discharging mud, when it issues from unjust stores, but when from just gains, it is as a limpid and pure stream in a paradise, sweet meaning to be, But they being there present, would have heard from Cornelius an account of all that had happened to him. Edd. from E. D. F. ἄλλως δὲ καὶ ἐκεῖ παρόντες μᾶλλον αὐτοῦ ἤκουσαν ἂν. "And besides by being there present they would the more hear him (Peter)," what he had to say.

<sup>a</sup> The modern text: "and what is greater, that he was such with all his house. So intent was he, and so set upon this, that he not only well ordered his own affairs, but also over his household (ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ) he did the same. For not as we, who, &c."

feared God with all his house, as being the common father, not only of all who were with him, but also of the soldiers under him." In the next sentence, Ὅρα δὲ τί φησὶν καὶ αὐτός, the meaning seems to be, "Observe what is said of him by the soldier whom Cornelius sent: A just man, and one that feareth God: and then—for fearing (lest Peter should refuse to come to him, as being a Gentile) he adds this—and well reported of by all the nation of the Jews." Edd. from E. alone: "But hear also what they say besides: for of necessity that is added, Well reported of by all the nation, that none may say, What, if he was uncircumcised? Even those, saith he, give him a good report. Why then, there is nothing like alms; or rather great is the virtue of this thing, when, &c."

HOMIL.
XXII. to the sight, sweet to the touch, both light and cool, when given in the noon-day heat. Such is alms. Beside this fountain, not poplars and pines, nor cypresses, but other plants than these, and far better, of goodly stature: friendship with God, praise with men, glory to Godward, goodwill from all; blotting out of sins, great boldness, contempt of wealth. [This is the fountain] by which the plant of love is nourished: for nothing is so wont to nourish love, as the being merciful: it makes its branches to lift themselves on
 Gen. 2, high. This fountain is better than that in Paradise; a 10. fountain, not dividing into four heads, but reaching unto John 4, heaven itself: this gives birth to that river which springeth
 14. up into eternal life: on this let Death light, and like a spark it is extinguished by the fountain: such, wherever it drops, are the mighty blessings it causes. This quenches, even as a spark, the river of fire: this so strangles that

 44. gnash his teeth. Of the water of this, let there be dropped upon the chains, and it dissolves them: let it but touch the fire-brands<sup>c</sup>, it quenches all.—A fountain does not give out streams for a while and anon run dry,—else must it be no more a fountain,—but ever gushes: so let our fountain give out more copiously of the streams of mercy (in alms). This cheers him that receives: this is alms, to give out not only a copious, but a perennial, stream. If thou wouldest that God rain down His mercy upon thee as from fountains, have thou also a fountain. And<sup>d</sup> yet there is no comparison (between God's fountain and thine): for if thou open the mouths of this fountain, such are the mouths of God's Fountain as to surpass every abyss. God does but seek to get an opportunity on our part, and pours forth from His storehouses His blessings. When He expends, when He lavishes, then is He rich, then is He affluent. Large

If then, &c."—Below, "Ὅταν ἀναλίσκῃ, θῶν δαπάνῃ, κ. τ. λ. in itself, may perhaps be better referred to the giver of alms: "when (one) expends, when one lavishes (alms), &c." but in that case the connexion is obscure.

is the mouth of that fountain : pure and limpid its water. ACTS
If thou stop not up the fountain here, neither wilt thou stop up that fountain.—Let no unfruitful tree stand beside it, that it may not waste its spray. Hast thou wealth? Plant not poplars there : for such is luxury : it consumes much, and shews nothing for it in itself, but spoils the fruit. Plant not a pine-tree—such is wantonness in apparel, beautiful only to the sight, and useful for nothing—nor yet a fir-tree, nor any other of such trees as consume indeed, but are in no sort useful. Set it thick with young shoots : plant all that is fruitful, in the hands of the poor, all that thou wilt. Nothing richer than this ground. Though small the reach of the hand, yet the tree it plants starts up to heaven and stands firm. This it is to plant. For that which is planted on the earth will perish, though not now, at any rate a hundred years hence. Thou plantest many trees, of which thou shalt not enjoy the fruit, but ere thou canst enjoy it, death comes upon thee. This tree will give thee its fruit then, when thou art dead.—If thou plant, plant not in the maw of gluttony, that the fruit end not in the draught-house : but plant thou in the pinched belly, that the fruit may start up to heaven. Refresh the straitened soul of the poor, lest thou pinch thine own roomy soul.—See you not, that the plants which are overmuch watered at the root decay, but grow when watered in moderation? Thus also drench not thou thine own belly, that the root of the tree decay not : water that which is thirsty, that it may bear fruit. If thou water in moderation, the sun will not wither them, but if in excess, then it withers them : such is the nature of the sun. In all things, excess is bad ; wherefore let us cut it off, that we also may obtain the things we ask for.—Fountains, it is said, rise on the most elevated spots. Let us be elevated in soul, and our alms will flow with a rapid stream : the elevated soul cannot but be merciful, and the merciful cannot but be elevated. For he that despises wealth, is higher than the root of evils.—Fountains are oftenest found in solitary places : let us withdraw our soul from the crowd, and alms will gush out with us. Fountains, the more they are cleaned, the more copiously they flow : so with us, the more we spend, the more all good

HOMIL. XXII. grows.—He that has a fountain, has nothing to fear: then neither let us be afraid. For indeed this fountain is serviceable to us for drink, for irrigation, for building, for every thing. Nothing better than this draught: it is not possible for this to inebriate. Better to possess such a fountain, than to have fountains running with gold. Better than all gold-bearing soil is the soul which bears this gold. For it advances us, not into these earthly palaces, but into those above. The gold becomes an ornament to the Church of Eph. 6, God. Of this gold is wrought the sword of the Spirit, the 17. sword by which the dragon is beheaded. From this fountain come the precious stones which are on the King's head. Then let us not neglect so great wealth, but contribute our alms with largeness, that we may be found worthy of the mercy of God, by the grace and tender compassion of His only-begotten Son, with Whom to the Father and Holy Ghost together be glory, dominion, honour, now and ever, world without end. Amen.

HOMILY XXIII.

ACTS x. 23, 24.

Then called he them in, and lodged them. And on the morrow Peter went away with them, and certain brethren from Joppa accompanied him. And the morrow after they entered into Cæsarea. And Cornelius waited for them, and had called together his kinsmen and near friends.

[HE called them in, and lodged them.] Good, that first he gives the men friendly treatment, after the fatigue of their journey, and makes them at home with him; [and on the morrow, sets out with them]. And certain accompany him: this too, as Providence ordered it, that they should be witnesses afterwards when Peter would need to justify himself. And Cornelius was waiting for them, and had called together his kinsmen and near friends. This is the part of a friend, this the part of a devout man, that where such blessings are concerned, he takes care that his near friends shall be made partakers of all. Of course (his near friends), those in whom he had ever full confidence; fearing, with such an interest at stake, to entrust the matter to others. In my opinion, it was by Cornelius himself that both friends and kinsmen had been brought to a better mind. And as Peter v. 25. was coming in, Cornelius met him, and fell down at his feet, and worshipped him. This, both to teach the others, and by way of giving thanks to God, and shewing his own humility: thereby making it plain, that though he had been commanded, yet in himself he had great piety. What then did Peter? But Peter took him up, saying, Stand up; I v. 26. myself also am a man. Do you mark how, before all else,

HOMIL. (the Apostles) teach them this lesson, not to think great XXIII. things of them? And as he talked with him, he went in,
 v. 27.28. and found many that were come together. And he said unto them, Ye know how that it is an unlawful thing for a man that is a Jew to keep company, or come unto one of another nation; but God hath shewed me that I should not call any man common or unclean. Observe, he straightway speaks of the mercy of God, and points out to them that it is a great grace that God has shewn them. Observe also how while he utters great things, at the same time he speaks modestly. For he does not say, We, being men who do not deign to keep company with any (such), have come to you:
 but what says he? Ye know—God commanded this*—that it is against law to keep company with, or come unto, one of another nation. Then he goes on to say, And to me God has shewn—this he says, that none may account the thanks due to him—that I should call no man—that it may not look like obsequiousness to him, no human being, says he—com-
 v. 29. mon or unclean. Wherefore also—that they may not think the affair a breach of the law on his part, nor (Cornelius) suppose that because he was in a station of command, therefore he had complied, but that they may ascribe all to God,— wherefore also I came without gainsaying as soon as I was sent for: (though) not only to keep company, but even to come unto (him) was not permitted. I ask therefore, for what intent ye have sent for me. Already Peter had heard the whole matter from the soldiers also, but he wishes them first to confess, and to make them amenable to the Faith.
 What then does Cornelius? He does not say, Why, did not the soldiers tell thee? but observe again, how humbly he
 v. 30.31. speaks. For he says, From the fourth day I was fasting until this hour; and at the ninth hour I prayed in my house, and, behold, a man stood before me in bright clothing, and said, Cornelius, thy prayer is heard, and thine alms are come up for a memorial before God. And at the ninth hour, he says, I was praying. It seems to me, that this <sup>Acts</sup> man had also fixed for himself set times of a life under <sup>X.</sup> 27—31. stricter rule, and on certain days<sup>b</sup>. For this is why he says,

<sup>b</sup> Καὶ ἐν τισὶν ἡμέραις so all the Mss. with Cat. (ἐν τισιν ἡμ.) and Œcum. If the text be not corrupt, Chrys. must be understood to interpret ἀπὸ τετάρτης ἡμ. of the fourth day of the week: i. e. Cornelius had anticipated, among other pious observances, this practice also, viz. of the Wednesday fast. Otherwise, there is no intelligible connexion for the following words, Διὰ γὰρ τοῦτο εἶπεν, Ἀπὸ τετάρτης ἡμέρας. This, he says, was an advance in piety: and then it was that the Angel appeared to him. Then he proceeds to argue, that it is not "four days ago," for the time does not amount to that number of days: the day on which Peter arrived was not the fourth, but between that and the day on which Cornelius prayed, there are but two entire days. It seems that this must be St. Chrysostom's meaning, though it is obscured by mistakes of the scribes. B. C. αὐτῇ μίᾳ ἡμέρᾳ καὶ ἣν ἦλθον μίᾳ καὶ τῇ τρίτῃ ἐφάνη ὡς εἶναι δευτέραν μεθ' ἣν προσηύξατο. (A. omits the passage.) E. D. F. Edd. αὐτῇ μίᾳ ἡμέρᾳ καὶ ἣν ἀπῆλθον οἱ πεμφθέντες, μίᾳ καὶ ἣν ἦλθον, μίᾳ καὶ τῇ τετάρτῃ ἐφάνη ὡς εἶναι δευτέραν μεθ' ἣν προσηύξατο. Cat. and Œc. agree with E. D. F. in supplying the clause omitted in B. C., to which however they add παρὰ Κορνηλίου: they have also τετάρτῃ ἐφάνη, but for the last clause they read, ὥσει τρίτην θραν μεθ' ἣν προσηύξατο. But the sense intended by Chrys. should be: "This, the day (on which they left Joppa), is one day (before the day on which Cornelius is speaking): and the day on which the messengers from Cornelius came, one day; (therefore the second day before that on which Cornelius is speaking:) and on the third day (previous) the Angel appeared: so that, exclusively of the day on which Cornelius is speaking, and that on which Cornelius prayed, there are two days." This sense will be satisfied by reading, αὐτῇ μίᾳ ἡμέρᾳ καὶ ἣν ἦλθον οἱ πεμφθέντες παρὰ Κορνηλίου, μίᾳ καὶ τῇ τρίτῃ ἐφάνη ὥστε εἶναι δύο [ἡμέρας] μεθ' ἣν προσηύξατο. The scribes, mistaking both the drift and the method of the calculation, supposed αὐτῇ ἡμ. to mean the day of Peter's arrival: but the day before that was the day on which they came away (ἀπῆλθον) from Joppa, and on the previous day the messengers arrived (ἦλθον), and on the day before that, which is therefore the fourth, the Angel appeared: hence they insert the words καὶ ἣν ἀπῆλθον... μίᾳ, in order to make out the calculation, i. e. to verify the day of the Vision as the fourth day before that on which Cornelius is speaking. So Cat. Œc. and E. D. F. But B. C. retain the original reading, and only mistake the abbreviated form ὥστε εἶναι β' ἡμ., i. e. δύο ἡμέρας, as if it meant the second day, δευτέραν ἡμέραν: which reading, though unintelligible, was retained by the later Editors. But what Chrys. means to say, is, that, not reckoning the day of the vision, and the day of the meeting, there are two whole days: therefore the day of the vision was not "the fourth day hence;" consequently, that it means the fourth day of the week. This hasty and ill-considered interpretation of the expression ἀπὸ τετάρτης ἡμέρας, was suggested by the circumstance that the rule was to fast on the dies stationum, tertiis and quartis stationum, see Tertull. de Jejun. 1. where in defence of the Montanists, who extended the fast beyond the ninth hour, (or 3 p.m.) he says: Arguunt nos quod stationes plerumque in vespere producimus: ib. 10. Æque stationes nostras ut indignas, quasdam vero et in seram constitutas, novitatis nomine incusant, hoc quoque munus et ex arbitrio obendum esse dicentes, et non ultra nonam detinendum, suo scilicet more: i. e. the Catholics maintained, that the fast on these days

HOMIL. From the fourth day. See how great a thing prayer is!
 XXIII. When he advanced in piety, then the Angel appears to him.
 [From the fourth day: i. e. of the week; not "four days ago." For, on the morrow Peter went away with them, and on the morrow after they entered into Cæsarea:] this is one day: and the day on which the persons sent came (to Joppa), one day: and on the third, (the Angel) appeared: so that there are two days after that on which (Cornelius) had been praying. And, behold, a man stood before me in bright clothing: he does not say, An angel, so unassuming is he:
 v.31-33. and said, Cornelius, thy prayer is heard, and thine alms are had in remembrance in the sight of God. Send therefore to Joppa, and call hither Simon, whose surname is Peter: he is lodged in the house of one Simon a tanner by the sea side: who, when he cometh, shall speak unto thee. Immediately therefore I sent to thee; and thou hast well done that thou art come. Now therefore are we all here present before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God. (b) See what faith, what piety! He knew that it was no word of man that Peter spake, when he said, God hath shewn me. Then says the man, We are present to hear all things that are commanded thee of the Lord. (a) Therefore ought not to be compulsory, nor to be prolonged beyond the ninth hour. Epiphani. Exposit. Fid. §. 22. δι' ἑλκεν μὲν τοῦ ἔτους ἡ νηστεία φυλάττεται ἐν τῇ αὐτῇ ἡμέρᾳ καθολικῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ, φησὶ δὲ τετράδι καὶ προσαββάτω ἕως ὥρας ἐννέτης.

* The letters a, b, c, d, mark the order of these portions in B. C. At the end of (a) the clause, We are present, &c. is repeated. In A the order is, a, d, the rest being omitted: in the modern text, a, d, c, b: and the text, Now therefore are we all present, &c. between (c) and (b).—With the interpretation of δεκτός comp. Severianus of Gabala in the Catena on x. 4. οὐκ εἶπεν ἐν παντί εἶναι ὁ ποιῶν δικαιοσύνην σώζεται, ἀλλὰ δεκτός ἐστιν. τούτῳ, ἕως γίνεται τοῦ δεχθῆναι. And S. Chrys. Hom. viii. in 1 Cor. p. 67. C. δεκτός αὐτῷ ἐστὶ τούτῳ, καλεῖ καὶ ἐπισκῆται αὐτὸν πρὸς τὴν ἀλήθειαν. Paul is cited as an instance: persecutor as he was, "yet, because he led a blameless life, and did not these things of human passion, he was both accepted and far outwent all. But if some one should say, 'How is it that such an one, the Greek, kind as he is and good and humane, continues in error?' I answer, that he has a fault of a different kind, vain-glory or sluggishness of mind, or not being in earnest about his salvation, but thinking that all the circumstances of his life are mere chance-medley and hap-hazard. But by him that worketh righteousness, Peter means, him that is blameless in all things (comp. infra p. 333.) . . . . 'How is it then,' you will say, 'that impure persons have been accounted worthy to have the Gospel preached to them (κατηγόρησαν τοῦ κηρύγματος)?' Because they were willing and desirous. For some, even which are in error, He draws, when they become cleansed from their vices; and others coming of their own accord, He repulses not: many also have inherited their piety from their ancestors."

it was that Peter asked, For what intent have ye sent for me? on purpose that he might so speak these very words <sup>X.</sup> 31—38. (d) Then Peter opened his mouth, and said, Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation he that feareth Him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him. That is, be he uncircumcised or circumcised. (c) This also Paul declaring, saith, For there is no respect of persons with God. (e) What then? (it may be asked), is the man yonder in Persia accepted with him? If he be worthy, in this regard he is accepted, <sup>1</sup> that it should be granted him to be brought unto faith. The Eunuch from Ethiopia He overlooked not. 'What shall one say then of the religious men who have been overlooked?' It is not the case, that any (such) ever was overlooked. But what he says is to this effect, that God rejects no man. [In every nation, he that feareth God] and worketh righteousness: (by righteousness) he means, all virtue. Mark, how [2] he subdues all elation of mind in him. That (the Jews) may not seem to be in the condition of persons cast off, (he adds), The word which He sent unto the children of Israel, preaching peace by Jesus Christ: He is Lord of all: this he says also for the sake of those present (of the Jews), that He may persuade them also: this is why he forces Cornelius to speak. He, saith he, is Lord of all. But observe at the very outset, The word, says he, which He sent unto the children of Israel; he gives them the preeminence. Then he adduces (these Gentiles) themselves as witnesses: ye know, says he, the matter which came to pass throughout all Judæa, beginning at Galilee—then he confirms it from this also—after the baptism which John preached—(even) Jesus of Nazareth, how God anointed Him with the Holy Ghost and with power. He does not mean, Ye know Jesus, for they did not know Him, but he speaks of the things done by Him: Who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil: by this<sup>d</sup> he shews that many is unlawful for a man that is a Jew, etc.] And why did he not speak of the linen sheet? Observe Peter's freedom from all vain-glory: but, that he is sent of God, this indeed he mentions; of the manner in which he was sent, he speaks not at present: when the need has arisen, seeing he had said, Ye know that it is unlawful for a man that is a Jew to keep company with, or to come unto, one of another nation, [he simply adds, but to me God hath shewn, etc.] There is nothing of vain-glory here. All ye, he says, know. He makes their knowledge stand surety for him. But Cornelius says, We are present before God to hear all things that are commanded thee of the Lord: not, Before man, but, Before God. This is the way one ought to attend to God's servants. Do you see his awakened mind? do you see how worthy he was of all these things? And Peter, it says, opened his mouth, and said, Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons. This he said also by way of justifying himself with the Jews then present. For, being at the point to commit the Word to these (Gentiles), he first puts this by way of apology. What then? Was He a respecter of persons beforetime? God forbid! For beforetime likewise it was just the same: Every one, as he saith, that feareth Him, and worketh righteousness, would be accepted with Him. As when Paul saith, For when the Gentiles which have not the Law, do by nature the things of the Law. [That feareth God and worketh righteousness:] he assumes<sup>1</sup> both doctrine and manner of life: [is accepted with Him;] for, if He did not overlook the Magi, nor the Ethiopian, nor the thief, nor the harlot, much more them that work righteousness, and are willing, shall He in anywise not overlook. 'What say you then to this, that there are likely persons, men of mild disposition, and yet they will not believe?' Lo, you have yourself named the cause: they will not. But besides the likely person he here speaks of is not this sort of man, but the man that worketh righteousness: that is, the man who in all points is virtuous and irreproachable, when he has the fear of God as

'Yes, and now too,' say you, 'every one would be persuaded, be who he may.' But the signs that are now, are much greater than those, and more wonderful.—Then Peter commences his teaching, and reserves for the Jews<sup>1</sup> the privilege of their birth. The word, he says, which He sent unto the children of Israel, preaching peace, not bringing judgment. He is sent to the Jews also: yet for all this He did not spare them. Preaching peace through Jesus Christ. He is Lord of all. First he discourses of His being Lord and in exceeding elevated terms, seeing he had to deal with a soul more than commonly elevated, and that took all in with ardour. Then he proves how He was Lord of all, from the things which He achieved throughout all Judæa. For ye know, saith he, the matter which came to pass throughout all Judæa: and, what is the wonderful part of it, beginning at Galilee: after the baptism which John preached. First he speaks of His success, and then again he says concerning Him, Jesus of Nazareth. Why, what a stumbling-block, this birth-place!
- v. 36. How<sup>1</sup> God anointed Him with the Holy Ghost and with power. - v. 38.

<sup>1</sup> In the Mss. and Edd. the order is confused. In the old text: "The word—Lord of all. First he discourses—with ardour. Yet for all this He did not spare them. Then he proves how He is Lord of all. Which He sent, preaching good tidings, not bringing judgment. [3.] He is sent from God to the Jews. Then he shews this withal from the things which He achieved, &c." So, with verbal alterations, the modern text, except that it omits the clause, οὐ μὴν οὐδὲ ἄλλω ἀπέλαστο.

<sup>2</sup> Here also the order in the Mss. is confused. "Again proof. How God—with power. Whence does this appear? Who went about—of the devil. Then from the good that He did, and the greatness, &c." The modern text has the same order, and the alterations do not affect the sense.

mayest not imagine<sup>1</sup> aught absurd. Seest thou how far they are from hiding the Cross out of view, nay, that together with the other circumstances they put also the manner? Whom also, it says, they slew by hanging on a tree. And Acts X. 23-43. gave Him, it is added, to be made manifest not to all the people, but to witnesses before ordained of God, even unto us: and yet it was (Christ) Himself that elected them; but this also he refers to God. To the before-ordained, he says, [even to us, who did eat and drink with Him after that He was risen from the dead.] See whence he fetches his assurance of the resurrection. What is the reason that being risen He did no sign, but only ate and drank? Because the Resurrection itself was a great sign, and of this nothing was so much<sup>k</sup> a sign as the eating and drinking. To testify, v. 42. saith he—in a manner calculated to alarm—that they may not have it in their power to fall back upon the excuse of ignorance: and he does not say, ‘that He is the Son of God,’ but, what would most alarm them, [that it is He which is ordained of God, to be the Judge of quick and dead. To Him give all the Prophets witness, &c.] v. 43. When by the terror he has agitated them, then he brings in the pardon, not spoken from himself but from the Prophets. And what is terrifying is from him, what is mild from the Prophets.

All ye that have received this forgiveness, all ye to whom it has been vouchsafed to attain unto faith, learn, I beseech you, the greatness of the Gift, and study not to be insolent to your Benefactor. For we obtained forgiveness, not that we should become worse, but to make us far better and more excellent. Let none say that God is the cause of our evil doings, in that He did not punish, nor take vengeance. If (as it is said) a ruler having taken a murderer, lets him go, say, is he [not]<sup>l</sup> judged to be the cause of the murders afterwards committed? See then, how we expose God to implore you, do not let any man utter such speech as far as we are concerned. Better to be buried ten thousand times over, than that God through us should be so spoken of! The Mat. 27, Jews, we read, said to (Christ) Himself, Thou that destroyest from the Cross: and again, If Thou be the Son of God: but the reproaches here are more grievous than those, that<sup>a</sup> through us He should be called a teacher of wickedness!

 Let us cause the very opposite to be said, by having our approaching to the Baptism of adoption. For great indeed

any lay the blame of your evil doings upon God. For you know what would be said of a magistrate who should let a murderer go unpunished; that he would be held responsible for all the murders that may be afterwards done by that man, or in consequence of his impunity. Dread lest through your misconduct God be thus blasphemed." But—as if Chrysostom's meaning had been, Since God's purpose in forgiving us our sins was, that we should lead more virtuous and holy lives, therefore let none presume to say that God, by forgiving us, is the cause of the evil doings of which we are afterwards guilty—the modern text (E. D. F. Edd.) goes on thus: "For say, if a magistrate, &c. is he judged to be the cause of the murders thereafter committed? By no means. And how is it that we ourselves, while, by the things we dare to do, we expose God to be insulted by godless tongues, do not fear and shudder? For what, &c."

<sup>a</sup> E. D. F. Edd. "Therefore, that it may not be possible for Him through us to be called, &c. and lest by the very fact of His being thus blasphemed, we ourselves become liable to the punishment thereof, (For through you, it is written, My Name is blasphemed among the Gentiles,) let us cause the very opposite to be said, by having our conversation worthy of Him that calleth us, and (worthily) approaching to the Baptism of adoption. For great indeed, &c." In C. it is: "teacher of wickedness. Let us cause the very opposite to be said. For great indeed, &c." B. "teacher of wickedness. For great indeed, &c." But the genuineness of the latter clauses, ἀξίως τοῦ καλοῦντος πολιτευόμενοι καὶ τῇ τῆς υἱοθεσίας προσιώντες βαπτίσματι, which are also needed by the following context, is attested by A. which retains them; for this M<sup>a</sup>. abridges much, but never borrows from the modern text.

thou for the last gasp, like a run-away slave, like a malefactor, Acts X. 34-43. as though it were not thy duty to live unto God? Why dost thou stand affected to Him, as if thou hadst in Him a ruthless, cruel Master? What can be more 'heartless, what 'more miserable, than those who make that the time to receive Baptism? God made thee a friend, and vouchsafed thee all His good things, that thou mayest act the part of a friend. Suppose you had done some man the greatest of wrongs, had insulted him, and brought upon him disgraces without end, suppose you had fallen into the hands of the person wronged, and he, in return for all this, had honoured you, made you partaker of all that he had, and in the assembly of his friends, of those in whose presence he was insulted, had crowned you, and declared that he would hold you as his own begotten son, and then straightway had died: say, would you not have bewailed him? would you not have deemed his death a calamity? would you not have said, Would that he were alive, that I might have it in my power to make the fit return, that I might requite him, that I might shew myself not base to my benefactor? So then, where it is but man, this is how you would act: and where it is God, are you eager to be gone, that you may not requite your benefactor for so great gifts? Nay rather, choose the time for coming to Him so that you shall have it in your power to requite Him like for like. True", say you, but I cannot keep (the gift). Has God commanded impossibilities? Hence it is that all is clean reversed, hence that, all the world over, every thing is marred—because nobody makes it his mark to live after God. Thus those who are yet Catechumens, because they make this their object, (how they may defer baptism to the last,) give themselves no concern about leading an

2. those who were baptized in sickness and fear of death, but afterwards recovered: both which sorts, he says, are alike careless, (the former because baptized in unconscious infancy,) the latter because they did not think to survive, and had no hearty desire to live to the glory of God; 3. those baptized in mature age, and in health; and these also, if at the time their affections were kindled, soon let the flame go out.

HOMIL. XXIII. upright life: and those who have been baptized<sup>1</sup>, whether it be because they received it as children, or whether it be that having received it in sickness, and afterwards recovered<sup>2</sup>, they had no hearty desire to live on (to the glory of God), so it is, that neither do these make an earnest business of it: nay, even such as received it in health, have little enough to shew of any good impression, and warmly affected for the time, these also presently let the fire go out. Why do you flee? why do you tremble? what is it you are afraid of? You do not mean to say that you are not permitted to follow your business? I do not part you from your wife? No, it is from fornication that I bar you. I do not debar you from the enjoyment of your wealth? No, but from covetousness and rapacity. I do not oblige you to empty out all your coffers? No, but to give some small matter according to your means to them that lack, your superfluities to their need, and not even this unrewarded. We do not urge you to fast? We do but forbid you to besot yourselves with drunkenness and gormandizing. The things we would retrench are but the very things which bring you disgrace: things which even here, on this side of hell-fire, you yourselves confess to be things to be shunned and hated. We do not forbid you to be glad and to rejoice? Nay, only rejoice not with a disgraceful and unbecoming merriment.

- [4.] What is it you dread, why are you afraid, why do you tremble? Where marriage is, where enjoyment of wealth, where food in moderation, what matter of sin is there in these things? And yet, they that are without enjoin the opposites to these, and are obeyed. For they demand not according to thy means, but they say, Thou must give thus much: and if thou allege poverty, they will * make no account of that. Not so Christ: but keep thou, <sup>X.</sup> 34—43. saith He, at home with thy wife, with thy children, and as for thy daily occupations reform and regulate them on the plan of leading a peaceable life, free from cares and from perils. True, say you, but the other promises wealth. Aye, but Christ a kingdom, and more, He promises wealth also with it. For, Seek ye, saith He, the kingdom of Heaven, and <sup>Matt. 6,</sup> all these things shall be added unto you: throwing in<sup>33.</sup>, by way of additional boon, what the other holds out as the main thing: and the Psalmist says, he has never seen the righteous <sup>Ps. 37,</sup> forsaken, nor his seed begging their bread. Let us set<sup>25.</sup> about practising virtue, let us make a beginning: let us only lay hold on it, and you shall see what the good will be. For surely in these (worldly) objects you do not succeed so without labour, that you should be so faint-hearted for these (higher) objects—that<sup>1</sup> you should say, Those are to be had without labour, these only with toil? Nay,—what need to tell you what is the true state of the case?—those are had only with greater labour. Let us not recoil from the Divine Mysteries, I beseech you. Look not at this, that one who was baptized before thee, has turned out ill, and has fallen from his hope: since among soldiers also we see some not doing their duty by the service, while we see others distinguishing themselves, and we do not look only at the idle ones, but we emulate these, the men who are successful. But besides, consider how many, after their baptism, have of men become angels! Fear the uncertainty of the future. As a thief in the night, so death comes: and not merely as a thief, but while we sleep it sets upon us, and carries us off while we are idling. To this end has God made the future uncertain, that we may spend our time in the practice of virtue, because of the uncertainty of expect-<sup>1</sup> Καὶ ἐπὶ προσθήκης μέρει, ἢ προηγουμένως ἐκείνος: καὶ οὐκ εἶδεν, φησί, δίκαιον κ. τ. λ. The modern text (E. D. F. <sup>2</sup> E. D. F. Edd. " 'Yes,' say you, 'those (are to be had) without labour, these with labour.' Away with (such talk): it is not, no it is not so, but if one must say the truth, those (objects) are more yoked with toils, and are achieved with greater toil; but these, if we choose, easily."

HOMIL. ation. But He is merciful, say you. How long shall we

XXIII. hear this senseless, ridiculous talk? I affirm not only that God is merciful, but that nothing can be more merciful than He, and that He orders all things concerning us for our good. How many all their life do you see afflicted<sup>1</sup> with the worst form of leprosy! how many blind from their earliest youth even to old age! others who have lost their eyesight, others in poverty, others in bonds, others again in the mines, others entombed<sup>2</sup> together, others (slaughtered) in wars! These things, say you, do not look like mercy. Say, could He not have prevented these things had He wished, yet He permits them? True, say you. Say, those who are blind from their infancy, why are they so? I will not tell you, until you promise me to receive Baptism, and, being baptized, to live aright. It is not right to give you the solution of these questions. The preaching is not meant just for amusement. For even if I solve this, on the back of this follows another question: of such questions there is a bottomless deep. Therefore<sup>3</sup> do not get into a habit of looking to have them solved for you: else we shall never stop questioning. For look, if I solve this, I do but lead the way to question upon question, numberless as the snow flakes. So that this is what we learn, rather to raise questions, not to solve the questions that are raised. For even if we do solve them, we have not solved them altogether, but (only) as far as man's reasoning goes. The proper solution of such questions is faith: the knowing that God does all things justly and mercifully and for the best: that to comprehend the reason of them is impossible. This is the one solution, and another better than this exists not. For say, what is the use of having a question solved? This, that one needs no longer to make a question of the thing which is solved. And if thou get thyself to believe this, that all things are ordered by the Providence of God, Who, for reasons known to Himself, permits some things and actively works others, thou art rid of the need of questioning, and hast gotten the gain of the solution. But let us come back to our subject. Do you not see such numbers of men suffering chastisements? God (say you) permits these things to be. Make the right use of the health of the body, in order to the health of the soul. But you will say, What is the use to me of labours and toil, when it is in my power to get quit of all (my sins) without labour? In the first place, this is not certain. It may happen, that a person not only does not get quit of his sins without labour, but that he departs hence with all his sins upon him. However, even if this were certain, still your argument is not to be tolerated. He has drawn thee to the contests: the golden arms lie there. When you ought to take them, and to handle them, you wish to be ingloriously saved, and to do no good work! Say, if war broke out, and the Emperor were here, and you saw some charging into the midst of the phalanxes of the enemy, hewing them down, dealing wounds by thousands, others thrusting (with the sword's point), others bounding (now here, now there), others dashing on horseback, and these praised by the Emperor, admired, applauded, crowned: others on the contrary thinking themselves well off if they take no harm, and keeping in the hindmost ranks, and sitting idly there; then after the close of the war, the former sort summoned, honoured with the greatest gifts, their names proclaimed by the heralds: while of the latter, not even the name becomes known, and their reward of the good obtained is only that they are safe: which sort would you wish to belong to? Why, if you were made of stone, if you were more stupid even than senseless and lifeless things, would you not ten thousand times rather belong to the former? Yea, I beseech and implore you. For if need were to fall fighting, ought you not eagerly to choose this? See you not how it is with them that have fallen in the wars, how illustrious they are, how glorious? And yet they die a death, after which there is no getting honour from the emperor. But in that other war, there is nothing of the kind, but thou shalt in any wise be presented with thy scars. Which scars, even without persecutions, may it be granted all us to have to exhibit, through Jesus Christ our Lord, with Whom to the Father and the Holy Ghost together be glory, dominion, honour, now and ever, and world without end. Amen.

HOMILY XXIV.

ACTS x. 44—46.

While Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word. And they of the circumcision which believed were astonished, as many as came with Peter, because that on the Gentiles also was poured out the gift of the Holy Ghost. For they heard them speak with tongues, and magnify God.

OBSERVE God's providential management. He does not suffer the speech to be finished, nor the baptism to take place upon a command of Peter, but, when He has made it evident how admirable their state of mind is, and a beginning is made of the work of teaching, and they have believed that assuredly Baptism is the remission of sins, then forthwith comes the Spirit upon them. Now this is done by God's so disposing it as to provide for Peter a mighty ground of justification. And it is not simply that the Spirit came upon them, but, they spake with tongues: which was the thing that astonished those who had come together. They altogether disliked the matter, wherefore it is that the whole is of God; and as for Peter, it may almost be said, that he is present only to be taught<sup>a</sup> (with them) the lesson, that they must take the Gentiles in hand, and that they themselves are the persons by whom this must be done. For whereas after all these great events, still both in Cæsarea and in Jerusalem a questioning is made about it, how would it have been if these (tokens) had not gone step by step with the progress of the affair? Therefore it is that this is carried to a sort of excess<sup>b</sup>. Peter seizes his advantage, and see the plea he makes of it. Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we? Mark the issue to which he brings it; how he has been travailing to bring this forth. So (entirely) was he of this mind! Can any one, he asks, forbid water? It is the language, we may almost say, of<sup>1</sup> one triumphantly pressing his advantage against such as would forbid, such as should say that this ought not to be. The whole thing, he says, is complete, the most essential part of the business, the baptism with which we were baptized. And he commanded them to be baptized in the Name of Jesus Christ. After he has cleared himself, then, and not before, he commands them to be baptized: teaching them by the facts themselves. Such was the dislike the Jews had to it! Therefore it is that he first clears himself, although the very facts cry aloud, and then gives the command. Then prayed they him—well might they do so—to tarry certain days: and with a good courage thenceforth he does tarry.

And the Apostles and brethren that were in Judæa heard that the Gentiles had also received the word of God. And when Peter was come up to Jerusalem, they that were of the circumcision contended with him, saying, Thou wentest in to men uncircumcised, and didst eat with them. After such great things, they of the circumcision contended: not the Apostles; God forbid! It means, they took no small offence. And see what they allege. They do not say, Why didst thou preach? but, Why didst thou eat with them? But Peter, not stopping to notice this frigid objection—for frigid indeed it is—takes his stand on that great argument, If they had the Spirit Itself given them, how could one refuse to give them the Spirit, above all, the gift of the Holy Ghost and the speaking with tongues before the baptism. This last was in itself an unanswerable declaration of the will of God, and sufficed for the Apostle's justification. The others are ἐκ περιστάσεως, arguments 'ex abundantia.'"

- HOMIL. XXIV. the baptism? But how came it that in the case of the Samaritans this did not happen, but, on the contrary, neither before their baptism nor after it was there any controversy, and there they did not take it amiss, nay, as soon as they heard of it, sent the Apostles for this very purpose? True, but neither in the present case is this the thing they complain of; for they knew that it was of Divine Grace: what they say is, Why didst thou eat with them? Besides, the difference<sup>c</sup> is not so great for Samaritans as it is for Gentiles. Moreover, it is so managed (as part of the Divine plan) that he is accused in this way: on purpose that they may learn: for Peter, without some cause given, would not have related the vision. But observe his freedom from all elation and
- v. 4. 5. vain-glory. For it says, But Peter rehearsed the matter from the beginning, and expounded it by order unto them, saying, I was in the city of Joppa, praying: he does not say why, nor on what occasion: and in a trance I saw a vision, a certain vessel descend, as it had been a great sheet, let down from heaven by four corners; and it came even to

- v. 8. a Voice was added. But I said, Not so, Lord: for nothing common or unclean hath at any time entered into my mouth. Do you mark? “I did my part,” says he: “[I said], that I have never eaten [aught common or unclean]:” with reference to this that they said, Thou wentest in, and didst eat with them. But this he does not say to Cornelius: for there
- v. 9. 10. was no need to mention it to him. But the voice answered me again from heaven, What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common. And this was done three times: and all were drawn up again into heaven. The essential points were those<sup>d</sup> (that ensued at Cæsarea;) but by these he prepare the way for them. Observe how he justifies himself (by reasons), and forbears to use his authority as teacher. For the more mildly he expresses himself, the more tractable he makes them. At no time, says he, has aught common or unclean entered into my mouth.—And, behold—this too was part of his defence—three men stood at the house in which I was, sent to me from Cæsarea. And the Spirit bade me go with them, nothing doubting. Do you mark that it is to the Spirit the enacting of laws belongs? And these also accompanied me—nothing can be more lowly, when he alleges the brethren for witnesses!—these six men, and we entered into the man's house: and he shewed us how he had seen an angel in his house, which stood and said unto him, Send men to Joppa, and call for Simon, whose surname is Peter; who shall tell thee words, whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved. And he does not mention the words spoken by the Angel to Cornelius, Thy prayers and thine alms are come up for a memorial before God, that he may not disgust them: but what says he? He shall tell thee words, whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved: with good reason this is added*. Also he says nothing of the man's fitness. "The Spirit," he might say, having sent (me), God having commanded, on the one part having summoned (me) through the Angel, on the other urging (me) on, and solving my doubt about the things, what was I to do?" He says none of these things, however: but makes his strong point of what happened last, which even in itself was an incontrovertible argument. [And as I began to speak, etc.] Then why did not this happen alone? Of superabundance this is wrought by God, that it might be shewn that the beginning too was not from the Apostle. But had he set out of his own motion, without any of these things having taken place, they would have been very much hurt: so that from the beginning he disposes

v. 17. Forasmuch then as God gave them the like gift as He did unto us, who believed on the Lord Jesus Christ; what was I, that I could withstand God? He shews that he had himself done nothing: for the very thing which we have obtained, he says, that same did those men receive. That he may more effectually stop their mouths, therefore he says, The like gift. Do you perceive how he does not allow them to have less: when they believed, says he, the same gift did God give unto them, as He did to us who believed on the Lord, and [Himself] cleanses them. And he does not say, To you, but, to us. Why do you feel aggrieved, when we<sup>1</sup>

v. 18. call them partakers (with us)? When they heard these things, they held their peace, and glorified God, saying, Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life. Do you mark that it all came of Peter's discourse, by his admirably skilful way of relating the facts? They glorified God that He had given repentance<sup>1</sup> to themselves also: they were humbled by these words. Hence was the door of faith opened thenceforth to the Gentiles. But, if you please, let us look over again what has been said.

marvelled at this, how they themselves had believed. When <sup>ACTS</sup> they heard that they had believed, they were not astonished, <sup>X. 44.</sup> but when God gave them the Spirit. <sup>XI. 18.</sup> Then<sup>1</sup> [answered] <sup>v. 47.</sup> Peter [and said, etc.] And therefore it is that he says, God hath shewn that I should not call common or unclean <sup>v. 28.</sup> any human being. He knew this from the first, and plans his discourse beforehand (with a view to it). Gentiles? What Gentiles henceforth? They were no longer Gentiles, the Truth being come. It is nothing wonderful, he says, if before the act of baptism they received the Spirit: in our own case this same happened. Peter shews that not as the rest either were they baptized, but in a much better way. This is the reason why the thing takes place in this manner, that they may have nothing to say, but even in this way may account them equal with themselves. And they <sup>v. 48.</sup> besought him, it says, to tarry [certain days. And the <sup>ch. 11,</sup> Apostles and brethren, etc. And they of the circumcision <sup>1. 2.</sup> contended with him.] Do you remark how they were not kindly disposed towards him? [Saying, Thou wentest into <sup>v. 3.</sup> men uncircumcised, and didst eat with them.] Do you note what zeal they had for the Law? Not Peter's authority abashed them, not the signs which had taken place, not the success achieved, what a thing it was, the Gentiles having received the word; but they contended about those petty things. For if none of those (signs) had taken place, was not the success (itself) enough? But not so does Peter frame his defence: for he was wise, or rather it was not his wisdom, but the Spirit that spake the words. And by the matter of his defence, he shews that in no one point was he the author, but in every point God, and upon Him he casts the whole. 'The trance,' he says—'it was He that caused me to fall into it, for <sup>1</sup> τότε ὁ Π. ὅτερον ἐξίσταται· καὶ διὰ τοῦτο φησίν. "But when God gave them the Spirit, then Peter afterwards is astonished, &c." This is evidently corrupt. τότε ὁ Π. seems to be part of the text v. 46. τότε ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Π. For ὅτερον ἐξίσταται we may perhaps restore, καὶ πρὸς τοῦτο ὁ Π. ὅτερον ἵσταται. "On this Peter afterwards insists (as above, p. 343), and with a view to this he says (before), God hath shewn me, &c." The innovator substitutes: "When Peter expounded to them his trance, saying, God hath shewn me, etc." So Edd.

HOMIL. I was in Joppa [etc.]: the vessel—it was He that shewed it; XXIV. I objected: again, He spake, and even then I did not hear: the Spirit commanded me to go, and even then though I went, I did not run: I told that God had sent me, and after these things, even then I did not baptize, but again God did the whole. God baptized them, not I.' And he does not say, Was it not right then to add the water? but, implying that nothing was lacking, What was I, that I should withstand God? What a defence is here! For he does not say, Then knowing these things, hold your peace; but what? He stands their attack, and to their impeachment he pleads—What was I, to be able to hinder God? It was not possible for me to hinder—a forcible plea indeed, and such as might well put them to shame. Whence being at last afraid, they held their peace, and glorified God.

In like manner ought we also to glorify God for the good things which befall our neighbours, only<sup>k</sup> not in the way that the rest of the newly-baptized are insulted, when they see others receiving baptism, and immediately departing this life. It is right to glorify God, even though all be saved: and as for thee, if thou be willing, thou hast received a greater

they see others &c.:" i. e. it is right to glorify God, only not to imagine that God is glorified by those who, exulting in the safety of their friends who received baptism at the point of death, taunt the rest of the newly baptized, saying, See, these men are safe: they are baptized to some purpose; while you have received the gift, only to be in danger of losing it."—He adds, "It is right to glorify God, though all be saved"—though that were the case with all except yourself, that they passed at once from Baptism to that world, with the gift unimpaired, and no more in danger to be lost. "And as for you, if you will, you have received a greater gift" than they: &c.—For ἐκηρεύονται, A. has ἐκηρεύουσιν: and this is adopted by the innovator, who alters the passage thus (E. Edd.): "to glorify God, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐκηρέδω (adopted by F. D.) καθάπερ οἱ πολλοὶ τῶν νεοφωτ. ἐκηρεύουσιν, when they see &c. It is right to glorify God, καὶ σὺ μένειν οὐ συγχωρεῖ: ὥστε καὶ σὺ ἐὰν θέλῃς κ. τ. λ. (Erasm. 'et non insultare: Ben. 'non autem insultare illis.') gift (than they): I do not mean in respect of the baptism, for the gift there is the same for him as for thee, but in regard that thou hast received a set time for winning distinction. The other put on the robe, and was not suffered to exhibit himself therewith in the procession, whereas to thee, God hath given full opportunity to use thine arms for the right purpose, thereby to make proof of them. The other goes his way, having only the reward of his faith: thou standest in the course, both able to obtain an abundant recompence for thy works, and to shew thyself as much more glorious than he, as the sun is than the smallest star, as the general, nay rather as the Emperor himself, than the lowest soldier. Then blame thyself, or rather not blame, but correct: for it is not enough to blame thyself; it is in thy power to contend afresh. Hast thou been thrown? hast thou taken grievous hurt? Stand up, recover thyself: thou art still in the course, the meeting<sup>1</sup> is not yet broken up. Do you not<sup>1</sup> θεατρον see how many that have been thrown in the wrestling have afterwards resumed the combat? Only do not willingly come by thy fall. Dost thou count him a happy man for departing this life? Much rather count thyself happy. Was he released of his sins? But thou, if thou wilt, shalt not only wash away thy sins, but shalt also have achievements (of good works), which in his case is not possible. It is in our power to recover ourselves. Great are the<sup>2</sup> medicinal<sup>2</sup> φάρμακα virtues of repentance: let none despair of himself. That man truly deserves to be despaired of, who despairs of himself; that man has no more salvation, nor any hopes. It is not the having fallen into a depth of evils, it is the lying there when fallen, that is dreadful, it is not the having come into such a condition, it is the making light of it that is impious. The very thing that ought to make thee earnest, say, is it this that makes thee reckless? Having received so many wounds, hast thou fallen back? Of the soul, there can be no incurable wound; for the body, there are many such, but none for the soul: and yet for those we cease not in our endeavours to cure them, while for these we are supine. Seest thou not the thief (on the cross), in how short a time he achieved (his salvation)? Seest thou not the Martyrs, in how short a time they accomplished the whole

They that live godly are always undergoing persecution, if not from men, at any rate from evil spirits, which is a more grievous persecution. Yes, and it is in consequence, first and foremost, of ease and comfort, that those who are not vigilant undergo this. Or, thinkest thou it is a trifling persecution to be living at ease? This is more grievous than all, this is worse than persecution. For, like a running flux, <sup>1</sup> χαυροῖ. ease<sup>1</sup> makes the soul languid: and as summer and winter, so persecution and ease. But to shew you that this is the worse persecution, listen: it induces sleep in the soul, an excessive yawning and drowsiness, it stirs up the passions on every side, it arms pride, it arms pleasure, it arms anger, envy, vainglory, jealousy. But in time of persecution none of these is able to make a disturbance; but fear, entering in, and plying the lash vigorously, as one does to a barking dog, will not let any of these passions so much as attempt to give tongue. Who shall be able in time of persecution to indulge in vainglory? Who to live in pleasure? Not one: but there is much trembling and fear, making a great calm, composing the harbour into stillness, filling the soul with awe. I have heard from our fathers, (for in our own time God grant it may not happen, since we are bidden not to ask for temptation,) that in the persecution of old time one might see men that were indeed Christian. None of them cared for money, none for wife, none for children, nor home, nor country: the one great concern with all was to save their<sup>2</sup> lives. There were they hiding, some in

tombs and sepulchres, some in deserts: yes, tender and dainty women too, fighting all the while with constant hunger. Then think whether any longing for sumptuous and dainty living at all came into the mind of a woman, while in hiding<sup>3</sup> beside a coffin, and waiting for her maid-servant to bring her meal, and trembling lest she should be taken, and lying in her terror as in a furnace: was she even aware that there ever was such a thing as dainty living, that such things as<sup>4</sup> dress and ornaments exist at all? Seest thou that now is the persecution, with our passions, like wild beasts, setting upon us on every side? Now is the trying persecution, both in this regard, and especially if it is not even thought to be persecution at all. For this (persecution) has also this evil in it, that being war, it is thought to be peace, so that we do not even arm ourselves against it, so that we do not even rise: no one fears, no one trembles. But if ye do not believe me, ask the heathen, the persecutors, at what time was the conduct of the Christians more strict, at what time were they all more proved? Few indeed had they then become in number, but rich in virtue. For say, what profit is it, that there should be hay in plenty, when there might be precious stones? The amount consists not in the sum of numbers, but in the proved worth. Elias was one: yet the whole world was not worth so much as he. And yet the world consists of myriads: but they are no myriads, when they do not even come up to that one. "Better<sup>1</sup> is one that doeth the will of God, than ten thousand who are transgressors:" for the ten thousands have not yet reached to the one. Desire Acts XI. 1—18.

not a multitude of unprofitable children. Such bring more blasphemy against God, than if they were not Christians. What need have I of a multitude? It is (only) more food for the fire. This one might see even in the body, that better is moderate food with health, than a (fatted) calf with damage. This is more food than the other: this is food, but that is disease. This too one may see in war: that better are ten expert and brave men, than ten thousand of no experience. These latter, besides that they do no work, hinder also those that do work. The same too one may see to be the case in a ship, viz. that better are two experienced mariners, than ever so great a number of unskilful ones: for these will sink the ship. These things I say, not as looking [4.] with an evil eye upon your numbers, but wishing that all of you should be approved men, and not trust in your numbers.

<sup>1</sup> κρείσσων εἰς ποιῶν τὸ θέλημα Κυρίου, ἢ μύριοι παράνομοι. St. Chrys. repeatedly cites this, and almost in the same words, as a text of Scripture, and the Edd. refer it to Eccles. xvi. 3, but there it is, κρείσσων γὰρ εἰς ἡ χίλιοι, (with no various reading,) and here the greater than it is the Kingdom, however few it contain. As the sand of the sea was the multitude of the people (Israel), yet one man saved them. Moses was but one, and yet he availed more than they all: Joshua was one, and he was enabled to do more than the six hundred thousand. Let us not make this our study merely, that (the people) may be many, but rather, that they may be excellent; when this shall have been effected, then will that other follow also. No one wishes at the outset to make a spacious house, but he first makes it strong and sure, then spacious: no one lays the foundations so that he may be laughed at. Let us first aim at this, and then at the other. Where this is, that also will be easy: but where this is not, the other, though it be, is to no profit. For if there be those who are able to shine in the Church, there will soon be also numbers: but where these are not, the numbers will never be good for any thing. How many, suppose you, may there be in our city <sup>1</sup> who are likely to be saved? It is disagreeable, what I am going to say, but I will say it nevertheless. Among all these myriads, there are not to be found one hundred likely to be saved: nay, even as to these, I question it. For think, what wickedness there is in the young, what supineness in the aged! None = makes it his duty to look after his own boy, none is moved by any thing to be seen in his elder, to be emulous of imitating such an one. The patterns are defaced, and therefore it is that neither do the young become admirable in conduct. Tell not me, 'We are a goodly <sup>2</sup>ψυχρὴν multitude:' this is the speech of <sup>2</sup>men who talk without thought or feeling. In the concerns of men indeed, this might be said with some shew of reason: but where God is concerned, (to say this with regard to Him) as having need of us <sup>3</sup>, can never be allowed. Nay, let me tell you, even <sup>3</sup>ψυχρὴν. in the former case, this is a <sup>3</sup> senseless speech. Listen. A person that has a great number of domestics, if they be a corrupt set, what a wretched time will he have of it! For him who has none, the hardship, it seems, amounts to this, that he is not waited on: but where a person has bad servants, the evil is, that he is ruining himself withal, and the damage is greater, (the more there are of them.) For it is far worse than having to be one's own servant, to have to fight with others, and take up a (continual) warfare. These things I say, that none may admire the Church because of its numbers, but that we may study to make the multitude proof-worthy; that each may be earnest for his own share of the duty—not for his friends only, nor his kindred, as I am always saying, nor for his neighbours, but that he may attract the strangers also. For example, Prayer is going on; there they lie (on bended knees), all the young, 'stupidly unconcerned, (yes,) and old too': filthy nuisances rather than young men; giggling, laughing outright, talking—for I have heard even this going on—and jeering one another as they lie along on their knees: and there stand you, young man or elder: rebuke them, if you see them (behaving thus): if any will not refrain, chide him more severely: call the deacon, threaten, do what is in your power to do: and if he dare do any thing to you, assuredly you shall have all to help you. For who is so irrational, as, when he sees you chiding for such conduct, and them chidden, not to take your part? Depart, having received your reward from the Prayer.—In a master's house, we count those his best-disposed servants, who cannot bear to see any part of his furniture in disorder. Answer me; if at home you should see the silver plate lie tossed out of doors, though it is not your business, you will pick it up and bring it into the house: if you see a garment flung out of its place, though you have not the care of it, though you be at enmity with him whose business it is, yet, out of good-will to the master, will you not put it right? So in the present case. These are part of

ο πάντες νέοι ψυχροί καὶ γέροντες. The last word must be corrupt, for he is speaking only of the young: perhaps it should be γέροντες with some genitive, e. g. "full of folly," or "evil thoughts." Then, καθάρματα μᾶλλον ἢ νέοι, more fit to be swept away from the floor as filthy litter than to be regarded as young men. But κάθαρμα, in the sense derived from the heathen ritual, has no equivalent in our language: it means, what remains of the sacrifice used for lustration or atonement, which, as having taken into itself the uncleanness or the guilt which was to be removed, was regarded with the utmost abhorrence.

HOMIL. the furniture: if you see them lying about in disorder, put XXIV. them to rights: apply to me, I do not refuse the trouble: inform me, make the offender known to me: it is not possible for me to see all: excuse me (in this). See, what wickedness overspreads the whole world! Said I without reason that we are (no better than) so much hay, (disorderly as) a troubled sea? I am not talking of those (young people), that they behave thus; (what I complain of, is) that such a sleepy indifference possesses those who come in here, that they do not even correct this misbehaviour. Again, I see others stand talking while Prayer is going on; while the more consistent<sup>p</sup> of them (do this) not only during the Prayer, but even when the Priest is giving the Benediction. O, horror! When shall there be salvation? when shall it be possible for us to propitiate God?—Soldiers<sup>q</sup> go to their

Ἦ οὐδὲ πικραιότεροι αὐτῶν. Erasm., 'Et quidam ex illis, adhuc meliores scilicet.' Ben. 'alios modestiores scilicet. But the irony is not of this kind, and the word here has its proper sense: "men whose conduct is more of a piece, the more consistent of them." Some stand and talk during the prayers, yet kneel and are silent for the Benediction: but these make no such inconsistent pretence: they do not commit this absurdity at least.—Comp. Hom. i. in Oziam, §. 4. t. vi. p. 101. "A grievous disease prevails in the Church: when we have purposed to hold converse with God, and are in the act of sending up the doxology to Him, we interrupt our business, and each takes his neighbour aside to talk with him about his domestic concerns, about the goings on in the agora, the public, the theatre, the army: how this was well managed, that neglected: what is the strong point, and what the weak point in this or that business: in short, about all sorts of public and private matters they talk here with one another. Is this pardonable? When a man speaks with the earthly sovereign, he speaks only on the subjects the sovereign chooses to speak and put questions about, and if against the will of the sovereign he should presume to start any other subject, he would bring upon himself the severest punishment. And you, who are speaking with the King of kings, to Whom the angels minister with dread reverence, do you leave your converse with Him to talk about mire, and dust, and spiders—for that is what earthly things are? But you say, The public affairs are in such a bad way, and there is much to talk of, and much to be anxious about. And whose fault is that? They say, The blunders of our rulers are the cause. No, not the blunders of our rulers, but our sins: the punishment of our faults. It is these have ruined all, have brought upon us all our sufferings, wars, and defeats. Therefore if we had an Abraham, a Moses, a David, a Solomon, for our ruler, yea, the most righteous of men, it would signify nothing as far as the cause of all our evils is concerned. . . . And if we have one of the most iniquitous of men, a blundering, ill-managing person for our ruler, it is our own folly and wickedness that has brought this upon us, it is the punishment of our sins. I therefore let each when he comes here think of his own sins, and not complain of others." Hom. ix. in 1 Tim. he complains of the women talking in Church.

diversion, and you shall see them all keeping time in the dance, and nothing done negligently, but, just as in embroidery and painting, from the well-ordered arrangement in each individual part of the composition, there results at once an exceeding harmony and good keeping, so it is here: we have one shield, one head, all of us (in common): and if but some casual point be deranged by negligence, the whole is deranged and is spoilt, and the good order of the many is defeated by the disorder of the one part. And, fearful indeed to think of, here you come, not to a diversion, not to act in a dance, and yet you stand disorderly. Know you not that you are standing in company with angels? with them you chant, with them sing hymns, and do you stand laughing? Is it not wonderful that a thunderbolt is not launched, not only at those (who behave thus), but at us? For such behaviour might well be visited with the thunderbolt. The Emperor is present, is reviewing the army: and do you, even with His eyes upon you, stand laughing, and endure to see another laughing? How long are we to go on chiding, how long complaining? Ought not such to be treated as very pests and nuisances; as abandoned, worthless reprobates, fraught with innumerable mischiefs, to be driven away from the Church? When will these forbear laughing, who laugh<sup>1</sup> in the hour of the dread Mystery? when refrain from their trifling, who talk <sup>ἐν ᾧ φιλίᾳ</sup> at the instant of the Benediction? Have they no sense of shame before those who are present? have they no fear of God? Are our own idle thoughts not enough for us, is it not enough that in our prayers we rove hither and thither, but laughter also must needs intrude, and bursts of merriment? Is it a theatrical amusement, what is done here? Aye, but, methinks, it is the theatres that do this: to the theatres we owe it that the most of you so refuse to be curbed by us, and to be reformed. What we build up here, is thrown down there: and not only so, but the hearers themselves cannot help being filled with other filthinesses parts, so here there ought to result from all one symphonious harmony. For we are become one Church, we count as members, "fitly joined together" of one Head, we all make one Body: if any carnal point be done negligently, the whole &c. Thus the good order, &c."

HOMIL. besides: so that the case is just the same as if one should want XXIV. to clean out a place with a fountain above it discharging mire; for however much you may clean out, more runs in. So it is here. For when we clean people out, as they come here from the theatres with their filthiness, thither they go again, and take in a larger stock of filthiness, as if they lived for the purpose of only giving us trouble, and then come back to us, laden with ordure, in their manners, in their movements, in their words, in their laughter, in their idleness. Then once more we begin shovelling it out afresh, as if we had to do this only on purpose that, having sent them away clean, we may again see them clogging themselves with filth. Therefore I solemnly protest to you, the sound members, that this will be to you judgment and condemnation, and I give you over to God from this time forth, if any having seen a person behaving disorderly, if any having seen any person talking, especially in that part (of the Service), shall not inform against him, not bring him round (to a better behaviour). To do this is better than prayer. Leave thy prayer and rebuke him, that thou mayest both do him good, and thyself get profit, and so we may be enabled all to be saved and to attain unto the Kingdom of Heaven, through the grace and lovingkindness of our Lord Jesus Christ, with Whom to the Father and the Holy Ghost together be glory, dominion, honour, now and ever, and world without end. Amen.

HOMILY XXV.

ACTS xi. 19.

Now they which were scattered abroad upon the persecution that rose about Stephen travelled as far as Phenice, and Cyprus, and Antioch, preaching the word to none but unto the Jews only.

THE persecution turned out to be no slight benefit, as to them that love God all things work together for good. If <sup>Rom. 8,</sup> they had made it their express study how best to establish <sup>28.</sup> the Church, they would have done no other thing than this—they dispersed the teachers. Mark in what quarters the preaching was extended. They travelled, it says, as far as Phenice and Cyprus and Antioch; to none however did they preach the word but to Jews only. Dost thou mark with what wise purposes of Providence so much was done in the case of Cornelius? This serves both to justify Christ, and to impeach the Jews. When Stephen was slain, when Paul was twice in danger, when the Apostles were scourged, then the Gentiles received the word, then the Samaritans. Which Paul also declares: To you it was necessary that the Word of <sup>ch. 13,</sup> God should first be spoken; but since ye thrust it from you, <sup>46.</sup> and judge yourselves unworthy, lo, we turn unto the Gentiles. Accordingly they went about, preaching to Gentiles also. But some of them were men of Cyprus and Cyrene, who, <sup>v. 20.</sup> when they were come to Antioch, spake unto the Grecians, preaching the Lord Jesus: for it is likely both that they could now speak Greek, and that there were such men in Antioch. And the hand of the Lord, it says, was with them, that is, <sup>v. 21.</sup>

HOMIL. they wrought miracles; and a great number believed, and XXV. turned unto the Lord. Do you mark why now also there

v. 22. Then tidings of these things came unto the ears of the church which was in Jerusalem: and they sent forth Barnabas, that he should go as far as Antioch. What may be the reason that, when such a city received the word, they did not come themselves? Because of the Jews. But they send Barnabas. However, it is no small part of the providential management even so that Paul comes to be there. It is both natural, and it is wisely ordered, that they are averse to him, and (so) that Voice of the Gospel, that Trumpet of heaven, is not shut up in Jerusalem. Do you mark how on all occasions, Christ turns their ill dispositions to needful account and for the benefit of the Church? Of their hatred to the man, He availed Himself for the building up of the Church. But observe this holy man—Barnabas, I mean—how he looked not to his own interests, but hasted to Tarsus.

v. 23. 24. Who, when he came, and had seen the grace of God, was glad, and exhorted them all, that with purpose of heart, they would cleave unto the Lord. For he was a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost, and of faith: and much people was added unto the Lord. He was a very kind man, and single-

v. 25. the general (fit to lead armies), the champion of single combat, the lion—I am at a loss for words, say what I will—the hunting-dog, killer of lions, bull of strength, lamp of brightness, mouth sufficing for a world. And when he had found him, he brought him to Antioch. Verily this is the

v. 26. reason why it was there they were appointed to be called Christians, because Paul there spent so long time! And it came to pass, that a whole year they assembled themselves with the Church, and taught much people. And the disciples were first called Christians at Antioch. No small matter of praise to that city! This is enough to make it a match for all, that for so long a time it had the benefit of that mouth, it first, and before all others: wherefore also it was there in the first place that men were accounted worthy of that name. Do you observe the benefit resulting (to that city) from Paul, to what a height that name, like a 'standard, exalted it? Where <sup>ACTS XI.</sup> three thousand, where five thousand, believed, where so great a <sup>19—28.</sup> multitude, nothing of the sort took place, but they were called <sup>σημαίων</sup> "they" of the way:" here they were called Christians. And <sup>v. 27.</sup> in these days came prophets from Jerusalem unto Antioch. It was need that the fruit of Alms should also be planted there. And see how <sup>2</sup> of necessity (it comes about that) none of <sup>3</sup> ἀναγ- the men of note becomes their teacher. They got for their <sup>καλώς</sup> teachers, men of Cyprus, and Cyrene, and Paul—though he indeed surpassed (the Apostles) themselves—since Paul also had for teachers Ananias and Barnabas. But <sup>b</sup> here of necessity (this was the case). And there stood up one of them <sup>v. 28.</sup> named Agabus, and signified by the Spirit that there would be great dearth throughout the world, which also came to pass in the days of Claudius Cæsar. [By the Spirit, it says:] for, that they may not imagine that this was the reason why the famine came, (namely,) because Christianity was come in, because the demons were departed, the Holy Ghost foretells it: this, however, was nothing wonderful, for in fact Christ predicted it. Not this was the reason, else this

<sup>b</sup> ἀναγκαίως δὲ ἐνταῦθα, as above πᾶς ἀναγκαίως. But in the Mss. part of the text v. 28. being transposed, it reads "But here of necessity he says there will be a great dearth etc."—Below, Εἰ δὲ αὐτοὺς ἦν, πάντως ἔδει καὶ ὅντα παύσασθαι. Τί ἠδίκησαν Ἕλληνες, ἵνα καὶ αὐτοὶ τῶν κακῶν μετέχωσιν; εὐδοκίμησαι γὰρ αὐτοὺς μᾶλλον ἐχρῆν, ὅτι τὸ αὐτῶν ἐποιοῦν, κ.τ.λ. 'Ἄλλ' εἰ διὰ τὰ κακὰ, φησὶν, κ.τ.λ. So the old text in Mss. and Cat. The meaning is obscure, but on the whole it seems most probable that all this is an interlocation of an objector. "If, as you say, it was because of the Jews, assuredly it ought, even when it was there, to have ceased (and not gone on to the rest of the world). What harm had the Gentiles done, that they should share in the punishment? Why, they ought rather to have been distinguished by special marks of the Divine favour, because they were doing their part (in executing God's judgments upon the Jews): were slaying, punishing, &c. Observe, too, the time when this visitation first came—precisely when the Gentiles were added to the Church. Whereas if, as you say, it was because of the evils the Jews inflicted upon the believers, these (the believers, Jews and Gentiles) ought to have been exempted &c." The modern text has: "But even if (ἅλλ' εἰ καὶ) it were because of them, yet because of the rest (διὰ τοὺς ἄλλους) it ought, even when it was, to have ceased. For what harm had the Gentiles done, that even they, having done no harm, should have their share of the evils? But if not because of the Jews, verily they ought rather to have been even marked objects of favour &c." Perhaps this was intended to mean: "Suppose it was inflicted by the dæmons, the Gods of the heathen, because of the Christians, why were the Gentiles included? And as for the Jews, if it was not, as I say, sent by God because of their wickedness, but as the heathen say, was a token of the anger of their Gods because of the new religion, why assuredly the Jews ought to have been marked objects of favour because they were doing all they could to exterminate the faith." But if so, it does not appear how the next sentence, was understood, "And observe at what time &c."

HOMIL. must have been the case from the beginning: but it was X XV. because of the evils done to the Apostles—and God had borne long with them; but, when they pressed upon them, a great famine ensues, betokening to the Jews the coming woes. 'If it was because of them, in any wise it ought to have stopped (there), when it did exist. What harm had the Gentiles done, that they should have their share in the evils?

<sup>μῆσαν</sup> they were doing their part, were slaying, punishing, taking vengeance, persecuting on every side. And mark also at what time the famine comes: precisely when the Gentiles

[8.] were thenceforth added to the Church. But if, as you say, it was because of the evils (done by the Jews), these ought to have been exempted.' How so? Christ, forestalling this

John 16, objection, said, Ye shall have tribulation. (It is) just as if

v. 29. Then the disciples, every man according to his ability, determined to send relief unto the brethren which dwell in Judæa. Mark how the famine becomes to them the means of salvation, an occasion of alms-giving, a harbinger of many blessings. And (so it might have been) to you, one may say, if you were so minded, but ye would not. But it is predicted, that they might be prepared beforehand for almsgiving. [Unto the brethren which dwell in Judæa;] for they were enduring great hardships, but before this, they were not suffering from famine. Which also they did, and sent it to the elders by the hands of Barnabas and Saul.]

v. 30. Do you mark them, that no sooner do they believe than they bring forth fruit, not only for their own, but for those afar off? And Barnabas is sent and Saul, to minister (the same), <sup>2</sup>Of this occasion he says (to the Galatians), [And James, Cephas, and John] gave to me and Barnabas the right hands of fellowship, only (they would) Gal. 2, 9. that we should remember the poor. James was yet living<sup>c</sup>.

<sup>c</sup> Ἐτι Ἰάκωβος ζῇ. So, except E., all our Mss.—Ben. finds it strange that this clause is added in some Mss. "For what is it to the matter in hand, that James was yet living? And which James? For James the brother of John is mentioned presently afterwards, as slain with the sword: and James, the brother of the Lord, Bishop of Jerusalem, is repeatedly mentioned as living, in the subsequent history. Then for what purpose should it be noticed here that he was alive? And yet why the copyists should add this clause, is not easy to see." The copyists are not in fault. Chrys. (not fully reported) is identifying this visit to Jerusalem with the visit mentioned in Gal. ii. The mention there

[Now they which were scattered abroad upon the persecution, etc.] Do you mark how even in the tribulation instead of falling to lamentations and tears, as we do, they give themselves up to a great and good work? [Travelled as far as Phenice, and Cyprus, and Antioch], and there with more security preached the word. [And some of them, which were men of Cyprus and Cyrene, etc.] And they did not say, 'What, we, Cyrenians and Cyprians, to attack this splendid and great city!' but trusting in the grace of God, they applied themselves to the work of teaching, nor did these (Gentiles) themselves think scorn to learn anything of them. Mark how by small means all is brought about: mark the preaching how it spreads: mark those in Jerusalem, having like care for all, holding the whole world as one house. They heard [that Samaria had received the word, and] to Samaria they send the Apostles: they heard [what had befallen at Antioch, and] to Antioch they send Barnabas: they also send again, and (these,) prophets. For the distance was great, and it was not meet the Apostles at present should separate from thence, that they might not be thought to be fugitives, and to have fled from their own people. But then, almost precisely, is the time of their parting [from Jerusalem], when the state (of the Jews) was shewn to be past remedy, when the war was close at hand, and they must needs perish: when the sentence was made absolute. For, until Paul went to Rome, the Apostles were there (at Jerusalem). But they depart, not because afraid of the war—how should it be so?—seeing those they went to, were those that should bring the war: and moreover the war breaks out only after the Apostles were dead. For of them (the Apostle) says, The wrath is come upon them unto the end. The more insignificant the persons, the more illustrious the grace, working

Edd. from E., "not Paul: and how by the small means, the affair took its beginning, but when it became conspicuous, then they send Barnabas. And why did they not send him before this? They took much forethought for their own people, and did not wish the Jews to accuse them because they received the Gentiles: and yet because of their inevitably mixing with them, since there was some questioning about to arise, the matters relating to Cornelius forestalled (this). Then indeed they say &c."

<sup>7</sup> The meaning seems to be, that they let the preaching to the Gentiles take its course at first; and were enabled to say to the Jews, "See, the Gentiles receive the word without encouragement from us: καὶ οὐ τοσαύτης ἀπολαύοντα ἐπιμελείας."

who pass our time in lamentations and tears, in our calamities; but with more fearlessness they passed their time, as having got to a distance from those hindering them, and as being among men not afraid of the Jews: which also helped. And they came to Cyprus, where they had the sea between them, and greater freedom from anxiety: so<sup>1</sup> they made no account of the fear of men, but (still) they gave the precedence to the regard of the Law: they spake to Jews only. But there were Acts

They did not yet know the virtue of the man: but it is providentially ordered that Barnabas should come. As there was a multitude, and none to hinder, well might the faith grow, and above all because they had no trials to undergo. Paul also preaches, and is no longer compelled to flee. And it is well ordered, that not they speak of the famine, but the prophets. The men of Antioch also did not take it amiss that they sent not the Apostles, but were content with their teachers: so fervent were they all for the word. They did not wait for the famine to come, but before [3.] this they sent: according as each had the ability. And observe, among the Apostles, others are put in charge with this trust, but here Paul and Barnabas. For this was no small <sup>1</sup>order of Providence. Besides, it was the beginning, <sup>1</sup>οικονομία, and it was not fit they should be offended.

HOMIL. [As each had the ability, they sent.] But now, none does XXV. this, although there is a famine more grievous than that.

For the cases are not alike, for (all) to bear the calamity in common, and, while all (the rest) abound, for the poorer to be famishing. And the expression shews that the givers also were poor, for, it says, as each of them had the means. A twofold famine, even as the abundance is twofold: a severe famine, a famine not of hearing the word of the Lord, but of being nourished by alms<sup>i</sup>. Then, both the poor in Judæa enjoyed the benefit, and so did those in Antioch who gave their money; yea, these more than those: but now, both we and the poor are famishing: they, being in lack of necessary sustenance, and we in luxurious living<sup>k</sup>, [lacking] the mercy of God. But this is a food, than which nothing can be more necessary. This is not a food, from which one has to undergo the evils of repletion: not a food, of which the most part ends in <sup>1</sup>the draught. Nothing more beauteous, nothing more healthful, than a soul nurtured by this food: it is set high above all disease, all pestilence, all indigestion and distemper: none shall be able to <sup>2</sup>overcome it, but just as, if one's body were made of adamant, no iron, nor anything else, would have power to hurt it, even so when the soul is firmly compact by almsgiving, nothing at all shall be able to overcome it. For say, what shall spoil this? Shall poverty? It cannot be, for it is laid up in the royal treasuries. But shall robber and house-breaker? Nay, those are walls which none shall be able to break through. But shall the worm? Nay, this treasure is set far above the reach of this mischief also. But shall envy and the evil eye? Nay, neither by these can it be overcome. But shall false accusations and plottings of evil? No, neither shall this be, for safe as in an asylum is this treasure. But it were a shame should I make it appear as if the advantages which belong to almsgiving were only these (the absence of these evils), and not (the presence of) their opposites. For in truth it is not merely that it is secure from ill-will ; it also gets abundant blessing from those whom it benefits. For as the cruel and unmerciful not only have for enemies those whom they have injured, but those also who are not themselves hurt, partake the grief and join in the accusation : so those that have done great good have not only those who are benefited, but those also who are not themselves affected, to speak their praises. Again, (that) it is secure from the attacks of the evil-disposed, and robbers, and house-breakers—what, is this all the good, or is it this—that besides the not suffering diminution, it grows also and increases into multitude? What more shameful than Nebuchadnezzar, what more foul, what more iniquitous? The man was impious ; after tokens and signs without number he refused to 'come to his senses, but cast<sup>1</sup> the servants of God into a furnace : and (yet) after these doings, he worshipped. What then said the Prophet? Wherefore, saith he, O king, let my counsel be acceptable unto thee, 'ransom thy sins by alms, and thine iniquities by mercies to the poor : peradventure there shall be pardon for thy transgressions. In so speaking, he said it not doubting, nay, with entire confidence, but wishing to put him in greater fear, and to make a stronger necessity of doing these things. For if he had spoken it as a thing unquestionable, the king would have been more supine: just as it is with us, we then most urge some person (whom we wish to persuade), when<sup>1</sup> they say to us, 'Exhort such an one,' and do not add, 'he will be sure to hear,' but only, 'peradventure he will hear:' for by leaving it doubtful, the fear is made greater, and urges him the more. This is the reason why the Prophet did not make the thing certain to him. What sayest thou? For so great impieties shall there be pardon? Yes. There is no sin, which alms cannot cleanse, none, which alms cannot quench: all sin is beneath this: it is a medicine adapted for every wound. What worse than a publican? The very

 Mat. 19, reason : for, saith (Christ), if thou wouldest be perfect, sell
 21. what thou hast, and give to the poor, and come, follow Me.
 This may well be part of perfection. But alms may be done not only by money, but by acts. For example : one may <sup>1</sup> προ-
 στήναι <sup>2</sup> προ-στάσια [4.] kindly <sup>2</sup>stand by a person (to succour and defend him), one may reach to him a helping hand : <sup>3</sup>the service rendered by acts has often done more good even than money. Let us set to work all the different kinds of almsgiving. Can you do alms by money? Be not slack. Can you by good offices? Say not, Because I have no money, this is nothing.
 This is a very great point : look upon it as if you had given gold. Can you do it by <sup>4</sup>kind attentions? Do this also.
<sup>4</sup> ἀπανείας
 For instance, If you be a physician, (give) your skill : for this also is a great matter. Can you by counsel? This (service) is much greater than all : this (alms) is better than all, or it is also more, by how much the gain it has is greater. For in so doing you put away not starvation, but a grievous death. With such alms the Apostles above measure
 ch. 3, 6 ; 6, 4. abounded : therefore it was that the distribution of money they put into the hands of those after them, themselves exhibiting the (mercy) shewn by words. Or is it, think you, a small alms, to a lost, cast-away soul, a soul in uttermost jeopardy, possessed by <sup>5</sup>a burning fever, to be able to rid <sup>5</sup> πυρῶσεν it of its disease? For example, do you see one possessed by love of money? Pity the man. Is he in danger of suffocation? Quench his fire. 'What if he will not be persuaded?' Do your part, and be not remiss. Have you seen him in bonds?—for wealth is indeed bonds. Go to Mat. 25,
 35 ff. him, visit him, console him, try to release him of his bonds.
 If he refuse, he shall bear the blame himself. Have you seen him naked, and a stranger?—for he is indeed naked, and a stranger to heaven. Bring him to your own inn, clothe him with the garment of virtue, give him the city which is in heaven. 'What if I myself be naked?' say you. Clothe also yourself first: if you know that you are naked, assuredly you know that you need to be clothed; if you know what sort of nakedness this is<sup>m</sup>. What numbers of women now wear silken apparel but are indeed naked of the garments of virtue! Let their husbands clothe these women. 'But they will not admit those garments; they choose to have these.' Then do this also first: induce them to have a longing for those garments: shew them that they are naked: speak to them of judgment to come: answer me<sup>n</sup>, what is the clothing we shall need there? But if ye will bear with me, I also will shew you this nakedness. He that is naked, when it is cold, shrinks, and shudders, and stands there cowering, and with his arms folded: but in summer heat, not so. If then I shall prove to you that your rich men, and rich women, the more they put on, the more naked they are, do not take it amiss. How then, I ask you, when we raise the subject of hell-fire, and of the torments there? Do not these shrink and shudder more than those naked ones? Do they not bitterly groan and condemn themselves? What? when they come to this or that man, and say to him, Pray for me, do they not speak the same words as those (naked wretches)? Now indeed, after all that we can say, the nakedness is not yet apparent: but it will be plain enough there. How, and in what way? When these silken garments and precious stones shall have perished, and it shall be only by the garments of virtue and of vice that all men are shewn, when the the poor shall be clad with exceeding glory, but the rich, naked and in disgraceful sort, shall be haled away to their punishments. What more <sup>1</sup>naked than that rich man who <sup>1</sup>Edd. arrayed himself in purple? What poorer than Lazarus? <sup>'more dainty.'</sup> Then which of them uttered the words of beggars? which of them was in abundance? Say, if one should deck his house women. Truly, the house of the soul, the body I mean, they hang round with plenty of garments: but the mistress of the house sits naked within. Lend me the eyes of the soul, and I will shew you the soul's nakedness. For what is the garment of the soul? Virtue, of course. And what its nakedness? Vice.

For just as, if one were to strip any<sup>1</sup> decent person, that person would be ashamed, and would shrink and cower out of sight; just so the soul, if we wish to see it, the soul which has not these garments, blushes for shame. How many women, think you, at this moment feel ashamed, and would fain sink to the very depth, as if seeking some sort of curtain, or skreen, that they may not hear these words? But those who have no evil conscience, are exhilarated, rejoice, find

What is the gain of your costly garments? how long shall we continue agape for this attire? Let us put on the glory of Christ: let us array ourselves with that beauty, that both here we may be praised, and there attain unto the eternal good things, by the grace and mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ, with Whom, to the Father and the Holy Ghost together, be glory, dominion, honour, now and ever, world without end. Amen.

T." vol. ii. p. 353 ff. the incident is thus related: (ch. ii.) "When the proconsul heard this, he ordered Paul to be bound, and to be put in prison . . . . But Thekla in the night taking off her earrings, gave them to the turnkey, and he opened for her the doors, and let her in: and having given to the keeper of the prison a silver mirror, she was admitted unto Paul, and having sat at his feet, heard from him the mighty works of God." The earliest notice of this work occurs in Tertull. de Bapt. c. 17: Thekla is mentioned, or her history referred to, by other ancient writers, as S. Greg. Naz., Sulpic. Severus, S. Augustine; see Jones u. s. p. 387 ff. A Homily in her praise ascribed to St. Chrysostom, t. ii. p. 749. is justly placed by Savile among the ἀμφιβαλλόμενα.

HOMILY XXVI.

Now at that time Herod the king stretched forth his hands to vex certain of the Church. And he killed James the brother of John with the sword. And because he saw it pleased the Jews, he proceeded further to take Peter also. (Then were the days of unleavened bread.)

At that time, of course meaning the time immediately following: for<sup>a</sup> this is the custom of Scripture. And he well says that Herod the king (did this): this was not he of Christ's time. Lo, a different sort of trial—and mark what I said in the beginning, how things are blended, how rest and trouble alternate in the whole texture of the history—not now the Jews, nor the Sanhedrim, but the king. Greater the power, the warfare more severe, the more it was done to obtain favour with the Jews. And, it says, he slew James the brother of John with the sword: (taking him) at random and without selection. But, should any raise a question, why God permitted this, we shall say, that it was for the

<sup>a</sup> The modern text (E D F. Edd.) "But here it is said in this sense, elsewhere in a different sense. For when Matthew says, In those days cometh John preaching, he speaks it not as meaning the days immediately following, but "those" in which the things he relates were about to take place. For it is the custom of Scripture to use this mode of speech, and at one time to expound in their sequence the things successively taking place, at another to relate as in immediate succession the things about to take place afterwards. And he well says that Herod the king did this, for this was not he of Christ's time:" as if Chrys. meant, He does right to call him king, for this was not the tetrarch of the Gospel history. But this is merely a parenthetical remark: the point to which the καλῶς λέγει refers in this—that the persecution is now raised by a king, not by the Jews: "he does well to designate Herod as the king, thereby shewing that the trial here was of a different kind, more severe, as the power wielded against them was greater."

HOMIL. XXVI. sake of these (Jews) themselves: thereby, first, convincing them, that even when slain, (the Apostles) prevail, just as it was in the case of Stephen: secondly, giving them opportunity, after satiating their rage, to recover from their madness; thirdly, shewing them that it was by His permission this was done. And when he saw, it says, that it pleased the Jews, he proceeded further to seize Peter also. O excessive wickedness! On whose behalf was it, that he gratified them by doing murders thus without plan or reason? And it was the day of unleavened bread. Again, the idle preciseness of the Jews: to kill indeed they forbade not, but<sup>a</sup> at such a time they did such things! Whom having arrested, he put in ward, having delivered him to four quaternions of soldiers. This was done both of rage, and of fear. He slew, it says, James the brother of John with the sword. Do you mark their courage? For, that none may say that without danger or fear of danger they brave death, as being sure of God's delivering them, therefore He permits some to be put to death, and chief men too, Stephen and James, thereby convincing their slayers themselves, that not even these things make them fall away, and hinder them. Peter therefore was kept in prison: but prayer was made without ceasing of the Church unto God for him. For the contest was now for life and death: both the slaying of the one made them fearful, and the casting of the other into prison. And when Herod would have brought him forth, the same night Peter was sleeping between two soldiers, bound with two chains; and the keepers before the door kept the prison. And, behold, the angel of the Lord came upon him, and a light shined in the prison: and he smote Peter on the side, and raised him up, saying, Arise up quickly. And his chains fell off from his hands. In that night He delivered him. And a light shined in the prison, that<sup>b</sup> he might not deem it fancy: and none saw the light, but he only. For if, notwithstanding this was done, he thought it a fancy, because of its unexpectedness; if this had not been, much more would he have thought this: so<sup>d</sup> prepared was he for death. For his having waited there many days and not being saved caused this. Why then, say you, did He not suffer him to fall into the hands of Herod<sup>e</sup>, and then deliver him? Because that would have brought people into astonishment, whereas this was credible<sup>f</sup>: and they would not even have been thought human beings. But in the case of Stephen, what did He not do? Did He not shew them his face as it had been the face of an angel? But what in short did He leave undone here also? And the angel said to him, Gird thyself, and bind on thy sandals. Here again it shews, that it was not done of craft: for one that is in haste and wishes to break out (of prison), is not so particular as to take his sandals, and gird himself. And he did so. And he said unto him, Put on thy cloak, and follow me. And he went out, and followed him; and wist not that it was true which was done by the Angel; but thought he saw a vision. When they were past the first and the second ward, they came unto the iron gate that leadeth unto the city; which opened to them of its own accord. Behold, a second miracle. And they went out, and passed on through one street; and forthwith the angel departed from him. And when Peter was come to himself, he said, Now I know of a surety, that the Lord hath sent His Angel, and hath delivered me out of the hand of Herod, and from all the expectation of the people of the Jews. When the Angel departed, then Peter understood: Now I perceive, says he, not then. But why is this so, and why is Peter not sensible of the things taking place, although he had already experienced a like deliverance, when all were released? (The Lord) would have the pleasure come to him all at once, and that he should first be at liberty, and then be sensible of what had happened. The circumstance also of the chains having fallen off from his hands, is a strong argument of his not having fled<sup>g</sup>. And when he had considered the thing,

And when she knew Peter's voice, she opened not the gate for gladness,—Mark even the servant-girls, how full of piety they are.—but ran in, and told how Peter stood before the gate. But they, though it was so, shook their heads (incredulously): And they said unto her, Thou art mad. But she constantly affirmed that it was even so. And they said, It is his angel. But Peter continued knocking: and when they had opened the door, and saw him, they were astonished. But he, beckoning unto them with the hand to hold their peace, declared unto them how the Lord had brought him out of the prison. And he said, Go shew these things unto James, and to the brethren. case with another? And, it says, when they had passed Acts the first and the second ward, they came to the iron gate, <sup>XII.</sup> 1—17. [which opened unto them of its own accord:] and yet the <sup>v. 10.</sup> things that had happened within (the prison) were more marvellous: but this was now more after the manner of man. And having gone out, they went along one street, and <sup>1</sup> immediately the Angel departed from him. When there was <sup>1</sup> no hindrance, then the Angel departed. For Peter would not have <sup>2</sup> gone along, there being so many hindrances. [And <sup>2</sup> when he came to himself:] for in very truth, it was indeed <sup>3</sup> an amazement. Now, saith he, I know—now, not then, when I <sup>3</sup> was in the prison,—that the Lord hath sent His Angel, and hath delivered me out of the hand of Herod, and from all the expectation of the people of the Jews. And when he had <sup>v. 12.</sup> considered, it says: viz. where he was, or, that he must not without more ado depart, but requite his Benefactor: he came to the house of Mary the mother of John. Who is this John? Probably<sup>o</sup> he that was always with them: for this is why he adds his <sup>4</sup> distinctive name, [whose surname <sup>4</sup> was Mark.] But observe, praying in the night, how much they got by it: what a good thing affliction is; how wakeful it made them! Do you see how great the gain resulting from the death of Stephen? do you see how great the benefit accruing from this imprisonment? For it is not by taking vengeance upon those who wronged them that God shews the greatness of the Gospel: but in the wrong-doers themselves<sup>p</sup>, without any harm happening to those, he shews what a mighty thing the afflictions in themselves are, that we may not seek in any wise deliverance from them, nor the avenging of our wrongs. And mark how the very servant-<sup>v. 13. 14.</sup> girls were henceforth upon an equality with them. For joy, it says, she opened not. This too is well done, that they likewise may not be amazed by seeing him at once, and that they may be incredulous, and their minds may be ex-

HOMIL. XXVI. exercised. [But ran in, etc.] just as we are wont to do, she was eager to be herself the bringer of the good tidings, for
 v. 15. good news it was indeed. And they said unto her, Thou art mad: but she constantly affirmed that it was even so: then said they, It is his Angel. This is a truth, that each man has an Angel. And what would the Angel? It was from the time (of night) that they surmised this. But when
 v. 16. 17. he continued knocking, and when they had opened, and saw him, they were astonished. But he beckoning to them with his hand, made them keep quiet, to hear all that had happened to him. He was now an object of more affectionate desire to the disciples, not only in consequence of his being saved, but by his sudden coming in upon them and straightway departing. Now, both his friends learn all clearly; and the aliens also learn, if they had a mind, but they had not. The same thing happened in the case of Christ. Tell these things, he says, to James, and to the brethren. How free from all vainglory! Nor did he say, Make known these things to people every where, but, to the brethren. And he withdrew to another place: for he did not tempt God, nor fling himself into temptation: since, when
 ch. 5, 20. they were commanded to do this, then they did it. Go, it was said, speak in the temple to the people. But this the Angel said not (here); on the contrary, by silently removing him and bringing him out by night, he gave him free permission to withdraw—and this too is done, that we may learn that many things are providentially brought about after the manner of men—so that he should not again fall into peril.—For that they may not say, It was his Angel, after he was gone, they say this first, and then they see himself overthrowing their notion of the matter. Had it been the Angel, he would not have knocked at the door, would not have retired to another place. And<sup>a</sup> what followed in the day, makes them sure.

 [Now know I that the Lord hath sent His Angel.] Why is v. 11. not this effected by themselves"? (I answer,) By this also the Lord honours them, that by the ministry of His Angels he rescues them. Then why was it not so in the case of Paul? ch. 16, 25.
 There with good reason, because the gaoler was to be converted, whereas here, it was only that the Apostle should be released. And God disposes all things in divers ways. And there too, it is beautiful, that Paul sings hymns, while here Peter was asleep. [And when he had considered, he came to v. 12.
the house of Mary, etc.] Then let us not hide God's marvels, but for our own good let us study to display these abroad for the edifying of the others. For as he deserves to be admired for choosing to be put into bonds, so is he worthy of more admiration, that he withdrew not until he had reported all to his friends. And he said, Tell James and the brethren. That v. 17.

HOMIL. XXVI. splendid than that Church. Let us imitate these, let us emulate them. Not for this was the night made, that we should sleep all through it and be idle. To this bear witness the artisans, the carriers, and the merchants, (to this) the Church of God rising up in the midst of the night. Rise thou up also, and behold the quire of the stars, the deep silence, the profound repose: contemplate with awe the <sup>1</sup>order of thy Master's household. Then is thy soul purer: it is lighter, and subtler, and soaring disengaged: the darkness itself, the profound silence, are sufficient to lead thee to compunction. And if also thou look to the heavens studded with its stars, as with ten thousand eyes<sup>2</sup>, if thou bethink thee that all those multitudes who in the day time are shouting, laughing, frisking, leaping, wronging, grasping, threatening, inflicting wrongs without number, lie all one as dead, thou wilt condemn <sup>3</sup>all the self-willedness of man. Sleep hath invaded and <sup>4</sup>defeated nature: it is the image of death, the image of the end of all things. If<sup>5</sup> thou (look out of window and) lean over into the street, thou wilt not hear even a sound: if thou look into the house, thou wilt see all lying as it were in a tomb. All this is enough to arouse the soul, and lead it to reflect on the end of all things.

[4.] Here indeed my discourse is for both men and women. Bend thy knees, send forth groans, beseech thy Master to be merciful: He is more moved by prayers in the night, when thou makest the time for rest a time for mourning. Re-

Ps. 6, 6. member what words that king uttered: I have been weary with my groaning: every night will I wash my bed, I will water my couch with my tears. However delicate a liver thou mayest be, thou art not more delicate than he: however rich thou mayest be, thou art not richer than David. And again Ps. 119, 62. the same Psalmist saith, At midnight I rose to give thanks unto Thee for the judgments of Thy righteousness. No vainglory then intrudes upon thee: how can it, when all are sleeping, and not looking at thee? Then neither sloth nor drowsiness invades thee: how can they, when thy soul is aroused by such great things? After such vigils come sweet

slumbers and wondrous revelations. Do this, thou also the man, not the woman only. Let the house be a Church, <sup>Acts XII. 1-17.</sup> consisting of men and women. For think not, because thou art the only man, or because she is the only woman there, that this is any hindrance. For where two, He saith, are gathered together in My Name, there am I in the midst of <sup>Mat. 18, 20.</sup> them. Where Christ is in the midst, there is a great multitude. Where Christ is, there needs must Angels be, needs must Archangels also and the other Powers be there. Then ye are not alone, seeing ye have Him Who is Lord of all. Hear again the prophet also saying, "Better is one that doeth the will of the Lord, than ten thousand transgressors." <sup>comp. Ecclus. 16, 3.</sup> Nothing more weak than a multitude of unrighteous men, nothing more strong than one man who lives according to the law of God. If thou hast children, wake up them also, and let thy house altogether become a Church through the night: but if they be tender, and cannot endure the watching, let them stay for the first or second prayer, and then send them to rest: only stir up thyself, establish thyself in the habit. Nothing is better than that storehouse which receives such prayers as these. Hear the Prophet speaking: If I remembered Thee upon my bed, I thought upon Thee in the dawn of the morning. But you will say: I have laboured much during the day, and I cannot. Mere pretext this and subterfuge. For however much thou hast laboured, thou wilt not toil like the smith, who lets fall such a heavy hammer from a great height upon the (metal flying off in) sparks, and takes in the smoke with his whole body: and yet at this work he spends the greater part of the night. Ye know also how the women, if there is need for us to go into the country, or to go forth unto a vigil, watch through the whole night. Then have thou also a spiritual forge, to fashion there not pots or cauldrons, but thine own soul, which is far better than either copper-smith or goldsmith can fashion. Thy soul, waxen old in sins, cast thou into the smelting-furnace of confession: let fall the hammer from on high: that is, <sup>τῶν βη-</sup> the condemnation of thy words: <sup>μδτων</sup> light up the fire of the Spirit. Thou hast a far mightier craft <sup>τῆν κα-</sup> (than theirs). Thou art beating into shape not vessels of gold, <sup>τδγων-</sup> but the soul, which is more precious than all gold, even as the smith hammers out his vessel. For it is no material vessel

HOMIL. XXVI. that thou art working at, but thou art freeing thy soul from all imaginations belonging to this life. Let a lamp be by thy side, not that one which we burn, but that which the prophet had, when he said, Thy law is a lamp unto my feet.

Ps. 119. Bring thy soul to a red heat, by prayer: when thou seest

105. it hot enough, draw it out, and mould it into what shape thou wilt. Believe me, not fire so effectual to burn off rust, as night prayer to remove the rust of our sins. Let the night-watchers, if no one else, shame us. They, by man's law, go their rounds in the cold, shouting loudly, and walking

<sup>1</sup> στενωπών through <sup>1</sup> lanes and alleys, oftentimes drenched with rain and (all) congealed with cold, for thee and for thy safety, and the protection of thy property. There is he taking such care for thy property, while thou takest none even for thy soul. And yet I do not make thee go thy rounds in the open air like him, nor shout loudly and rend thy sides: but in thy closet itself, or in thy bedchamber, bend thy knees, and entreat thy Lord. Why did Christ Himself pass a whole night on the mountain? Was it not, that He might be an ensample to us? Then is it that the plants respire, in the night, I mean:

and then also does the soul take in the dew even more than they. What the sun has parched by day becomes cool again at night. More refreshing than all dew, the tears of the night descend upon our lusts and upon all heat and fever of the soul, and do not let it be affected in any such way. But if it do not enjoy the benefit of that dew, it will be burnt up in the day-time. But God forbid (it should be so)! Rather, may we all, being refreshed, and enjoying the mercy of God, be freed from the burden of our sins, through the grace and mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ, with Whom to the Father together with the Holy Spirit be glory, might, honour, now and ever, world without end. Amen.

ACTS xii. 18, 19.

Now as soon as it was day, there was no small stir among the soldiers, what was become of Peter. And when Herod had sought for him, and found him not, he examined the keepers, and commanded that they should be put to death. And he went down from Judæa to Cæsarea, and there abode.

SOME persons, it is likely, are at a loss how to explain it, that God should quietly look on while (His) champions* are put to death, and now again the soldiers on account of Peter: and yet it was possible for Him after (delivering) Peter, to rescue them also. But it was not yet the time of judgment, so as to render to each according to his deserts. And besides, it was not Peter that put them into his hands. For the thing that most annoyed him was the being mocked; just as in the case of his grandfather when he was deceived <sup>Matt. 2,</sup> by the wise men, that was what made him (feel) cut to the <sup>16.</sup> heart—the being (eluded and) made ridiculous<sup>b</sup>. And having put them to the question, it says, he ordered them

* περιεΐδεν τοὺς ἀθλητὰς ἀπολλυμένους: i. e. those (as St. Stephen, St. James) engaged in contending for the heavenly prize. The mod. t. substitutes, "Many are quite at a loss, how God could quietly look on while His children (or, servants? τοὺς παῖδας, Ben. infantes) were put to death because of Him, and now again, &c." After this sentence, the same inserts from the recapitulation: "But—if the Angel, &c." to . . . . "why did He not rescue him? and besides"— <sup>b</sup> μᾶλλον αὐτὸν ἐπολεῖ διακρίσθαι (as in ch. vii. 54, cut to the heart with passion) καὶ καταγέλαστον εἶναι. The last words are either misplaced, or something is wanting; perhaps (after διακρίσθαι,) τὸ διακρούεσθαι καὶ καταγέλαστον εἶναι.

HOMIL. to be led away to execution. And yet he had heard from XXVII. them—for he had put them to the question—both that the chains had been left, and that he had taken his sandals, and that until that night he was with them. [Having put them to the question:] but what did they conceal? Why then did they not themselves also flee? [He ordered them to be led away to execution:] and yet he ought to have marvelled, ought to have been astonished at this. The consequence is, by the death of these men, (the thing) is made manifest to all: both his wickedness is exposed to view, and (it is made clear that) the wonder (is) of God. [And he went down v.20-23. from Judæa to Cæsarea, and there abode:] and Herod was highly displeased with them of Tyre and Sidon: but they came with one accord to him, and, having made Blastus the king's chamberlain their friend, desired peace; because their country was nourished by the king's country. And upon a set day Herod, arrayed in royal apparel, sat upon his throne, and made an oration unto them. And the people gave a shout, saying, It is the voice of a god, and not of a man, And immediately the angel of the Lord smote him, because he gave not God the glory: and he was eaten of worms, and gave up the ghost. * * But see how (the writer) here does not hide these things<sup>4</sup>. Why does he mention this history? Say, what has it to do with the Gospel, that Herod is incensed with the Tyrians and Sidonians? It is not a small matter, even this, how immediately justice seized him; although not because of Peter, but because of his arrogant speaking. And yet, it may be said, if those shouted, what is that to him? Because he accepted the acclamation, because he accounted himself to be worthy of the adoration. Through him those most receive a lesson, who so thought-<sup>4</sup> i. e. what was to be drawn from them by the torture? Had they let him out, they would have contrived appearances, or would themselves have fled. But the reporter's notes of what St. Chrys. said, seem to be very defective, and the arrangement much confused.

<sup>d</sup> ἀλλ' ὅρα πῶς οὗτος οὐ κρύπτει ταῦτα. In the recapitulation (see note h.) he says, that the death of Herod was regarded as a judgment for his having slain James and the soldiers. Here, it seems, he must have said something to that effect; then, "but observe how St. Luke does not conceal the true state of the case, viz. that he was punished not for this, but for the sin which he proceeds to mention." We have transposed the text vv. 20—23. Mss. and Edd. place it before ὁ μικρὸν οὐδὲ τοῦτο ἔστιν, thus separating these words from their connexion with the preceding question.

For this is not <sup>XII.18.</sup> the time of judgment, but He punishes him that had most to <sup>to</sup> answer for, leaving the others to profit by this man's fate. <sup>XIII.3.</sup> And the word of God, it says, grew, i. e. in consequence of <sup>1 al. ol</sup> this, and multiplied. <sup>κολα-</sup> Do you mark God's providential <sup>κελυντες</sup> management? <sup>v. 25.</sup> But Barnabas and Saul returned from <sup>v. 13, 1.</sup> Jerusalem, when they had fulfilled their ministry, and took *with them John, whose surname was Mark. - HOMIL.
XXVII.
Recapitulation.
- v. 18. [And when it was day, etc.] For<sup>f</sup> if the Angel had brought out the soldiers also, along with Peter, it would have been thought a case of flight. Then why, you may ask, was it not otherwise managed? Why, where is the harm? Now, if we see that they who have suffered unjustly, take no harm, we shall not raise these questions. For why do you not say the same of James? Why did not (God) rescue him? There was no small stir among the soldiers. So (clearly) had they perceived nothing (of what had happened). Lo, I take up the plea in their defence. The chains were there, and the keepers within, and the prison shut, nowhere a wall broken through, all told the same tale: the man had been carried off<sup>s</sup>: why dost thou condemn them? Had they wished to let him off, they would have done it before, or would have gone out with him. 'But he gave them money?'
- ch. 3, 6. And how should he, who had not to give even to a poor man, have the means to give to these? And then neither had the chains been broken, nor were they loosed. He ought to have seen, that the thing was of God, and no work of man. [And he went down from Judæa to Cæsarea, and there abode. And Herod was highly displeased with them of Tyre and Sidon, etc.] He is now going to mention (a matter of) history: this is the reason why he adds the names, that it may be shewn how

- [2.] Joseph. Ant. xix.

<sup>f</sup> Here he further answers the question raised in the opening of the discourse. The mod. t. transposes it to that place, beginning the recapitulation with, "And when it was day there was no small stir among the soldiers because of Peter, and having put the keepers to the question, he ordered them to be led away to execution. So senseless was he, οὕτως οὐκ ᾔσθετο, that he even sets about punishing them unjustly." The latter clause is added by the innovator. For ᾔσθετο Cat. has preserved the true reading, ᾔσθετο.

death. Observe, when he slew the Apostle, he did nothing of this sort, but when (he slew) these; in fact he knew not what to say about it': as being at a loss, then, and feeling ashamed, he went down from Judæa to Cæsarea. I suppose it was also to bring those (men of Tyre and Sidon) to apologise, that he withdrew (from Jerusalem): for with those he was incensed, while paying such court to these. See how vain-glorious the man is: meaning to confer the boon upon them, he makes an harangue. But Josephus says, that he was also arrayed in a splendid robe made of silver. Observe both what flatterers those were, and what a high spirit was shewn by the Apostles: the man whom the whole nation so courted, the same they held in contempt. But observe again a great refreshing granted to them, and the numberless benefits accruing from the vengeance inflicted upon him. But if this man, because it was said to him, It is the voice of God and not of a man, although he said nothing himself, suffered such things: much more should Christ, had He not Himself been God, (have suffered) for saying always as He did, "These words of mine are not Mine," and, "Angels minister to Me," and such like. But that man ended His life by a shameful and miserable death, and thenceforth no more is seen of him. And observe him also, easily talked over even by Blastus, like a poor creature, soon incensed and again pacified, and on all occasions a slave of the populace, with nothing free and independent about him. But mark also the authority of the Holy Ghost: As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said, Separate Me Barnabas and Saul. What Being would have dared, if not of the same authority, to say this? [Separate etc.] But this is done, that they may not keep together among themselves. The Spirit saw that they had greater

The innovator substitutes, Ἐμοὶ δοκεῖ καὶ ἐκείνους ἀπαγαγεῖν βουλόμενος, πρὸς ἀπολογία ἦλθε τούτων ὡργίζετο γὰρ κ.τ.λ. which Ben. renders, Mihi videtur, cum illos abducere vellet, ad hos venisse ut sese purgaret.

HOMIL. power, and were able to be sufficient for many. And how did XXVII. He speak to them? Probably by prophets: therefore the writer premises, that there were prophets also. And they were fasting and ministering: that thou mayest learn that there was need of great sobriety. In Antioch he is ordained, where he preaches. Why did He not say, Separate for the Lord, but, For Me? It shews that He is of one authority and power. [And when they had fasted etc.] Seest thou what a great thing fasting is? [So they being sent forth by the Holy Ghost]: it shews that the Spirit did all.

A great, yes a great good is fasting: it is circumscribed by no limits. When need was to ordain, then they fast: and to them while fasting, the Spirit spake. Thus much only do I enjoin: (I say) not fast, but abstain from luxury. Let us seek meats to nourish, not things to ruin us; seek meats for food, not occasions of diseases, of diseases both of soul and body: seek food which hath comfort, not luxury which is full of discomfort: the one is luxury, the other mischief; the one is pleasure, the other pain; the one is agreeable to nature, the other contrary to nature. For say, if one should give thee hemlock juice to drink, would it not be against nature? if one should give thee logs and stones, wouldest thou not reject them? Of course, for they are against nature. Well, and so is luxury. For just as in a city, under an invasion of enemies when there has been siege and tumult, great is the uproar, so is it in the soul, under invasion of wine and luxury. Who hath woe? who hath tumults? who hath discomforts and babblings? Are they not they that tarry long at the wine? Whose are blood-shot eyes? But yet, say what we will, we shall not bring off those who give themselves up to luxury, unless<sup>k</sup> we bring into conflict therewith a different affection. And first, let us address ourselves to the women. Nothing uglier than a woman given to luxury, nothing uglier than a woman given to drink. The bloom of her complexion is faded: the calm and mild expression of the eyes is rendered turbid, as when a cloud

intercepts the rays of the sun-shine. It is a<sup>1</sup> vulgar, slave-<sup>Acts XII. 18—25.</sup> like, thoroughly low-lived habit. How disgusting is a woman, when from her breath you catch sour whiffs of fetid<sup>1 ἀνελεῖν-θερον</sup> wine; a woman belching, giving out a fume<sup>2</sup> of decom-<sup>2 χυμὸν</sup> posing meats; herself weighed down, unable to keep up-right; her face flushed with an unnatural red; yawning incessantly, and every thing swimming in a mist before her eyes! But not such, she that abstains from luxurious living: no, (this abstinence makes her look) a more beautiful,<sup>3</sup> well-bred<sup>3 σωφρονεσττέρα</sup> woman. For even to the body, the composure of the soul imparts a beauty of its own. Do not imagine that the impression of beauty results only from the bodily features. Give me a handsome girl, but turbulent<sup>4</sup>, loquacious, railing, given<sup>4</sup> to drink, extravagant, (and tell me) if she is not worse-looking<sup>4 τεταραγμένη</sup> than any ugly woman? But if she were bashful, if she would hold her peace, if she learnt to blush, if to speak<sup>5</sup> modestly,<sup>5 συμμετρως</sup> if to find time for fastings; her beauty would be twice as great, her freshness would be heightened, her look more engaging, fraught with<sup>6</sup> modesty and good breeding.—Now<sup>6 σωφροσύνης καὶ κοσμιότητος</sup> then, shall we speak of men? What can be uglier than a man in drink? He is an object of ridicule to his servants, of ridicule to his enemies, of pity to his friends; deserving condemnation without end: a wild beast rather than a human being; for to devour much food is proper to panther, and lion, and bear. No wonder (that they do so), for those creatures have not a reasonable soul. And yet even they, if they be gorged with food more than needs, and beyond the measure appointed them by nature, get their whole body ruined by it: how much more we? Therefore hath God contracted our stomach into a small compass; therefore hath He marked out a small measure of sustenance, that He may instruct us to attend to the soul.

Let us consider our very make, and we shall see there is in [3.] us but one little part that has this operation—for our mouth and tongue are meant for singing hymns, our throat for voice—therefore the very necessity of nature has tied us down, that we may not, even involuntarily, get into much<sup>7</sup> trouble (in this<sup>7 πράγματι</sup> way). Since, if indeed luxurious living had not its pains, nor sicknesses and infirmities, it might be tolerated: but as the case is, He hath stinted thee by restrictions of nature, that

HOMIL. even if thou wish to exceed, thou mayest not be able to do so.
XXVII.

Is not pleasure thine object, beloved? This thou shalt find from moderation. Is not health? This too thou shalt so gain. Is not easiness of mind? This too. Is not freedom? is not vigour and good habit of body, is not sobriety and alertness of mind? (All these thou shalt find;) so entirely are all good things there, while in the other are the contraries to these, θερία</sup> discomfort, distemper, disease, 'embarrassment—waste of substance. Then how comes it, you will ask, that we all run eagerly after this? It comes of disease. For say, what is it that makes the sick man hanker after the thing that does him harm? Is not this very hankering a part of his disease! Why is it that the lame man does not walk upright? This very thing, does it come of his being lazy, and not choosing to go to the physician? For there are some things, in which the pleasure they bring with them is temporary, but lasting the punishment: others just the contrary, in which the endurance is for a time, the pleasure perpetual. He therefore that has so little solidity and strength of purpose as not to slight present sweets for future, is soon overcome. Say, how

Gen. 25, came Esau to be overcome? how came he to prefer the present pleasure to the future honour? Through want of solidity and firmness of character. And this fault itself, say you, whence comes it? Of our ourselves: and it is plain from this consideration. When we have the mind, we do rouse ourselves, and become capable of endurance. Certain it is, if at any time necessity comes upon us, nay, often only from a spirit of emulation, we get to see clearly what is useful for us. When therefore thou art about to indulge in luxury, consider how brief the pleasure, consider the loss—for loss it is indeed to spend so much money to one's own hurt—the diseases, the infirmities: and despise luxury. How many shall I enumerate who have suffered evils from indulgence?

Gen. 9, Noah was drunken, and was exposed in his nakedness, and see what evils came of this. Esau through greediness abandoned his birth-right, and was set upon fratricide.

Ex. 32, The people of Israel sat down to eat and to drink, and rose up to play. Therefore saith the Scripture, When thou hast eaten and drunken, remember the Lord thy God. For they

he saith, that liveth in pleasure, is dead while she liveth: ACTS XI. 18—25.
 and again, The beloved waxed sleek, grew thick, and kicked: Deut. 32, 15. Rom. 13, 14.
 and again the Apostle, Make not provision for the flesh, to fulfil the lusts thereof. I am not enacting as a law that there shall be fasting, for indeed there is no one who would listen; but I am doing away with daintiness, I am cutting off luxury for the sake of your own profit: for like a winter-torrent, luxury overthrows all: there is nothing to stop its course: it casts out from a kingdom: 'what<sup>1</sup> τὸ is the gain of it? Would you enjoy a (real) luxury? Give πλέον; to the poor; invite Christ, so that even after the table is removed, you may still have this luxury to enjoy. For now, indeed, you have it not, and no wonder: but then you will have it. Would you taste a (real) luxury? Nourish your soul, give to her of that food to which she is used: do not kill her by starvation.—It is the time for war, the time for contest: and do you sit enjoying yourself? Do you not see even those who wield sceptres, how they live frugally while abroad on their campaigns? We wrestle not against flesh and blood; Eph. 6, 12. and are you fattening yourself when about to wrestle? The adversary stands grinding his teeth, and are you giving a loose to jollity, and devoting yourself to the table? I know that I speak these things in vain, yet not (in vain) for all.
He that hath ears to hear, let him hear. Christ is pining Luke 8, 8. through hunger, and are you 'frittering yourself away διασπαρ with gluttony? Two<sup>3</sup> inconsistencies. For what evil does ἁδύ not luxury cause? It is contrary to itself: so that I know ἀμετρού.
 not how it gets this name: but just as that is called glory, which is (really) infamy, and that riches, which in truth is poverty, so the name of luxury is given to that which in reality is nauseousness. Do we intend ourselves for the shambles, that we so fatten ourselves? Why cater for the worm that it may have a sumptuous larder? Why make more of the humours<sup>4</sup>? Why store up in yourself sources of<sup>4</sup> ἰχθῆρας sweat and rank smelling? Why make yourself useless for every thing? Do you wish your eye to be strong? Get your body well strung. For in musical strings, that which is coarse and not refined, is not fit to produce musical tones, but that which has been well scraped, stretches well, and vibrates with full harmony. Why do you bury the soul

HOMIL. alive? why make the wall about it thicker? Why increase XXVII. the reek and the cloud, with fumes like a mist steaming up from all sides? If none other, let the wrestlers teach you, that the more spare the body, the stronger it is: and (then) also the soul is more vigorous. In fact, it is like charioteer and horse. But there you see, just as in the case of men giving themselves to luxury, and making themselves plump, so the plump horses are unwieldy, and give the driver much ado.

 τὸν One<sup>1</sup> may think oneself well off, even with a horse obedient to the rein and well-limbed, to be able to carry off the prize: but when the driver is forced to drag the horse along, and when the horse falls, though he goad him ever so much, he cannot make him get up, be he ever so skilful himself, he will be deprived of the victory. Then let us not endure to see our soul wronged because of the body, but let us make the soul herself more clear-sighted, let us make her wing light, her bonds looser: let us feed her with discourse, with frugality, (feeding) the body only so much that it may be healthy, that it may be vigorous, that it may rejoice and not be in pain: that having in this sort well ordered our concerns, we may be enabled to lay hold upon the highest virtue, and to attain unto the eternal good things by the grace and loving-kindness of our Lord Jesus Christ, with Whom, to the Father and Holy Ghost together, be glory, dominion, honour, now and ever, world without end. Amen.

HOMILY XXVIII.

ACTS xiii. 4, 5.

So they, being sent forth by the Holy Ghost, departed unto Seleucia; and from thence they sailed to Cyprus. And when they were at Salamis, they preached the word of God in the synagogues of the Jews: and they had also John to their minister.

As soon as they were ordained they went forth, and hasted to Cyprus, that being a place where was no ill-design hatching against them, and where moreover the Word had been sown already. In Antioch there were (teachers) enough, and Phœnice too was near to Palestine; but Cyprus not so. However, you are not to make a question of the why and wherefore, when it is the Spirit that directs their movements: for they were not only ordained by the Spirit, but sent forth by Him likewise. And when they were come to Salamis, they preached the word of God in the synagogues of the Jews. Do you mark how they make a point of preaching the word to them first, not to make them more contentious? The persons mentioned before spake to none <sup>ch. 11,</sup> but to Jews only, and so here they betook them to the <sup>19.</sup> synagogues. And when they had gone through the isle unto <sup>v. 6—8.</sup> Paphos, they found a certain sorcerer, a false prophet, a Jew, whose name was Bar-jesus: which was with the deputy of the country, Sergius Paulus, a prudent man; who called for Barnabas and Saul, and desired to hear the

HOMIL. word of God. But Elymas the sorcerer (for so is his name XXVIII. by interpretation) withstood them, seeking to turn away the deputy from the faith. Again a Jew sorcerer, as was Simon.

- And observe this man, how, while they preached to the others, he did not take it much amiss, but only when they approached the proconsul. And then in respect of the proconsul the wonder is, that although prepossessed by the man's sorcery, he was nevertheless willing to hear the Apostles. So it was with the Samaritans: and from the <sup>1</sup>competition the victory appears, the sorcery being worsted. Everywhere, vainglory and love of power are a (fruitful) source of evils! But Saul, who is also Paul,—here his name is changed at the same time that he is ordained, as it was in Peter's case,—filled with the Holy Ghost, looked upon him, and said, O full of all guile and all villany, thou child of the devil: and observe, this is not abuse, but accusation: for so ought forward, impudent people to be rebuked: thou enemy of all righteousness; here he lays bare what was in the thoughts of the man, while under pretext of saving he was ruining the proconsul: wilt thou not cease, he says, to pervert the ways of the Lord? (He says it) both <sup>2</sup>confidently, It is not with us thou art warring, nor art thou fighting (with us), but the ways of the Lord thou art perverting, and with praise (of these, he adds) the right ways. And now, behold, the hand of the Lord is upon thee, and thou shalt be blind. It was the sign by which he was himself converted, and by this he would fain convert this man. As also that expression, for a season, puts it not as an act of punishing, but as meant for his conversion: had it been for punishment, he would have made him lastingly blind, but now it is not so, but for a season, (and this) that he may gain the proconsul. For, as he was prepossessed by the sorcery, it was well to teach him a lesson by this infliction, (and the sorcerer also,) in the same way as the magicians (in Egypt) were taught by the boils. And immediately there fell on him a mist and a darkness: and he went about seeking some to lead him by the hand. Then the deputy, when he saw what was done, believed, being astonished at the doctrine of the Lord. But observe, how they do not linger there, as (they might have been tempted to do) now that the proconsul was a believer, nor are enervated by being courted and honoured, but immediately keep on with their work, and set out for the country on the opposite coast. Now when Paul and his company loosed from Paphos, they came to Perga in Pamphylia; and John departing from them returned to Jerusalem. But when they departed from Perga, they came to Antioch in Pisidia, and went into the synagogue on the sabbath day, and sat down. And here again they entered the synagogues, in the character of Jews, that they might not be treated as enemies, and be driven away: and in this way they carried the whole matter successfully. And after the reading of the Law and the Prophets, the rulers of the synagogue sent unto them, saying, Ye men and brethren, if ye have any word of exhortation for the people, say on. From this point, we learn the history of Paul's doings, as in what was said above we have learned not a little about Peter. But let us review what has been said.

And when they were come to Salamis, the metropolis of Cyprus, they preached the word of God. They had spent a year in Antioch: it behoved that they should go hither also (to Cyprus), and not sit permanently where they were: (the converts in Cyprus) needed greater teachers. See too how they remain no time in Seleucia, knowing that (the people there) might have reaped much benefit from the neighbouring city (of Antioch): but they hasten on to the more pressing duties. When they came to the metropolis of the island, they were earnest to disabuse<sup>1</sup> the proconsul. But that it is no flattery that (the writer) says, he was with the proconsul, a prudent man, you may learn from the facts; for he needed not many discourses, and himself wished to hear them. And<sup>a</sup> he mentions also the names. * * * Observe, how he said nothing <sup>a</sup> Καὶ τὰ ὀνόματα δὲ λέγει· ἐπειδὴ προσφάτως ἔγραψεν δρα κ. τ. λ. A. B. C. N. Cat. It is not clear whether this relates to the two names, Barjesus and Elymas, (if so we might read ἔγραψεν, "since he wrote just before, [whose name was Barjesus, but now Elymas, for so is his name interpreted]), or to the change of the Apostle's name, Then Saul, who is also called Paul, (and then perhaps the sense of the latter clause may be, Since the change of name was recent: ἐπειδὴ προσφάτως μετεγράφη or the like.) The mod. t. substitutes, "But he also recites the names of the cities: shewing that since they had but recently received the word, there was need (for them) to be confirmed, to continue in the faith: for which reason also they frequently visited them."

 XXVIII. preached the word of the Lord. Since (though Elymas) saw the rest attending to them, he looked only to this one object, that the proconsul might not be won over. Why did not (Paul) perform some other miracle? Because there was none equal to this, the taking the enemy captive. And observe, he first impeaches, and then punishes, him. He shews how justly the
 v. 10. man deserved to suffer, by his saying, O full of all deceit: (full of all,) he says: nothing wanting to the full measure: and he well says, of all deceit, for the man was playing the part of a hypocrite.—Child of the devil, because he was doing his work:—enemy of all righteousness, since this (which they preached) was the whole of righteousness: (though at the same time,) I suppose in these words he reproves his manner of life. His words were not prompted by anger, and
 v. 11. to shew this, the writer premises, filled with the Holy Ghost, that is, with His operation. And now behold the hand of the Lord is upon thee. It was not vengeance then, but healing: for it is as though he said: “It is not I that do it, ch. 9, 3. but the hand of God.” Mark how unassuming! No light<sup>b</sup>, as in the case of Paul, shone round about him. Thou shalt be blind, he says, not seeing the sun for a season, that he may give him opportunity for repentance: for we nowhere find them wishing to be made conspicuous by the more stern (exercise of their authority), even though it was against ch. 5, 1 enemies that this was put forth: in respect of those of their
 ff. own body, (they used severity,) and with good reason, but in dealing with those without, not so; that (the obedience of faith) might not seem to be matter of compulsion and fear.
 It is a proof of his blindness, his seeking some to lead him by the hand. And* the proconsul sees the blindness inflicted,
 v. 12. [and when he saw what was done, he believed]: and both alone believed not merely this, but, being astonished [at the <sup>b</sup> Mod. t. omits this sentence. The connexion is: Paul inflicts this blindness upon him, not in vengeance, but in order to his conversion, remembering how the Lord Himself had dealt with him on the way to Damascus. But it was not here, as then—no light shone round about him from heaven.

doctrine of the Lord]: he saw that these things were not mere words, nor trickery. Mark how he loved to receive instruction from his teachers, though he was in a station of so high authority. And (Paul) said not to the sorcerer, Wilt thou not cease to pervert the proconsul<sup>d</sup>? What may be the reason of John's going back from them? For John, it v. 13. says, departing from them returned to Jerusalem: (he does it) because they are undertaking a still longer journey: and yet he was their attendant, and as for the danger, they incurred it, (not he.)—Again, when they were come to Perga, v. 14. 15. they hastily passed by the other cities, for they were in haste to the metropolis, Antioch. And observe how concise the historian is. They sat down in the synagogue, he says, and, on the sabbath day: that they might prepare the way beforehand for the Word. And they do not speak first, but when invited: since as strangers, they called upon them to do so. Had they not waited, there would have been no discourse. Here for the first time we have Paul preaching. And observe his prudence: where the word was already sown, he passes on: but where there was none (to preach), he makes a stay: as he himself writes: Yea, so have I strived to preach the Gospel, not where Christ was named. Great courage this also. Observe how wisely it is ordered that Paul should not preach at Jerusalem: the very hearing that he is become a believer, this of itself is enough for them; for him to preach, they never would have endured, such was their hatred of him: so he departs far away, where he was not

When Mark withdrew, Paul was not angry with him, knowing that the like grace was not bestowed on him, therefore neither could there be the like σπουδή on his part."

He first convicted the sorcerer, (and shewed) what he was ;

not seeing the sun :] this was a sign of the blindness of his

 But, oh that love of rule ! oh that lust of vainglory ! how it does overturn and ruin everything ; makes people stand up against their own, against each other's salvation ; renders them blind indeed, and dark, insomuch that they have even to seek for some to lead them by the hand ! Oh that they did even this, oh that they did seek were it but some to lead them by the hand ! But no, they no longer endure this, they take the whole matter into their own hands. (This vice) will let no

 For example, many who are both lewd and covetous, have for their niggardliness put a bridle upon their lust, while other such, on the contrary, have for pleasure's sake despised riches.
 Again, those who are both the one and the other, have by the lust of vainglory overcome both, lavishing their money unsparingly, and practising temperance to no (good) purpose ; others again, who are exceedingly vainglorious, have despised that evil affection, submitting to many vile disgraces for the sake of their amours, or for the sake of their money :
 others again, that they may satiate their anger, have chosen to suffer losses without end, and care for none of them, provided only they may work their own will. And yet, what passion can do with us, the fear of God is impotent to effect! Acts XIII.

Why speak I of passion? What shame before men can do with us, the fear of God has not the strength to effect! Many are the things we do, right and wrong, from a feeling of shame before men; but God we fear not. How many have been shamed by regard to the opinions of men into flinging away money! How many have mistakenly made it a point of honour to give themselves up to the service of their friends, (only) to their hurt! How many from respect for their friendships, have been shamed into numberless wrong acts! Since then both passion and regard for the opinion of men are able to put us upon doing wrong things and right, it is idle to say, 'we cannot:' we can, if we have the mind: and we ought to have the mind. Why canst not thou overcome the love of glory, when others do overcome it, having the same soul as thou, and the same body; bearing the same form, and living the same life? Think of God, think of the glory that is from above: weigh against that the things present, and thou wilt quickly recoil from this worldly glory. If at all events thou covet glory, covet that which is glory indeed. What kind of glory is it, when it begets infamy? What kind of glory, when it compels one to desire the honour of those who are inferior, and stands in need of that? Real honour is the gaining the esteem of those who are greater than oneself. If at all events thou art enamoured of glory, be thou rather enamoured of that which comes from God. If enamoured of that glory thou despisest this world's glory, thou shalt see how ignoble this is: but so long as thou seest not that glory, neither wilt thou be able to see this, how foul it is, how ridiculous. For as those who are under the spell of some wicked, hideously ugly woman, so long as they are in love with her, cannot see her illfavouredness, because their passion spreads a darkness over their judgment: so is it here also: so long as we are possessed with the passion, we cannot perceive what a thing it is. How then might we be rid of it? Think of those who (for the sake of glory) have spent countless sums, and now are none the better for

HOMIL. it<sup>1</sup>: think of the dead, what glory they got, and (now) this glory
xxviii. is nowhere abiding, but all perished and come to nought: bethink thee how it is only a name, and has nothing real in it. For say, what is glory? give me some definition.
 'The being admired by all,' you will say. With justice, or also not with justice? For if it be not with justice, this is not admiration, but <sup>1</sup>crimination, and flattery, and <sup>2</sup>misrepresentation. But if you say, With justice, why that is impossible: for in the populace there are no right judgments; those that minister to their lusts, those are the persons they admire. And if you would (see the proof of this), mark those who give away their substance to the harlots, to the charioteers, to the dancers. But you will say, we do not mean these, but those who are just and upright, and able to do great and noble good acts. Would that they wished it, and they would soon do good: but as things are, they do nothing of the kind. Who, I ask you, now praises the just and upright man? Nay, it is just the contrary. Could any thing be more preposterous than for a just man, when doing any such good act, to seek glory of the many—as if an artist of consummate skill, employed upon an Emperor's portrait, should wish to have the praises of the ignorant! Moreover, a man who looks for honour from men, will soon enough desist from the acts which virtue enjoins. If he will needs be gaping for their praises, he will do just what they wish, not what himself wishes. What then would I advise you?
 You must look only to God, to the praise that is from Him, perform all things which are pleasing to Him, and go after the good things (that are with Him), not be gaping for any thing that is of man: for this mars both fasting and prayer and almsgiving, and makes all our good deeds void. Which that it be not our case, let us flee this passion. To one thing alone let us look, to the praise which is from God, to the being accepted of Him, to the commendation from our

DOMESDAY BOOK.

DOMESDAY BOOK, or the Great Survey of England of William the Conqueror, A.D. M LXXXVI. Facsimile of Part relating to Oxfordshire. Folio, 8s.

This is an exact facsimile taken by means of Photography. The process is named by Sir Henry James,—Photosineography. The actual MS. of the Domesday Survey was by permission taken to the Ordnance Office at Southampton, where under the general superintendence of the Director of the Ordnance Survey the photograph was taken and transferred to zinc, from which the copies are printed. Thus the slightest mark in the original occurs in this facsimile.
